NEW YORK, April 20. (AP)—Would you call me a baseball fan if I admitted I had a little "thrill" . . . Recently when a spry, ageless Curtis accidentally shot himself when he was getting ready to leave Mexico City for New York and a big money shot against Willie Pep . . . Because he knew Curtis when he was in the Navy and Zale had to take a lot of advice from Curtis around California. . . . When he signed for a title bout with John Thomas, John was drafted right out of it, and Zuzita couldn't defend his crown against Jake Williams in Philadelphia because Pennsylvania recognizes Bob Montgomery as champ . . . So they took the scrap in Mexico City, where the payoff is in Pesos, and Ike flattened Juan in two rounds. . . . Meanwhile Williams was all but harpoon by Willie Joyce, who took a licking from modest Chalky Wright the day after Wright had been barred for life in Maryland for what Wright called Jackie Wilson. . . . And now week's left for that. . . . Cecil Montgomery-Williams bout proposed by Abe Greene?

Before the season's second game Leo Durocher told Ross Branch, Sheriff of the Dodgers that he'd not only give up that $1,000 bonus for playing the first 10 games but host he glad to give $2,000 to call off the deal.

Seattle Ironmen Now Leading Series

Seattle, April 20. (AP) — The Seattle Ironmen piled up four goals in the first period and coasted to a 5-2 victory over the Washington Lumberjacks in the fifth game of their best-of-seven series for the championship of the Pacific Coast Hockey League last night in the fifth game of their best-of-seven series for the mythical United States Amateur Hockey championship.

The win gave Seattle a 3-2 lead in the series. The sixth game will be played this Sunday and the seventh, if necessary, next Thursday.

MANAGER CRONIN BREAKS LEG IN TRYING STEAL

Benton Returns From Navy To Shutout Browns in First Start

By JACK HAND

Joe Cronin, Washington baseball manager has a broken leg.

He learned that fact when he appeared to be over today as Boston Red Sox opened their home season with their skipper sidelined by a fracture of the right leg. The accident occurred in his golden diamond anniversary game with the Browns in 1909 at Sportsman's Park, St. Louis.

Cronin, ending an ironic series of almost running Bobby Doerr, Tex Hughson, Skeeter Newsome and others, he had to figure on the team to fill his own shoes at the hot corner.

The Red Sox dropped their third in a row to the Yanks, 4-3, in a pre-season game climaxed by Mike Sylva's hitting Johnny Lindell with the bases loaded in the last of the ninth to force in the winning run.

Detroit had reason to cheer the return of Al Benton from the Navy as the experienced righthander shutout the St. Louis Browns, 2-0, with four hits, beating Nels Potter.

First doubleheader of the year, celebrating Patriot's Day in Boston, found the New York Giants splitting with Boston, winning the opener 4-3 for Andy Hansen and bowing to Jim Tobin and his flutterball 13-6, in the second.

Manager Mel Ott played the finale under protest after umpire Bill Stewart reversed a decision on Gordon Gillenwater who had been called out for having been hit by a batted ball.

The St. Louis Cardinals cut loose with 13 safe blows to back Harry Brecheen's hurling in scoring their first win of the year, 9-3 at Chicago's expense. Walker Cooper teamed he must report for army induction on April 30 and then resigned.

Pittsburgh got on the right side of the ledger for the first time with the help of Max Butcher's 5-1 job on Cincinnati.

BIRDS OUTWIT JANITOR

Milwaukee, April 20 — (AP) — John Messmer, courthouse custodian, plagued by pigeons, found a measure of relief by an invasion of starlings which drove the pigeons from the county building. Plagued by starlings, however, he greased their roosts and drove them away. Today, alas, the pigeons returned.

Overheard in a restaurant: "Waiter, bring me a bowl of bean soup, quick!"

"You don't have your bath in the bathroom," he said. "You just push a button and it comes out of the wall filled, rush into the bedroom, do your setting exercises, get dressed, push another button and it's gone. Let me show you." He showed her. "Now," he said, "watch carefully, I'll do it slowly." He did it slowly. It still took fifteen minutes.

Softball Billings.

Considerable enthusiasm was registered at Wednesday night's meeting in reorganizing the Belleville Men's Softball League when Commissioner Harry Billings of the city parks board, announced that August body was negotiating to have floodlights installed for softball at the Fair Grounds....Of course, this announcement didn't affect the 1945 schedule which might explain why the Belleville Intermediate "A" softball club is being declared out of the Ameliste Field in East Belleville.....President Joe Samuels says he will personally contact interested people in order to procure a sponsor for junior softball in Belleville....With the Columbian Squires all caught up with sponsoring softball locally, the Juniors were not officially represented Wednesday night....However, No. 6 Repair Depot, with a senior "B" squad, is anxious to play in the Belleville loop despite the fact they are not eligible for O.A.S.A./ provincial playdowns in the event of winning....The same would apply to the Mountain View "Bombers" in the event they seek entry....However, Skipper Max Popple (RACO "Marines" are ready to go after taking on the better part of last year's O.N.S. mushbellers/to fill the gap left in last year's champion roster....That perennial entry from Point Anne is the other entry.....Privy Samuels hopes to elect officers next Wednesday....On the leader side of softball is Glad Chacko Mortimer of Peterborough re-elected president of the Ontario Women's Softball Union.....President Edda Richford and Secretary Dave Batchelor, of the local pale loop, still have the question of affiliation with the O.W.S.U. to consider at their next meeting....The provincial association voted to allow former professional women softballers to be accepted back into amateur ranks without question....After an absence of three years the Northern Ontario leader are returning to the provincial fold this year....Remember when Chas Silver played here in provincial competition on two occasions long before the war?

The Babe Grew Up.

George Herman (Babe) Ruth, former king of the circuit swatters, is now a grandfather. Mrs. Claire Ruth, wife of the Babe's son, George Jr., presented her husband with a baby girl, Julia Ann, at Doctors Hospital, Tuesday and drew the usual congratulations from the proud father.

The Babe was asked how he liked the grunt-groan-and-grimace game. "Why, I remember when I was down on my knees in the on-deck circle and I'd hear the umpire say, 'Batter up!' and I'd grunt and groan and grimace for five minutes. I could hardly get up to bat."

"And then," he said, "I'd look at Seldom Seen and say, 'Let's get this over with.'"

Maybe when the weather gets a little warmer Babe will be able to play on personal "Babe" softball teams. Or maybe he'll be given the honorary portfolio of the baseball commissioner, if baseball ever gets one. Or maybe he'll be around Detroit Wednesday night to please the fans.

Did You Know.

The owners of Yankee Stadium are said to have a post-war plan in mind to double-deck the park so that 100,000 people could be accommodated for baseball and football games....Pitcher Rip Sewell, the Pittsburgh baseball artist, is one of baseball's top golfers...He doesn't bloop them off the tee....Pitcher Hod Lisenbee, assistant athletic of the Cincinnati Reds by informing Bill Klem of the rule and not of a listed in the club's roster....A 45-inch genius will be found on the players on the club finishing on top in the National Soccer Association season....The same sun will go to the members of the club winning the Military service of the sons of Jimmy Wilson, former manager of the Cubs and current manager of the Tigers.

JOHNNY KELLEY WINS MARATHON IN SLOW TIME

Scotty Rankin of Preston Ran Fourth and Ab Morton of Toronto South

(By BILL KING)

Boston, April 30. (AP)— At 27 and after 13 tries, little Johnny Kelley of West Acton, Mass., today placed over his marathoning masterpiece—his second — Boston — A.A. triumph in a decade with a carefully plotted 2:30.40 1-4 performance.

Since his first win in 1936, Kelley has competed annually in the 26 mile-385 yards classic.

The only former winner in yesterday's starting field of 66, Kelley defeated his nearest rival, Lloyd Bairstow of the United States Navy, by about a third of a mile. Kelley paced himself perfectly every inch of the long and cruel journey.

Kelley's time was about four minutes slower than the course record that the Bowdoin College runner clocked in 2:26.40 as he finished over a hilly route ahead of the third pacer, Baltimore's capable Don Kolloway.

The others in the First 10, in order, were Robert (Scotty) Rankin of Preston, Ont.; Ab Morton of Montreal, Charlie Robbins, from the nearby Chelsea, Naval Hospital; Louis Young and Tony Madeiros, both of Medford, Johnny Mangold of the Sampson, N.Y., naval station, and AB Morton of Toronto.

Detroit Wings Rip Home Two Third-Period Goals to Beat Leafs for Second Straight Time

Flash Hollett and Joe Carveth Mark Record in Game That Had Few Thrills

By FRANK KENESSON

Detroit, April 30 — (AP) — The Stanley Cup finals were dear to its conflict with the baseball season today after Detroit Red Wings staved off elimination with a 2-0 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs before Thursday night, sending the series into a sixth game Saturday at Toronto.

Red Wings, blanked by goalie Frank McCool in the first three games of the cup finals, ripped home two third-period goals before 13,395 hoard fans in taking their second straight victory and further prolonging play-off play which got under way scarcely a month ago.

Both surviving clubs were schedulled to board an afternoon train for Toronto today, arriving there less than 24 hours before Saturday night's sixth game. If the Red Wings further lengthen the play-offs a seventh game will be played here Sunday.

Maple Leafs, who retain a 6-4 edge in points in the series, could clinch the cup by winning the next clash.

Dependable veteran defenceman, Bill (Flash) Hollett, broke up a 45-minute scoreless deadlock last night with a perfect shot were aided by McCool for the goal that spelled Detroit's triumph. Joe Carveth tallied.

Carveth and Eddie Bruneteau teamed to set up the Wings' second score eight minutes later, the pair bearing down on McCool together as Carveth fielded a pass and poked in a shot from left wing. Defenceman Bill Quackenbush got an assist on the play.

Earlier in the game the Red Wings missed two scoring chances when Ed Bruneteau's 30-footer bounced off a post and rookie forward Ted Lindsay blew a shot from point-blank range.

Toronto, previously relying on an alert defensive game, had more shots on goal than Detroit, dirtied when goalie Harry Lumley 22 saves to McCool's 15. Lumley stood up well under a late barrage of Maple Leaf shots to record his first shutout of the final series.

Physical Training Display at 'Y' Well Received

Proud parents filled the galleries at the Y.M.C.A. last evening to observe the training their children had gained in physical education, as a galaxy of Belleville's youth went through their annual display of physical training and calisthenics with precision and pep, a display under the direction of J. E. Short, the association secretary.

Outstanding in the night's performance was a display of physical athletics on the parallel bars, Roman rings and high bar by the "Y" senior class that included Geo. Garrow, Grant Locke, Gordon Robertson, Jack Campbell, Billy Anderson, George Locke, Bill McMurter and Yoshi Hatsuda.

In a grand parade, physical instructor Mr. Short arraigned the entire ensemble of youthful athletes in review during which W. H. Finkle president of the Y.M.C.A. welcomed the attending public.

The "Y" Prep boys, under George Garrow gave a splendid display of mat tumbling, which was followed by a demonstration of precision marching and pyramids by a class of B.C.I. athletes under the direction of Rosser Townsend, physical director. The "Y" Prep girls exercise was under the direction of Margaret Taylor, who also executed a healthy exercise for the junior girls on the horse and bar.

Bader Wants Another Squirt at Bloody Hun

By DON WHITEHEAD

Colditz, Germany, April 30 — (AP)— Gay, debonair Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, famed legless pilot of the R. A. F. who was shot down over France 2 1-2 years ago, wants almost at all to "get another crack at the bloody Hun," now that he is free from German captivity.

"Just give me an ME-109 and I'll show goons," begged the 36-year-old flighter pilot who became one of Britain's great aces with two artificial legs—"I'll never be satisfied until I do."

The laughing, dark-haired hero built up during his prison life an abiding hatred of the German people and a burning thirst for revenge for indignities heaped on him since he was captured in August, 1941, after his plane collided with another.

He was one of 1,000 or so Liberated Monday from the great, Gray Colditz Castle fortress the Germans sent Allied captives who would not submit to imprisonment elsewhere.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 581
By SAM GORDON
The Bridge Expert

In my Model Series (not for amateurs) bridge book, it tells:

A once-bid (biddable) suit shows four cards (or more); a twice-bid suit has four cards. On the reverse round, you bid diamonds. Partner assumes you have four hearts and four diamonds.

With some length suits, first bid the higher suit; with different length suits, first bid the longer when one is at least two cards longer, bid it twice before the other.

Notice that a twice-bid suit must be at least two cards longer, bid it twice before the other. It means you show a six card; and a four carder if you bid any suit twice in a row and then any other suit once.

In a case like that you show not less than six cards in a suit that you have bid only twice. And earlier words say a twice-bid suit shows six cards or more. Oh, how do you show five and four?

Take a hand like this:

♠9
♥A Q J 10 8
♣K 6 2

With that hand your first bid is hearts. Partner assumes your heart suit has four cards. On the reverse round, you bid diamonds. Partner assumes you have four hearts and four diamonds.

On the third round, you bid hearts again. Partner now knows you have exactly five hearts and four diamonds. The full rule helps him.

Having bid hearts twice, you announce that suit is rebiddable; at least five cards. It is not six cards long. Because if it was, you would have rebid hearts before mentioning your diamond suit.

There you have it. Rebid a suit before showing another suit to promise six or more each suit before rebidding the first suit to show five and four.

It is all in the way you say it.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 12

"It wasn't the American Shell Company that sold P.D. (Mr. 45-46) to Modern Surgeries, but an entirely different firm—Salka of Prague (or Imperial Explosives of London or what have you). Odd they should both have the same formula—but we all know research chemists often make identical discoveries quite independently of each other. . . .

In the morning, Inspector Foyle had the letter from Susy Cunningas and the munitions report on his desk.

"I thought Danine was crowding the mourners a bit, doc," Foyle said to Basil, "when I got that cable from Scotland Yard saying she'd been plastered around with this Susy What's-Her-Name 'this minute'—after he met Kitty last summer. Didn't you say that chemist was used in making distillers?"

"Yes. The P. probably stands for picric acid, and the 'D' for distillate, phenol, or thereof. There's evidently, thirty per cent of one and sixty per cent of the other—and then ten per cent of some third ingredient—a secret. I don't indicated. Even if Danine didn't bring any chemicals with him from Europe, he could have got them all along in the laboratories of the Kay-Jo-Anne Shell Company."

As Basil entered his own office a few moments later, Sobel's secretary said, "The D.A. wants you to see Edgar Jocelyn. He is waiting."

Jocelyn was obviously in a bad temper. "This is my lawyer, Mr. Gillespie," He nodded toward a tall bleak individual, who made no effort to hide his passive disapproval of the whole scene. Basil left them down the corridor.

"See here, Dr. Willing," Edgar burst out as soon as they were alone. "Am I under suspicion for the murder of my father?"

"You are no more under suspicion than every one else who was at that cocktail party," answered Basil.

"Well, I call it damnable, sir! Damnable! Here I am a respectable citizen and I suppose being followed about by a greasy detective as if I were a criminal—and all because Danine thought you psychiatrists had be detectors! Why don't you test me with one and prove my innocence that way?"

"I have no be detector here," answered Basil. "In my opinion there is no be detector yet invented that can prove with scientific certainty whether a man is lying or not. Of course, there is Jung's free association time test," he added. "You would help our investigation by taking it."

Gillespie, Jocelyn, do you think it prudent?" pleaded Gillespie.

Edgar laid his hat and gloves on the table. "What do you want me do?"

"Please sit down and wait a few minutes."

Basil hurried into the outer office and prepared a list of a hundred words with the aid of his stenographer, Miss Blount. He came to his own office, and began adjusting a rather complex mechanism.

"As each stimulus word is shown you this apparatus registers, for us, you are to answer with the first reaction word that comes into your mind—no matter what it is. The machine is placed in an electric circuit controlled by a lip key and attached to a chronoscope. Your spoken reaction word breaks the circuit and stops the chronoscope. In that way, the chronoscope records exactly the time you take to reply in thousandths of a second."

"Diabolical!" The traditions of the bar were tottering before Gillespie's eyes.

"If any of your reaction words come more slowly than your average reaction time, it will mean one of two things: either you have repressed the first word that came into your mind and substituted another with intent to deceive, or the stimulus word had some special emotional significance for you. You will be unable to control your reaction time consciously, because no one is conscious of a hesitation that lasts only a few thousandths of a second. Studying such an intellectual time-reaction is like getting a microscopic view of the thought process."

"Diabolical!" repeated Gillespie.

As Basil placed a chair for Edgar, he wondered if he were diabolical." For he had not told either of them the real purpose of this test. One way to ascertain a man's knowledge of any given subject, such as chemistry, is to find out what words he associates spontaneously with its technical terms.

Edgar grasped both arms of his chair and settled at the apparatus. Basil switched on the current. The stimulus words began to flash into view. Edgar responded brusquely, as a man who wants to get an unpleasant business finished quickly.

"Solvent." "Bankrupt!" "Volatile." "Fader." "Fader!" "Rachel!" "Reduce." "Scales!" "Oil." "Stock!" "Market."

"I don't know what that word means." "The other words are simpler. But please don't stop to comment."

Basil readjusted the mechanism and the test went on:

"Poison."

"Upon my word!" cried Gillespie. "This is ridiculous!"

"I know what I'm about, Gillespie," insisted Edgar.

The lawyer returned to his first attitude of passive disapproval, until one hundred reaction words had been given.

"Thank you, Mr. Jocelyn," said Basil. "Your cooperation has been most helpful."

"Is that all?" Edgar looked as if he were only just beginning to realize the possibilities latent in such a simple—"I see. Some good will come of all this mumbo-jumbo!"

As soon as he was alone, Basil made a preliminary analysis, and the result was so interesting, that he decided to take it to Foyle at once.

Foyle sat behind his desk. In front of him were two chairs occupied by Sergeant Samson and Minna Hagen. Samson leaned forward, munching ugly red pralines in his eyes.

"Come on! Spill it! We got the goods on you, toots, as you're gona burn! Your fingerprints was on that X-Why bottle. You done it!"

"Now, doc," began Foyle in a conciliatory tone.

"Please tell you why Minna Hagen's fingerprints were on that X-Why bottle," said Basil, "but I prefer to do so without the assistance of Sergeant Samson."

"You can suspects you of murder."

"But we want to hear just how and why you took the X-Why tablets from the bottle in Mrs. Jocelyn's bathroom cupboard."

"You—you know?"

"Yes."

I d—didn't mean any harm!" she wailed. "I only took one at a time and I put them back in a day or many. I found the bottle in the wastebasket in Mrs. Jocelyn's sitting-room the day it came. I thought Mrs. Jocelyn or Miss Kitty must have thrown it out by mistake. So I put it in her bathroom cupboard. And then—I saw what it said on the bottle: 'Science Says X-Why Is the Sure Way to Reduce'— and everybody laughs at me and they call me 'Fatty.' So I —I took one. And the next day I—took another—and Mrs. Jocelyn never said anything about it, and then—Before I knew it, I'd taken half the bottle. I did want to be like Miss Kitty—she was lovely —just like a fairy—"

"Why didn't you tell the police all this when they questioned you about your fingerprints on the bottle?"

"I saw in the papers that Miss Kitty had been poisoned with X-Why and I was sure the cops were trying to frame her, the way they frame people in the movies."

"How did you get on with X-Do?" asked Foyle after Minna had gone.

"By applying another theory of Dr. Dudley Schoenfield's," Basil spoke lightly. "He regards the concept of fear as the stimulus and the crime as reaction. Then he asks the question: what human type would react by flight to the stimulus of these X-Why tablets? The answer was the guilty—and—no one else was fat, some one who couldn't afford to buy X-Why, some one with access to Rhoda Jocelyn's bathroom, some one who wasn't very intelligent and couldn't resist the suggestive power of slogans and the lure of a 'handsome, modernistic bottle.' Only one person met all these requirements—Minna Hagen, the housemaid whose fingerprints were found on the bottle, who had a high color and who complained that her food tasted 'bad.' You doubtless recall Dr. Lambert's telling us that small daily doses of arsenic cause a high color and an unnatural sense of taste? Of course it was the yellow tassel of the X-Why bottle dangling out of your own coat pocket that frightened her. She thought we'd found out all about her 'stealing' then."

Basil dropped his bantering manner. "I only mention to apply the same method of deduction to the murder."

Foyle looked up. "You mean—Kitty Jocelyn was the stimulus?"

"And the murderer was the reaction. Which of our suspects would react to such a stimulus with murder?"

"Do you mean who would profit by such a murder? We've been using that method to solve crimes for years!"

"No, Dr. Schoenfeld's question is not a simple one. He doesn't ask: Whom does this crime benefit? He asks: What psychological type would be gratified emotionally by this type of crime? The method then is that a crime is committed primarily for emotional satisfaction. When there's payment of gain, it's secondary—the occasion rather than the cause of the crime."

"Here's a report of Edgar Jocelyn's association test," Basil said to Inspector Foyle and explained what he had been doing. "When I read the list to Edgar Jocelyn he reacted to all the chemical words and raises clearly characteristic of his own average rate of association time. That means he didn't try to deceive me when he responded to those chemical words. He really knows about 'solvent' and 'bankrupt' and 'reduce' with 'scales.'"

"I suppose that means he was telling the truth when he said he was a business man and not a chemist."

"Evidently. A chemist's first reaction to the word 'solvent' would almost certainly be associated with chemical solubility. Edgar automatically assumed the financial meaning of the word as shown by the response of 'bankrupt.' Fader would most likely associate the word 'fader' with the decolorizing process. Edgar associated it with dimming and the word 'scales.' A chemist would be liable to think of 'oil' as a noun and a chemical classification. Edgar 'felt' oil as an adjective and reacted with 'stock'—typical business man's reaction. He even 'mistook' the common chemical term 'ester' for a misspelling of the proper name 'Esther' and reacted with 'Rachel.' He was the same throughout a list of words that included fifty chemical terms, with only one exception—'volatile.' That word would suggest human frivolity and flickleness to most laymen, but Edgar associated the chemical meaning and associated the word with 'fade'—the fading of cloth dyed with a volatile substance. Apparently his knowledge is limited to the smattering of dye trade terms he's picked up in his business. And he has been able to recognize thermos as an industrial name for 'Dewar flask.'"

"As far as it goes, that sort of lets him out, doesn't it?" mused Foyle. He studied the report for a moment, and then thrust it into his pocket. "I'll find it at lunch-eon."

A red chalk drawing with a split frame of carved, unpainted wood. Peacock's preparation-cache.

A platinum ring set with a rose diamond. Leach's mother's ring, which he had given to Kitty.

A half empty bottle of X-Why.

A filthy old khaki raincoat.

"It was just where he said it was," explained Foyle. "Under the bushes at the back of the house—fairdast from the stairs on the third floor."

"Ah!"

"Elmer Judson. The gate-crasher."

Photographs of Kitty Jocelyn's dead body and rooms in the Jocelyn house.

Last of all there was a huge file of typewritten manuscript—statements of witnesses and reports of detectives making up the official police record of the case.

Foyle rose to go over this file. "I'll be back in an hour or so," he said. "Basil."

Basil sat at Foyle's desk, and studied each of the exhibits in turn. Then he took up the file of manuscript. It was almost book length now.

HERO

the French coast town and remained behind, a wounded prisoner-of-war.

The official citation said "When last seen he was collecting Bren guns, ammunition and preparing a defensive position which successfully covered the withdrawal from the beach."

It drew a picture of a young officer, unconcerned by his peril, by fire, leading his men across a hillside, by day, destroying a German 88 box single handed and organizing attacks, and finally by night, by day and finally becoming a one-man defence against the enemy.

Lieut. Comfort's parents live in Toronto.

First news of his award came to Col. Merritt in the prison camp where a high-ranking German officer told him he had been awarded the Victoria for highest honor, salluted, and shook hands in congratulation.

In a letter home, Col. Merritt simply said: "I have just learned something about myself."

He also referred more to the bravery of the men of the South Saskatchewan regiment than to his own exploits.

While confined in Oflag 7B in Germany, Col. Merritt shared a room for some time with Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, legless R.A.F. ace whose wooden legs announced several days ago. At the time of Bader's release in May, he definitely known whether they had remained in the camp.

During his term as a prisoner Col. Merritt made three unsuccessful attempts to escape.

Toronto, April 20.—(CP)—H. L. Lane, manager of the Cheese Producers' Association, said Thursday in Ontario, producers will suffer a catastrophe "if the provincial subsidy is not paid."

He was commenting on a statement by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario minister of Agriculture, that subsidies on cheese and wool had been supported to the extent of $4 a head, of the dissolution of the Ontario Legislature before necessary bills could be passed.

"Ontario farmers produce 66 per cent of all the cheese in Canada and the subsidy was brought forward three years ago to stimulate war production," Mr. Jost said.

He said the subsidy means half a million dollars annually to Ontario farmers.

RAWDON

Class Honors Mr., Mrs. Seeley, Recently Wedded

Rawdon—The spacious home of Mrs. Wanda Beckett, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Beckett was the scene of a happy gathering recently when Wellman's Whiz-a-long Sunday School class honored Mr. and Mrs. Byron Seeley on the occasion of their marriage with about twenty in attendance. The bride, formerly Miss Bernice Dunham, has always been a member of the class and the groom was a member during his sojourn at Plum-Grove Cheese Factory as cheesemaker. The house was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and the archway in the home was specially decorated for the occasion. During the evening the bride and groom occupied seats of honor underneath the arch.

Miss Eleanor Graham, contributed a piano solo.

Mrs. Burton Morton conducted an interesting contest in "Kitchen Utensils".

Rev. T. F. Townsend and Miss M. Dracup conducted several games.

The gifts were nicely arranged on a swell table under a pink and white umbrella. At the junction of the table was placed in front of the bride and groom and Mr. Maurice Clancy read an address of appreciation. The happy couple unwrapped the gifts and were the recipients of a dozen fancy cups and saucers. Both graciously replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and the delightful evening and invited the class members to visit them in their new home at Bonarlaw.

Sandwiches and chocolate cakes were served also the bride's cake had been baked in a ring mold, iced in pink and decorated with red sugar. Partners for supper were found by matching fortunes. A social half hour was enjoyed and the Beckett family thanked for hospitality.

Take Steps to Prevent Duplication of Benefits Under Family Bonuses

Ottawa, April 30 —(CP)— Temporary steps have been taken to prevent income tax payers from receiving in full both income tax exemptions and family allowance payments during the last six months of 1943, Finance Minister Ilsley announced yesterday.

Mr. Ilsley said the amount of duplication to be removed would be twenty cent on a percentage basis for this year while drawing up of permanent legislation to prevent duplication would be left to the next session of parliament. The allowance becomes effective July 1

Under the temporary plan, persons with taxable income ranging from $1,200 to $3,000 annually would receive some benefit, from the allowances in addition to the tax credits for children, Mr. Ilsley said.

The Minister said the result of removing duplication would be as follows:

1. Heads of families with incomes of $1,200 a year and under will benefit to the extent of the full amount of the family allowances they receive and there is no duplication to remove.

2. Heads of families with incomes in excess of $3,000 a year will be allowed to retain their full income tax credits for children if they do not receive family allowances. These taxpayers may, however, apply for family allowances to protect themselves against a possible decrease in income later in the year which might bring them into a lower income range where they would benefit from family allowances. For persons with incomes in excess of $3,000 who receive family allowances the income tax credits for children will be reduced by the full amount of family allowances received.

3. For heads of families receiving incomes in 1943 of more than $1,200 but not more than $2,000 a year the amount of family allowances received will be greater and in most cases much greater than the adjustment in their income tax which is necessary to eliminate duplication of benefit.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 30. (CP)—Because the Irish section of the City of Ottawa Typhoon squadron based in Holland, bombed three plane out of the German railway near Bonkum, the remainder of the squadron was able to play havoc with some 90 goods trucks passed in the marshalling yards there.

With bombs and cannon the planes destroyed 16 locomotives and damaged two, destroyed a large motor truck and damaged trackage in the sidings.

The first three aircraft got three cuts north of Bonkum and there didn't seem much point in the rest of us going down, so we bombed the yards, said F/L. (A. Harry Hardy of (6 Power Ave.) Thumins, Ont. The whole squadron went down on about 30 bursts. Then we got a radio report of another train at Dulmen so we took that on, too—blew up the engine and three cars".

F/O. Francis Pearson of Canmore and Calgary, reported a big explosion on one side of the tracks which seems to have been in a steam plant of some kind.

Other fliers on the raid were F/O. Dunning Waller of (1126 14th Ave. W) Vancouver and F/O. Robert Gregory of (145 Osgood St.) Ottawa.

Two German tanks and nearly a dozen armored vehicles were destroyed by the City of Westmount fighter squadron in an attack northwest of Schoty, on an apparently abandoned section of railway.

F/O. Hugh Fraser of (62 Stephen Ave.) Westmount, Que., led his section into the attack against the parked tanks.

"I know I destroyed one and damaged a second", Fraser said. F/L. Lt. George Crichton, intelligence officer from (326 Kingswood Rd.) Toronto, informed the pilots later that rocket-firing Typhoons had completed destruction of the convoy.

Sgt. J. Pollock of (Houghton Ave. S.) Hamilton, Ont., gunner with an R.A.F. Lancaster squadron, recently shot down a German night-fighter when his aircraft was on a mine-laying mission.

After two bursts the enemy plane burst into flames and fell burning into the sea.

"Half an hour before his tour of operations was to end, Flt. Lt. Neil C. Hall, D.F.C., gunner with an R.A.F. Lancaster squadron, recently shot down a German night-fighter when his aircraft was on a mine-laying mission.

What every housewife should know... about SUGAR FOR CANNING

For tasty, nourishing and economical winter desserts, most Canadian housewives will again do some preserving this year . . . jams, jellies and all kinds of fresh fruits.

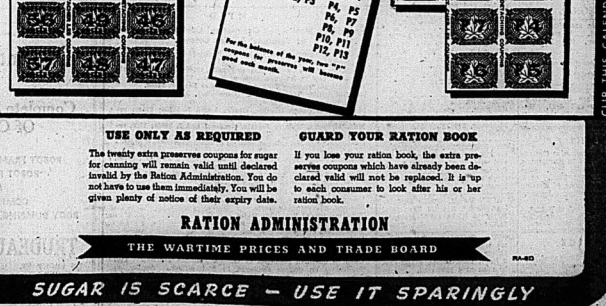
Sugar is still very scarce. We must continue to conserve our supplies.

This year, the allowance for home canning will be the same as in 1944—ten pounds per person. Be sure to use your ration sparingly.

HOW YOU GET SUGAR FOR CANNING

Instead of special home canning sugar coupons, twenty extra preserves coupons in Ration Book No. 3 are being made available for the purchase of sugar for canning.

These coupons are good for half a pound of sugar each or the stated value in commercial preserves, for they are the same as any of your preserves coupons.



You may use any other valid preserves coupons to purchase sugar, also at half a pound each.

No exchange is necessary. Your grocer will accept any valid preserves coupons when you purchase sugar for canning.

There are now only two kinds of coupons for sugar. The regular sugar coupon, good for one pound of sugar; and the preserves coupon, worth half a pound of sugar.

MASSIVE RUSSIAN FORCE ENVELOPING BERLIN 3RD ARMY SMASHES TOWARD PRAGUE, PILSEN

American and Red Patrols Within 40 Mi. of Link-up

Hun Tottering on Threshold Of Defeat Says Eisenhower

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 21 (AP) — U.S. 3rd Army troops, smashing into Czechoslovakia, were within 40 miles today of a drive toward the munitions cities of Pilsen and Prague. At the same time Moscow dispatches declared Soviet and American patrols were but 35 miles apart south of Berlin. A junction on the Elbe 75 miles south of the Nazi capital was believed imminent.

The last word at Allied supreme headquarters put the two forces within 40 miles of a link-up as Gen. Eisenhower declared the German armies of the west were "tottering on the threshold of defeat."

Three Allied armies—the French 1st and the U.S. 7th and 3rd, —hammered southward toward the Nazis' Bavarian-Austrian redoubt, and fourth within 70 miles of Munich and 30 from Lake Constance.

Gen. Patch's 7th army pressed Czech border to fall to 3rd Army units fighting to cut off the redoubt defenders 75 miles farther south. Each is 80 miles from Pilsen, ranked Army troops farther south in Grafenwerh were 56 miles from Pilsen and 120 from Prague.

Prague Congratulated.

Field Marshal Alexander in a message of congratulation to the victorious troops said:

"Let us keep driving forward until the last enemy soldier has been driven from Italy."

Gen. Mark W. Clark, Allied ground commander, said his 15th Army Group now stands "ready to the gateway to the Po plain poised to destroy the German forces coming to enslave and exploit northern Italy."

The fall of the city of 270,000, which had blocked Allied troops for months, came quickly after the 3rd Army troops had severed the important Nuremberg-Regensburg line northwest of the city yesterday.

There was no indication of any general withdrawal in the face of Gen. Devers' thrusts, however, although considerable enemy movement was reported north and northwest of Munich.

Casclecchio was entered by South African troops who blazed their way along the mountainous terrain approaching that outer fortress of Bologna.

Gen. Eisenhower quickened his drive to crush the Nazis in Austria where the Germans may make their last great stand—the northern portion and the southern redoubt.

British in Nerves.

British 3rd Army armor plunged into the outskirts of Zeven, 20 miles northwest of Bremen, in a drive to encircle the river port, and also cut the main road to Bremen south of Zeven.

The Canadian Army inland fled a drive on the naval ports of Emden and Wilhelmshaven against bitter opposition. Troops of Gen. Crerar captured Aschendorf on the railway to Emden, and Lathen, 10 miles to Papenburg, 30 south of Emden.

The Canadians also captured three boat yards along their Grebbe Line in Holland guarding the great cities of Utrecht, Amsterdam, The Hague, and Rotterdam, but Canadians stirring the flood pushed to within a mile north of Amersfoort, 12 miles east of Utrecht. Fighting on that dike units were within three miles of Driebil, port on the Ems estuary opposite Emden.

Third Army units besides seizing each advanced to within 30 miles to 35 miles to the south, and Frederick 36 miles northeast, also pushing through lightly-defended road-block. Nuendorf 36 miles south of each was cleared.

Far behind the front the French tri-color flew over the Nazi shoe house on the tip of captured Pointe de Grave, 3 miles northeast of Royan, top of the long-blockaded French port of Bordeaux.

On-rushing Tempo Implied.

The fact that headquarters was able to predict an imminent link-up with the Russians was seen as an indication of the closeness of co-ordination between Eisenhower's command and Red ground armies emanating from the east.

ALLIED TROOPS TAKE BOLOGNA IN ALL-OUT DRIVE

Capture of City Eliminates Nazi Defence Position South of Po River

Rome, April 21—(AP)— Bologna, first major objective of the all-out Allied offensive in northern Italy fell today to troops of the 5th and 8th armies.

Polish troops of the British 8th Army under Maj.-Gen. Bohusay-Ska and the United States 88th and 34th divisions all entered the historic Italian university city on the southern edge of the Po valley at the foot of the Appennines.

With Bologna captured the major German defence position south of the Po river was eliminated, and the enemy once again moved northward.

Troops Congratulated.

Field Marshal Alexander in a message of congratulation to the victorious troops said:

"Let us keep driving forward until the last enemy soldier has been driven from Italy."

Gen. Mark W. Clark, Allied ground commander, said his 15th Army Group now stands "ready to the gateway to the Po plain poised to destroy the German forces coming to enslave and exploit northern Italy."

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS HIT BERLIN SIX TIMES IN NIGHT

51,385,550 Pounds of High Explosives Are Dumped in City In The Past Year

London, April 21 (CP)—R.A.F. Mosquitos set a record for bombing Berlin last night, hitting the besieged capital's six times as the climax of a day-long blitz on German railways by more than 300 planes.

American bombers were busy each afternoon today for the ninth successive day.

The six times were the most Berlin ever had been raided in one night before, and the Mosquitos made without loss of a single aircraft brought to 76 the number of raids on Berlin in the last 49 nights.

More than 600 United States heavies yesterday slammed 1,000 tons of bombs on seven key outposts of the city. Once more yesterday, within Berlin's limits in 19 attacks, since March 4, they

1,000 Participate in Raids.

Probably more than 1,000 Mosquitos participated in the day and night raids. Each plane carries a 2,000-pound bomb—the heaviest with virtually as big an explosive charge as a German fighting bomb.

While British raiders were hammering the western and central parts of the German capital, Flying Fortress bombers were smashing defences at the city's eastern outskirts by the light of flares and artillery fire.

Allied pilots dealt the German air force another heavy blow yesterday, destroying one of Hitler's planes—84 on the ground and 28 in aerial combat—last bowing to 2,186 the number knocked out in the last five days.

The day's fighter scores also included 100 freight cars and 200 motor vehicles destroyed or damaged.

Canadian Typhoon pilots reported sinking a 2,000 ton German ship and damaging a 5,000 ton cruiser in the Wilhelmshaven harbor.

We Must and Shall Build A World Organization Free and Open to All —Churchill

By ALEC SINGLETON

Bristol, England, April 21—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill declared today "A world organization which we must build and shall build will be free and open to all the nations of the world."

Speaking only a few days before the opening of the World Security Conference at San Francisco, Britain's wartime leader asserted that "Hitler, and Hitler alone, has made justice with one another," thus envisaging the ultimate inclusion of even powerful countries in a world peace organization.

He added significantly: "There must be always the necessary force to restrain aggression."

Canada Is Hit.

Mr. Churchill said that as far as Europe is concerned "we are coming to the end of the long journey," but added that the defeat of Japan

It was just four years ago today that Mr. Churchill last came to Bristol. Then he arrived immediately after a heavy bombing, bringing to Britain's wasting people a single-sentence message: "Carry on and all will be well."

The Prime Minister declared:

"We have no intention of encouraging any festivities of thanksgiving until we are assured from our military commanders that the task is so far complete that everyone can feel safe."

Slave to Finish Japan

"We have the Japanese to finish, and we stand absolutely with our United States-American ally, paying of the other end of the world debts as heavy as ever were inflicted on us.

"I shall have to ask you, or who ever stands in my place — and, who it may be, I shall support him—we shall have to ask you for a new leap forward, for a new lifting of the soul and body so that this second task, which is certainly the harder, can be accomplished."

It was just four years ago today that Mr. Churchill last came to Bristol. Then he arrived immediately after a heavy bombing, bringing to Britain's wasting people a single-sentence message: "Carry on and all will be well."

CANADA'S EIGHTH VICTORY LOAN OPENS MONDAY

Army of Workers Ready to Start Subscriptions for $1,350,000,000

Ottawa, April 21 (CP)—An army of workers will swing into action Monday—opening day of Canada's Eighth Victory Loan campaign—with the object of obtaining a minimum of $1,350,000,000, a Dominion-wide "blitz" start of $450,000,000 above the objective of $1,350,000,000 in the Seventh Loan, completed last Autumn.

In the forthcoming loan the minimum objective sought from individuals is $750,000,000 and $75,000,000 over the quota sought from individuals in the Seventh Loan. Increased objectives have been placed upon the sale of bonds to individuals, National War Finance Committee officials said.

In the Seventh Loan, total sales amounted to $1,571,000,000, of which $788,000,000 in bonds were purchased by individuals.

During the last few months intensive organizational work has been carried out in each of the 60 loan units throughout Canada, and the units are making every effort to increase the number of applications for bonds, it was said. The Eighth Loan amounted to about 2,300,000, organizations, but figures show that an even more intensive payroll canvass. Of an estimated 1,600,000 workers, 100,000 have been appointed in industrial plants to carry out the canvass and 50,000 volunteers are to obtain applications for bonds through dedicating from their pay envelopes.

The canvass of the armed services overseas started April 8 and War Finance Committee officials said early reports indicate a heavy bond purchase. Total sales to armed services overseas during the Seventh Loan amounted to $7,000,000 and during the Sixth Loan to $47,000,000.

Loan officials said that throughout Canada were confident of surpassing the results of the Seventh Victory Loan, Earle said:

"In increasing the over-all objective and more particularly the objective in individuals, we are facing the realities of Canada's financial requirements. Even should there be near-term peace of the Pacific variety, our expenditures will carry and consequently our borrowing requirements for the immediate fiscal year will continue at high levels.

THOUSANDS DIED, MAYBE MILLIONS, IN NAZI CAMPS

Horrible Centres of Starvation, Torture For Amusement of Sadistic Hun S.S.

By JOHN DAUPHINEE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 21 (C.P. Cable) — Thousands, perhaps millions — of young and old, men and women and children, have died of illness, starvation, torture, rope and bullet in German concentration camps that have degenerated from pitiless prisons into horrible centres of hell for the sadistic amusement of the S.S.

Until Allied military government officials get together some sort of approximate record of the numbers of persons from all over Europe who have been murdered there or are dying daily even after they are freed—the record can only be indicated by example.

Breedonk Fortress, Belsen and Buchenwald will perhaps be the four blackest names—after Hitler — in German history.

Breedonk is near Malines in Belgium. It is relatively small, yet by the Allied army's official account and personal eye-witness accounts there, and more than 1,000 at the Tir National Camp near Brussels. There are no figures for the numbers who died of starvation or passed through those camps. There are only two of 18 prisons or concentration camps in the entire Concentration Camp in Holland.

At Vught, a concentration centre in Holland, Anne Frank, the 15-year-old Jewish girl whose diary of concentration camp life was published after her death, died of German hands. Some were beaten until their bones were broken. Others were starved to death in cold cells and then shot and then thrown into Hungria. Vught housed as many as 30,000 at one time. Some of them were sent to Germany just before the camp fell to British troops of the 1st. Canadian army. Others were left behind when they were nearly 40,000 in Belsen near Bremen, when it was overrun by the British 2nd Army. Many had died in the last few months. The figures as far as could be found on what prisoners have told correspondents are also published approximations vary widely.

Pile 60 to 80 Yards Long.

"There was a pile 60 to 80 yards long, 30 yards wide and four feet high of unburied dead."

At Buchenwald, near Weimar, Germany, 21,000 were found when it was overrun by the U.S. 3rd. Army. Figures are not available on that camp.

It is guessed 60,000 to 75,000 persons died there and 1,000 records were found of persons who died there.

Thousands, however, were killed there who never actually were in the camp but were sent to Weimar to die in register. They were simply brought there to be killed.

Fight Their Way Into City's Suburbs At Five Places

Guns Shell Potsdamer Platz In Centre of Doomed Capital

London, April 21. (AP)— The Germans said today massive Russian forces were fighting their bloody through suburbs on the east, north and southwest, and five shelling the Potsdamer Plats in the centre of the doomed city.

Soviet forces, by enemy account, had fought their way into Berlin suburbs at five places—Berlin-Strausberg, Fuerstenwalde, Koenigs Wusterhausen and Zossen.

The Russian drive to Bernau, barely 20 miles from the city limits, was reported by the German High Command. This action constituted part of the northern envelopment now sprung around Berlin.

In a swift penetration of German defences south of the capital, other Russian forces advanced to the junctions southwest of the capital, the German Transocean Agency said. In this sweep the Russians reached the vicinity of Beelitz and Treuenbrietzen, respectively 12 and 22 German kilometers from the great southwestern suburbs of Potsdam, Enemy Account of Fighting.

Other Russian troops were fire are five key points of the suburban fighting.

Bernau—Virtually at the northeastern city boundary just outside the Ring Autobahn encircling the capital and 14 miles from the heart of the city.

Koenigs- Wusterhausen — Three miles from the southeastern boundary.

Zossen—About 10 miles south on the main railway to Saxony.

Describing the situation in the capital as "extremely difficult and critical", Transocean said:

"The Russians have already broken through between Cottbus and Baruth and, coming from Baruth, have reached Koenigs - Wusterhausen, where fierce fighting is raging. Another thrust is being made in the direction of Zossen."

Moscow dispatches indicated American and Russian forces may be only 35 miles apart. Russian pilots reported they had sighted both American and Soviet forces.

Berlin Is Silent.

To the north the 1st While Russian Army, making a frontal assault on the capital, was locked in a bitter battle with defenders of the capital along the Fuerstenberg-Strausberg-Berlin railway, Transocean announced said.

Still another north other Russian forces were said to have forced two crossings of the Oder river and apparents are overdue will be well-established on the west bank before, at least six hours before dawn. The war-head approvals a 30 mile turning this Sunday.

Cupid Snags 25,000 Canadian Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen Overseas

By HELEN BANNERMAN

(C.P. Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 21 — (CP)— Cupid has snagged more than 25,000 Canadian service men and women who met stationed overseas and about 5,000 of them have been married, already have been brought to Canada.

As for the navy, latest information is not available but up to October the total was 477.

The majority of Canadian overseas marriages have occurred in the United Kingdom but Canadian soldiers also have found wives in Newfoundland, Jamaica, Australia, South Africa, India, Italy, Egypt, Belgium, Russia, Bermuda and Syria and Middle East countries.

A few Canadian airmen have married in France, Belgium and Holland and the Middle East, and Italy.

Approximately 1,350 wives and 420 children of airmen have been brought to Canada and another 2,000 wives and 900 children are awaiting transportation. There are 17,500 soldiers' wives and about 9,500 children awaiting passage.

Since 1944 the Canadian government has paid the costs of moving overseas brides and their children to Canada and a priority system has been set up. They are being brought as quickly as transportation is available.

Cases in which British brides who have come to Canada are deserted by their husbands have been discussed in the Commons recently—the husband usually going his own way as similar cases involving Canadian wives.

The Dependents' Allowance Board investigates, if they find that the husband is trying to scuttle out of his responsibilities they slap on a compulsory assignment of pay. However, the percentage of difficult cases involving British wives seems no larger than those which crop up in all-Canadian marriages.

B.C.I. "at Home" In Gymnasium Most Enjoyable

Jamming both gymnasiums of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School was no record event on Friday night. Formal At Home on Friday night. The students' dance, which sponsored the event, is proud to boast of the fact that the first dance of its kind to be conducted within five years was an overwhelming success. The general public and the people of Belleville was well represented on the occasion. Add a forget a liberal sprinkling of navy, army and air force personnel.

Apple blossoms in a burst of bloom were used in profusion throughout the gymnasium. Streamers in multi-colored hues were attached to the centre of the ceiling with the revolving quadruple spot. The setting was charming, the music of the 6 R.D. orchestra was delightful, and the dancers were heartily enjoying themselves, three factors which made for a "really" fine dance. At midnight, very delicious refreshments were served in the library.

In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. R. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. Archibald, Miss I. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. D. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. J. McGuire, and Miss Vera Findall, President of the Students' Council.

Responsible for the dance arrangements and to be highly complimented for their eventually great success was the Invitation Committee composed of the Misses Betty Bull, Ruth Blathwayte and Mary Lou Hepburn, assisted by Bill Bonter on night that he had told the man who pays his salary that he was going to get a raise, or race, but the fact that he was going to get a job.

These men, who led the country ahead leave the papers and the radio—they are the men of Ottawa until they have shown the boys, that they can fill an honourable structure in the nation, that will be worthy of the boys who died.

"We need leaders of the country."

Mr. Parks said that party to party sake prejudices no matter who the cost is to the nation—whereby every man, no matter what his party, can get a decent living."

"I am sorry for the boys and I am going to. If the cause is big enough to die for, as," he declared.

Order in Canada

In a forceful address in which he emphasized his points with a sincerity born of experience and an earnestness that left no doubt in his hearers' minds, Mr. Parks stated he was enlisting in the army in 1914 and that he did fight for a new order in Canada and that he had seen the horrors of war and said they were willing to die, would be given the chance to live.

"It is the one memorial the dead of Canada would ask for—that the live boys ask" he said.

"It is the only memorial the dead would ask for—that the live boys ask" he said.

"It would have been sheer tragic it would have been sheer tragedy if the boys had died and could not get things because there was so many of them. Scores of Canadian boys went down morally, physically and many mentally.

"Then came the war," he went on, "and money came in floods. Why were we not ready for the war the other day. The nation poured out millions of money, and why we had thought their millions were at Ottawa. Why we had thought so many are good and many are crippled."

Not Enough

Yet, Mr. Parks asserted, he never believed that one was a member of one part of the man overseas, against the man behind the gun, or the man behind the plough.

"They said to me in Britain, "What goes on in Canada? What are they doing in Canada? Why go home? Do they know there is a war on? Do they know there is a war on?" They loved the small homely bits of news and they were proud of the part of the boys were playing there up with Victory Bonds.

"Canada at home does not ever seem perhaps of the great social reconstruction that is going on underneath the surface, the speaker declared. "In camps all over the country thousands of young men and women are living on their own, but they do not receive the parental guidance. It is a benevolent but kindly Fatherization. They are rejecting differently to the same extent as those with home about, changes that can make Canada a new Canada, Canada of the seeds of with discussion."

"We have five minutes to the dawn and unless we know how to use those five minutes we shall not look back to a way of peaceful living".

Divided

Canada is divided, Mr. Parks stated, and unless her people can find the way to unity, the division will break her into pieces. "We have racial and religious differences. We have the unemployed striking, and the veteran is conscious that he is a different person in a different world."

He urged civilians to help the veteran to help himself in the transition of his liabilities. "These", he added, "were service habits, comparative high pay, young men who have married and now have responsibilities and fifty per cent of these have not a job before the war and have no idea of what they are going to do when peace comes. They have had to changeover from responsibilities with pay to positions with little responsibility."

He quoted a wing commander regarding the Five million dollars worth of equipment in aircraft, who said all airmen will be getting from $1 $35 to $30 per week for that if all he will be worth. Coming back he added, "I am sorry for the airmen all over again and a large percentage are afraid to come back because they don't know how men in business will react to them.

But others will come back and settle down. The average lad, wanted to come home, marry that certain girl, get a job and buy a home."

He cited the case of a young soldier 21 year old fyer who told him, "all I know is destruction and war. What are they going to do for me back home?" Mr. Parks continued to go over again at 27 and expect to pick up the lost years. Something must be done for him.

Must be Fitted

There is no French Canadian problem overseas, Mr. Parks stated, "they are fighting for the same job and can pair in the doing. You will never be fitted into your job, they will never let you down, but they will expect the people back home can be trusted. I am not going home to take a cake of every man for himself."

Pressed, of a delightful sense of humour, Parks in his earlier remarks interspersed his remarks of his experiences in Britain with anecdotes and story. He had nothing but the boys in the various sections of Britain, for all he was a thoughtful, earnest man of

FIVE-YEAR VETERAN

Pte. Dan Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. "Scotty" Wilson, Dundas Street East, who has served overseas for five years. Dan was also a new reporter on his way home. His wife, a Scottish war bride, and son, Brian Jr., arrived from Leith, Scotland, last week.

Cpl. George Locke, Wounded in Arm, Happy to Be Home with Wife, Son

Corporal George Locke, son of the late Thomas Locke and Mrs. Locke, Belleville, who has served overseas with the Royal Canadian Engineers for hospitalization after being severely wounded in Italy, could scarcely believe his eyes on his arrival at his home in Belleville last week when Mr. and Mrs. Charles Summers, 216 Pinnacle St., called to see him.

Before him stood the largest basket of flowers he had ever seen in his life. It was englobed with red, white and blue, and literally teemed with fine, out in height and was crammed with practically everything a returned soldier could desire. In fact it looked so good that he was afraid to touch it, lest it fall to pieces.

It was the gift of the Deacon Boys Club, staff and management with whom he worked for nine years prior to his enlistment, and was awaiting him at Chorley Park Hospital, Toronto. But he was whisked back to his home and the basket, with telegrams and flowers followed later.

Son Stands Sixty Ft.

There was another surprise for the gallant corporal too, when he walked inside the home of his wife, the former Rosy Summers. A husky little fellow stood sixty inches high another looked at the strange soldier, ran to him, kissed him and cried "Daddy" as if he had known him again took his place behind mother's chair with a query "who is the man?" It was four-year-old Ricky Locke, the corporal's son, whom he had not seen since the little fellow was a day old.

The corporal's wife, Mrs. Locke, and Italian theatre of war was wounded in the left arm and both legs during the heavy fighting in the Lennon River, Italy. He, with his platoon, was pinned down and surrounded and cut off from their main body for four days and had been fighting their way back, when shrapnel caught Locke, wounding him.

He enlisted in May, 1940 with the 48th Highlanders of Canada, and went overseas in July, 1941. He transferred to the Canadian Scottish Regiment later and was posted to the Royal Edmontons with which he saw action in Sicily and Italy.

Corporal Locke is at present enjoying a furlough at his home at the end of which he will report to Chorley Park Hospital for further operations on his wounded arm.

Souvenir-minded, the corporal collected many Italian coins and other reminders of his two years service in Italy. Included are a number of Nazi propaganda leaflets dropped by the Luftwaffe over the Canadians. One is a stately gold locket in which is set an English coin of the vintage of 1887; a statue of a mail-clad knight in bronze which adorned one of the bedposts of an Italian "four poster", German weapons and ammunition and several other articles.

He has a brother with the Canadian Brothers Ltd., for several years prior to the war, and the collection of the thoughtfulness of the staff of that firm was expressed in no uncertain terms.

She showed an increase of nursing calories in the province, and explained how different communities benefited from the service. Mrs. Campbell also stated that 2137 calls were filled for private duty nurses during the year, 1,138 of which were in hospital general duty, as well as 42 calls for nurses' aides in the home. Calls for nurses are taken by telephone through Mrs. 1128, a 24-hour service, and are in answer to requests from doctors, hospital superintendents and individual nurses. The registrar also explained that the

H.M.C.S. "UGANDA" CROSSES THE EQUATOR

When the new Canadian cruiser H.M.C.S. "Uganda" crossed the Equator recently, Neptunus Rex rose out of the sea to initiate all "pollywogs" amongst the Canadian sailors into the ancient and traditional order of the "Shellbacks." All those who were crossing the line for the first time were rounded up by Neptunus's police and brought before him for the time honored and rather fearsome ceremonies.

After the ceremonies, King Neptune condescended to pose with his court. All were veterans of previous Equator crossings and each one was arrayed in his own costume — very self-satisfied ruddy Molly's being proud perfect for beard and Petty Officer Thomas Scott, Sid Mosher of Halifax showed fine talent for face painting. The role of Neptune was played by Lieut.-Commander (E) R. J. Elliott, R.C.N.V.R., of Victoria, who is shown with his silver crown. His "Gracious Consort" was Leading Steward John Stoodley of Toronto.

First victim of the ceremonies was the Commanding Officer, Captain E. R. Mainguy, C.B.E., R.C.N., of Duncan, B.C. shown (above) being dragged up to the Imperial Throne by Chief Petty Officer Walter Nettleton, R.C.N., of Halifax and Hamilton, Ontario. The Grovelling Minion in character behind the Captain is the Chief of Police of Neptune's court — Lieutenant (E) Freeman Brassington, R.C.N.V.R., of Hamilton, Captain Mainguy was invested with "The Order of the Slippery Sizzle" (in recognition of the number of times he is called to the bridge nightly).

Here are the dignitaries of "King Neptune's Court". In the front row are Court Clerk Walter Nettleton; Chief Gunner's Mate or Halifax and Hamilton, Ontario; Leading Steward John Stoodley of Toronto, "Queen" her arm linked with that of Commander (E) R. L. Hinds, R.C.N.V.R., of Victoria, B.C., who played the role of King Neptune. In the back row, the much honored courier is Petty Officer Cooke, Brigade of Halifax; Mr. William Bradden, Warrant Officer of Victoria, B.C., and as a "water-sprite," Sub-Lieutenant A. F. Rowland, R.N.V.R., of Montreal.

High priority in the ceremonies was given to "Uganda's" senior officers. Here the Executive Officer, Commander Hugh F. Pullen, O.B.E., R.C.N., resolutely prepares to receive an "injection" from Neptune's Court Doctor, Chief Stoker Thomas Stewart, of Victoria, B.C. In the foreground Neptune's Court Barber, Petty Officer "Slicks" Richardford, wields a mighty blade . . . . while Sub. Lieut. Rowland, R.C.N.V.R., of Montreal, dressed as a water-sprite, looks on from behind.

After thorough treatment the Commander's chair will be suddenly inverted and he will be thoroughly baptized in the ship's tank. (Above) The name "Adele" showed plainly on the back of Lieut.-Cdr. (E) Basil Coady, R.C.N.V.R., of Halifax, as he took his place on the rostrum to be "initiated." He cut out strips of adhesive tape to form the letters of his wife's name, had it buffed into his back by the stiff, spring tropical suns.—R.C.N. Photos by Lieut. G. Moss, R.C.N.V.R.)

"Invest in the Best"

In every part of Canada at this time the people are ready to make their investment in Canada's Eighth Victory Loan. In the actual field of conflict in Germany and in those parts of Europe yet unliberated the war has reached its decisive stage. The armies of the Allied Nations have made their greatest contribution, they have brought victory and the wind-up is not far distant. The rich heroic blood of Canadian youth and manhood has been fighting and winning victory after victory and Canadians with the other conquering Allies are to see the fruits of their loyal and faithful service.

There could not be a more inspiring time at which to launch the Eighth Victory Loan. It coincides so closely with victory and the spirit of the service folk overseas in Europe and elsewhere must really be the spirit of Canada at home. The people of the home front will march step by step to pay the price of victory by lending to their country, for which those overseas are fighting, the amount of $1,350,000,000 at this time. What has been achieved overseas is worth all that Canadians have and are. For it many have laid down their lives which held such promise, for it others have bled and suffered and been crippled and for it all in the armed forces have fought like heroes. What these Canadians in action have marked up is something that placed Canada in an exalted place among the nations of the world. It has shown this young nation a giant in the strength and resourcefulness of her citizens. It has shown what they can do when called to the task urgently. It has shown that Canadians are world-minded and that they seek the coming of the era of human brotherhood. Canadian boys have stood by the side of the best in the world of free men and have stood the test with honor.

Now Canada is raising the necessary financial resources to carry on the great task and to pay with Canadian money for the goods of Canadian origin. In this sphere Canadians must emulate as far as they can the great deeds of those who have carried the fight into victory in Europe.

Some day, no one can say just when, but it will not be far off for Germany's central power is gone, there will come a declaration that the war in Europe is deemed ended. To bring that has been worth-while but buying Victory Bonds is really sacrifice for the purchaser is twice or many times paid in the peace with safety and security it will bring and in bringing home the gallant warriors of the war to their homes and families for the upbuilding of Canada.

To bring the campaign for the Eighth Victory Loan home to men's and women's hearts, it is fitting that Belleville is allotted the objective of $1,325,000; Trenton $575,000; Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford $435,000; Deseronto and Tyendinaga $105,000; Stirling, Rawdon and Huntingdon $185,000; Tweed $170,000; Madoc, Marmora and Deloro $220,000; Bancroft $185,000, a total of $3,200,000 for the general canvass, while the Special Names Committee's objective is $300,000, and the Armed Forces' $425,000, a grand total of $3,925,000 for the County of Hastings.

The Sunday religious service and military parade will set off the inspiration and energy of the people to do in this campaign all that is aimed at and more too. It will be a dedication in a very true sense.

This loan must keep in step with the brave defenders and champions of freedom overseas. To do this means the utmost individual participation by every person. All can "invest in the best" as the slogan of this drive runs. It is investment in the very best.

Checking Up Car Brakes

"Your brakes and the other fellow's are often all that stands between safety and tragedy in traffic," says a folder issued by the Chief Constables' Association of Canada. At the present opportune time there is a nation-wide emphasis on brakes. Cars today are nearly twice as old on an average as they were in pre-war days and because of long service essential parts gradually wear out and break down. Hence the responsibility rests upon the owners and drivers to see that brakes and other vital parts be kept in the best condition to extend the life of the cars.

Congestion in areas of war activity, highways awaiting repair and police manpower shortages are in many places other serious factors. Alertness and responsibility from police, motorists and pedestrians alike are needed to ... Weakening increases the traffic accidents and to conserve vital war-time transportation, the folder points out.

A simple brake test has been recommended by the Canadian Automobile Association of Canada. It is made by placing an object one inch thick at the base of the brake pedal and pushing down forcibly on the pedal. If it goes down more than one inch before brakes begin to take hold, then any inadequate and may be in a dangerous condition. Brakes which do not grip until the pedal is within one inch of the floor-board require up to 50 feet to stop at twenty miles per hour. The legal stopping distance in most provinces is 30 feet at 20 miles per hour. If brakes do not pass the check they should be given immediate attention.

Checks by the traffic police are made in the following categories, every passenger car involved in an accident and in a traffic violation in which cars are concerned and also every car which is operated in a manner indicating faulty brakes.

Two Jobs of Pocket-Cleaning

If Germany does not surrender unconditionally, there will be no V-E-Day proclaimed in Europe until all of Germany has been occupied. For this, we have the word of General Eisenhower. The Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces in Western Europe also declared that several weeks of hard fighting lie in store for his troops in cleaning out the several pockets of enemy resistance.

Our troops have already shown keen proficiency in the job of cleaning out such pockets. And with final victory all but achieved, they will be ready again to close in on the Germans, fully realizing that they may die just a few days before all will be preparing to come back to home and to all the precious associations of home.

Coincident with this situation on the European battlefront, citizens of Canada are engaged in a pocket-cleaning job of their own. They have the financial cost of the European victory which is now almost ours, to maintain Canada's armed forces until such time as they have been completely demobilized, to direct war materials to the Far East and to meet the financial bonuses which we have promised to our veterans of war, the Eighth Victory Loan objective of $1,350,000,000 must be reached. And to reach it, individual citizens will need to retain all the enthusiasm which they displayed in previous Victory Loans—just as we expect our boys in Germany to be as aggressive in the last battles as they were at Caen and on the Rhine.

Fireproof Material From Ash

British scientists have produced a new fireproof building material from waste ash which may save millions of pounds (sterling) annually.

It is claimed that its strength improves with age; it is not influenced by frost or damp; it is vermin-proof; it can be plastered, papered and painted in color; sawn to any shape and take screws and nails.

It is estimated that over 800 million bricks could be produced in Britain with the ash, which is now thrown away, at an approximate cost of $6,654,000 a year.

The ash bricks have already been used in the construction of offices and workshops and one new housing estate in central England is to have the first house built entirely of them.

The Department of Scientific and Industrial Research is now testing the new material for heat resistance and strength.

QUATRAINS

Three Tasks

Since First to climb the race began,
Three tasks have filled the days of man
Between the cradle and his grave:
To build; to plant his fields, and save.

Merger

Of mergers all, the best I know
Pays dividends as gardens grow
And sun and rain and soil combine
In flowers and fruits of tree and vine.

The Living Dead

They never ask him now to lend
Or time in some good service spend.
So oft such pleas he brushed aside,
They treat him just as if he'd died.

Friend

A friend is one who would be sad
If ever need for help we had
And found, when of our plight he'd learned,
That unto someone else we'd turned.

Pyle Leaves Officers, Joins the Men

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa—(by Navy radio)—The company commander, Capt. Julian Dusenbury, said it could have my choice of two places to spend the first night with his company.

One was with him. The other was command post. The command post was a big, underground gun emplacement, made of sandbags. The japs had never occupied it, but they had made it a point of it, pointing toward the sea and making it look like a gun position, for camouflage purposes.

Dusenbury and a couple of his officers had spread ponchos on the ground and were sitting around the map and had hung their telephone on a nearby tree and were ready for business. They were the whole battalion command post. I'm not sure which I'd have chosen, but I'm glad I didn't have to make the decision.

Any other choice was with a couple of enlisted men. I found room for myself in little Oyppo-like hillcrest they'd made.

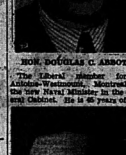
It was a tiny little place about halfway down the hillside, away from the sea. They'd made a roof for it by tying ponchos to trees and had dug up some japanese straw mats out of a farmhouse to lay on the ground.

I chose the second of these two places, partly because it was warmer, and also because I wanted to be with the men anyhow.

My two "roommates" were Corp. Martin Clayton, Jr., of (3400 Princeton St.) Dayton, Ohio, and Pfc. William Gross of (322 N. Foster St.) Lansing, Mich.

Clayton is blackhaired "Bird Dog" and nobody ever calls him anything else. He is tall, thin and dark, almost Latin-looking. He sports a purple heart, which he received a long time ago for wounds and he makes fun of it.

Gross is darkly called Gross. He is big and husky and forthright. He and Clayton are "old buddies" and they both sort of looked after me for several days. Gross, then, became nearly very close friends, and after the way they intended to act to (illegible) together and finish their education.



The boys said we could all three sleep side by side in the same "hole," so I got out my contribution to the bedding, the raincoat. And it was a very much appreciated contribution, for the boys had provided a blanket as well as a poncho.

These Marines had been sleeping every night on the ground with no

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

DON'T TAKE LIFE SERIOUSLY

In the preceding talk in this series I said that a person who is spasmodic, high blood pressure I said one with high blood pressure should take his emotions.

Now I do not just write an old-blood-of, so sarcastic and so simplistic as to imply that it is easy to tell such persons who want a long-distance diagnosis or prescription about what they should do. I only set my feet on for instance when pain makes the ground wet my head. It's a near thing for any well-minded person to tell the family even to inquire how I'm feeling now. If I'm not feeling fine and dandy it is not as into a vicious temper to talk about it. Talk? Huh. I should say not.

But you poor gents with hypertension don't kid me. I know that has nothing to do with your disposition, temper, or lack of it. Actually, do you can't blame your unpleasant nature or your surly spirit on your blood pressure. It is not, nor is the truth vice versa.

There is a thought to make a flash in the pan, but now for what the aggressive medical authors and the professional textbook writers call "psychosomatic medicine." Articles and textbooks galore have been written under this title, so all out with the psychosomatic idea that the inner mental factor of hypertension is emotional stress. It is a "mind conflict." You may have heard a college—sophomore—sporting newly discovered psychology say, "Doc, that's about the size of it.

However, I suppose you know, mere anxiety or worry, even about the result of the investigation, can and often does increase the blood pressure, and recognizing this good reason, I do not take the first measurement as a fair test.

Usually I tell the patient confidential or applicant is calm and indifferent whether an hour or a day or two later—and then get an accurate score.

Another technical difference between the good doctor and the medical fakir is that the good doctor rarely or never infurges the patient with many milligrams of the potent the systolic and/or diastolic pressures is down. And if you ask for this it is none of the patient's business. As a patient I have had numerous blood pressure examinations but I have never inquired whether it was high, low or normal.

The effect of the emotions on blood pressure and on gastric hyperacidity and peptic ulcer has become a familiar "gag" in contemporaneous humor. There is considerable truth in it, nevertheless.

DEAD INDIAN

Who said: "The only good Indian is a dead Indian?"

This saying, which typifies the attitude of many early American pioneers towards the aborigines, is said to originate with a remark made by General Philip H. Sheridan.

Early in 1868, some time after General Custer's defeat of the Washita, with Black Kettle's band of Cheyenne Indians, Sheridan had held a conference with the chiefs or many tribes at Fort Cobb in the Indian Territory, now in Oklahoma.

There he talked like that for about an hour; and then it grew dark and he shouted some words to Custer, a bellicose to put out the fires and it was passed on and on, and boys by dozens and by the score rushed forward with their pine knots and fagots, and Bird Dog Grass and I went to the front to see what was going on.

Sheridan was standing on a rise of ground and the flames of Indian wigwams and tepees were leaping high into the air, and he was yelling at the top of his voice, and every word was distinct.

"Fifty chiefs seated themselves in front of the General's headquarters tent. Each chief was flanked by two guards. According to Stward M. Ellis, who said he was present at the powwow, General Grose said: "I want to tell you, chiefs, replied one by one as the spirit interpreted.

Finally an old Comanche chief named Tosh-a-way arose to speak. Wishing to make a favorable impression on the General, said: he is a dead Indian."

Tosh-a-way, though friendly, was hostile, he struck himself on the breast and said: "Me Tosh-a-way, me good Indian."

The incident may not be historical, but it is referred to in the story of the campaign in Sheridan's Personal Memoirs. Here is the account in "Sheridan's Troops on the Border" by Col. Richardson: Also, in the less historical, of Sheridan's winter campaign of 1868-69.

"The only good Indian is a dead Indian" is often credited to General Sheridan. Miles, but a short time before his death in 1925 he denied that he was the author.

Yanks Liberate 4,750 Prisoners

Somewhere in Germany, April 21 (AP)—United States troops overran several German prisoner of war camps Wednesday, liberating 4,750 starved, sick and ragged prisoners who wept with the joy of restored freedom. All had been captured in the Ardennes break-through.

Many of the details of the operation are being withheld by censorship, including the names of the camps and their location.

Besides 800 Americans, some of who told of fainting from hunger as they were forced to do exhausting work the Americans liberated in the days work: 1,100 British prisoners, 1,250 French, 1,200 Russians, 300 Serbs and 200 Slavs.

The Americans said many of them were forced to walk 150 miles from the St. Vith area in four days, with nothing to eat or drink.

They told of being compelled to walk three miles to a railroad construction job, there to put in 10 hours of backbreaking work with only a half hour's rest at noon, and to walk back to camp at the end of the day.

Breakfast, they said, was lukewarm water; a noon meal of soup, and a pot of cicmargarine constituted their mid-day dinner. Once per they got potato soup or turnip soup, not much richer than the water had been.

German Mayor Hanged by Nazi S.S. Officers

Bretheim, Germany, April 22—(AP)—Nazi S. S. officers, hanged the mayor of this village, the local Nazi party chief and a prominent farmer in a brutal public exhibition a week ago when the trio planned to turn the hamlet over to American, eye-witnesses said yesterday.

Reports of the incident were heard all along the United States 7th army front during the last few days. Four miles around S. S. troopers had plastered handbills advertising the Bretheim incident as a warning to any Germans trying to save their lives and homes with a white flag.

When Americans reached the smouldering ruins of Bretheim yesterday, residents told how two German farmers, Uhl and Hanselmann, took "panzerfaust" anti-tank guns away from four teen-aged Hitler youths and ordered them home. The boys had been ordered to stafd guard outside the village to intercept American tanks.

The two farmers, Uhl's wife related, destroyed the "panzerfaust" guns and announced white flags would be flown when American troops approached.

One Still Fugitive.

The following day, five S. S. officers from Rothenburg came to Brethelm and arrested Hanselmann. Uhl had fled and still is a fugitive. Mayor Gachstatter and party chief Wolfmeir were ordered to hang Hanselmann as a traitor. When the two officials demurred they also were arrested.

Shortly before sunset the next evening all three were hanged from a tree at the side of Bretheim cemetery in the centre of the community with its population of 500.

Canadian Indians Lose Legislative Battle Over Lands

Albany, N.Y., April 21 —(AP)— Canadian Indians were defeated Thursday in their 1945 legislative battle over Upstate New York lands.

Gov. Dewey vetoed, without comment, the bill which would have authorized the Court of Claims to rule on a claim by the Six Nation Indians in Canada for $248,307, allegedly due from the state. Gov. Dewey disapproved a similar measure in 1944, as did former Gov. Herbert Lehman in 1943.

According to a memorandum submitted by Senator C. B. Hammond, Illinois Republican who sponsored the measure this year, the state violated the terms of a treaty drawn May 31, 1788, in New York City, with the Seven Nations of of Canada (the Caughnawaga Indians and the Iroquois of the Village of St. Regis).

After the treaty, the Indians released to the state all their New York lands except three tracts, one of which was the Boganburg, the second at Fort Covington and the third at Massena.

The Indians in Canada claim part of the money due them on the land was paid the Indians living on the American side of the St. Regis Reservation. They further assert that the state illegally purchased from the New York Indians portions of the three tracts belonging to those in Canada.

U.S. New Secret 'Chemical Torpedo'

Washington, April 21 —(AP)— Existence of a new secret "chemical torpedo" in the United States Navy's arsenal has come to light.

Although officially disclosed, requests for further details on the weapon brought no information from the navy except that the subject is "secret."

Such information as was released in publicly-printed congressional hearings gave no indication of the significance of the name "chemical," but it evidently applies to a modification of the old style steam-turbine propulsion.

Capital Closeups

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 20 —(CP)— The winding of the sixth session of the 19th Parliament, last Monday, had little of the excitement that marked some of its activities during the last five years. It was dull enough up to the Friday session when newsmen, listening to what appeared to be the start of a dry announcement, clamored for the exit when Prime Minister Mackenzie King disclosed the June 11 election date.

There were some in the gallery who pointed out the "PM" always insisted on lucky 'no. 7 for his auto licence, declared this was a sign of superstition and added he'd never announce an election on Friday, 13th. But he did—and the scramble to the exit saw two largest reporters wedged in the door in their hurry to send out the news. The last man behind them freed the doorway and the race for the telephones continued.

Before the Speech From the Throne and prorogation ceremonies Monday there was an unwitting lesson on the part of members to keep up the pace of the House. They walked back to the big green Commons Chamber to say goodbye to dostmaster and opponents alike. Many of them had announced their intention of not contesting the next election, others will undoubtedly be beaten in the voting.

Restraint to Benefit: The ministerial worries that will confront Hon. J. A. Glen in the Mines and Resources Department may seem heavy but he had some tough ones to solve as Speaker of the Commons during a hectic period of parliamentary debate. All his problems were not created on the floor of the House.

His ceremonial task as host to distinguished visitors, brought him more than one headache. Receiving the visit of Madame Chiang Kai-Shek he said: "I hope never again to have such a hectic time making the necessary arrangements and endeavoring to crowd 19,000 people into a place with less than 800 seats."

He gave an interesting sidelight on Madame Chiang's visit. She was taken on an inspection of the Parliament Buildings after the speech and like all tourists she insisted on sitting down on the Prime Minister's chair. "She hoped she would not be too swollen with pride to sit in it because of the great reception she had received."

Senator Bishop: When Charlie Bishop worked away at his desk in the parliamentary press gallery after the call to the Senate the other day he replied to a fusilade of good-humored taunts from colleagues, grinning with pride at his appointment.

He hurried them aside with his usual sharp wit. Anchow, he said,

When the Whistles Blow for Final Victory....

... you'll still want your Job!

The whistles blow — when work begins. They speak of jobs to be done — wages earned.

And when, loud and long, the whistles blow for Victory, their message must still be the same. Men and women now in Armed Services will need work and wages. Jobs for all — workers and fighters — will be the first necessity in peace.

That's what Victory Bonds help to ensure — a faster and a better Victory, with postwar money circulating to open good jobs for all who want them.

Face up to this together, workers of Ontario. This time, buy a bigger Bond than ever. Victory will be all the quicker, all the sweeter, all the brighter.

PERCY R. BENGOUGH, President — J. A. SULLIVAN, Secretary-Treasurer

On behalf of the Executive Council of

The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada

... they'll blow again for Peace!

The first is the whistle that means the boys are coming home. The second is the whistle that means jobs for them — and you.

Anything you can do now to assure those peacetime jobs, you want to do. It is a fact that Victory Bonds will help . . . mightily . . . to create and maintain steady work at good pay. They fight inflation . . . the worker's worst enemy — and they provide postwar funds to buy more of the products of your postwar work.

A bigger Bond today means a bigger buy tomorrow. The organized workers of Ontario now have — in the 8th Victory Loan — another opportunity to do a good turn for Canada, for the armed forces and for themselves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Afraid of Effect on Wounded Soldier, If Told She no Longer Loves Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 19 years and deeply in love with a boy of the same age who is now in the army overseas. He isn't very wealthy, but has enough to make it possible for me to marry him, and we've planned to get married when he comes home.

Before he left he told me that he was counting on marrying me and he and told him so but when the letters began to come from him I found it very hard to write him as I had been doing. I answered every letter, now and then, but not as often as before. I thought that it would be too great if I told him all the things I had been doing, and he said it would take it to twenty months for him to get over it.

Do I dare keep the boy waiting that long? I really want to marry him, still I tell the wounded boy about him?

I.M.

In spite of what your doctor says it would seem that the young soldier, if informed, would understand the shock of being told you no longer love him. What else is to be done? It would be far worse for him if you went through the marriage ceremony, knowing that you think it would be wise, when you see the boy you wish to marry, to tell him the truth, sparing with truth, tactful words. Your doctor can only hand you deeper in your difficulties.

Better for Young Men—Ages To Go Out In Groups

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm almost 15 years old, and want to have dates, but mother thinks I should wait a few more years. I have turned down many boys who've asked for dates, because mother says if I want to go out with boys, it would be much better if a group of boys and girls go out together instead of couples.

Do you think it would be all right for a boy and a girl to go to a movie or ride around on Saturday or Sunday afternoons?

R. W.

I agree with your mother it would be better if a group of boys and girls of the age you mention would go out together instead of in couples. Not long ago, when the war broke, a well-reared girl did not go out alone with a boy until she was sixteen years of age. There was a bit of worldly wisdom in this convention.

If a girl does not marry very early she old ladies everyone knows would say something like: "That girl, why she's been going out and having dates for the past ten or fifteen years. She must be as old as the hills."

BEAUTY

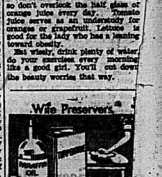
Digestive Disturbances Affect the Skin



One reason why complexions have limited aims pleasant color is that it is that overtaxed intestines have been poisoning the blood stream. Poisons are then carried by the blood to every part of the body, and when they reach the surface they cause pimples, blackheads, boils and other skin troubles.

Pimples and blackheads usually appear on the face, chest, back, shoulders, arms, hands, and sometimes on the scalp. Boils appear on the back of the neck, on the shoulders, and on the arms.

Constipation is the most common cause of digestive disturbances. Eating too much starchy food, such as bread, cereals, potatoes, cakes, pastries, and sweets, is another cause. Eating too much meat is another cause. Eating too much fat is another cause. Eating too much sugar is another cause. Eating too much salt is another cause. Eating too much spice is another cause. Eating too much pepper is another cause. Eating too much mustard is another cause. Eating too much vinegar is another cause. Eating too much pickles is another cause. Eating too much olives is another cause. Eating too much nuts is another cause. Eating too much seeds is another cause. Eating too much fruit is another cause. Eating too much vegetables is another cause. Eating too much milk is another cause. Eating too much cheese is another cause. Eating too much butter is another cause. Citrus fruits are rich in vitamins, so don't overlook the fruit class of vitamins when you're very dry. Tomato juice serves as an understudy for oranges or grapefruit. Lettuce is good for the lady who has a leaning toward obesity.

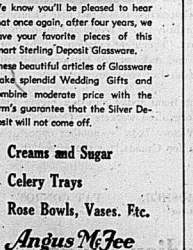
Eat wisely, drink plenty of water and get your sunshine every day, and life is a good gift. You'll run down the beauty worries that way.



To make a chutney: Skin and chop finely 1 lb. of tomatoes, 1 lb. of apples, 1 lb. of onions, 1 lb. of sugar, 1 lb. of raisins, 1 oz. of salt and mix it with a small quantity of vinegar. Let the whole stand for 24 hours. Let the chutney dry and you will have a delicious relish.

Belleville Presbyterial of W.M.S. Holds 20th Annual Meeting in Holloway St. Church

By FLORENCE MacMULLEN

The twentieth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada convened in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, on Thursday, April 19th, with a large attendance. The church was resplendent with potted plants and ferns and despite the chilly morning a friendly atmosphere prevailed inside the church portals.

The theme was "Reconstruction" and the president, Mrs. S. W. Stafford, presided over the three sessions, also over an executive meeting which was held the evening previous in the parlors of Bridge Street United Church with almost a full attendance.

Morning Session.

Mrs. Stafford opened the morning worship with a poem, a hymn and a special prayer written by Miss Mary Lowrey in 1942, a short time before her death.

Recitation — Mrs. Farnsworth.

Secretary — Mrs. McLellan, Mrs. Hollins and Mrs. Henderson.

Mrs. Stafford graciously welcomed the guests of Holloway Street United Church, welcoming the delegates and saying they fully honored the duty of attending the group of women. She struck a note that was a presidential march on in the land of God and advance along the King's Highway.

Mrs. Miss Hawley, supply secretary, explained that only one-half of the envelopes are allocated in this department and the others are to continue with their supply work from it over to some needy country.

Mrs. R. G. Bailey spoke on "Advancement in Christian Stewardship for 1945." She said that all are to be paid in the first quarter, that the allocation be budgeted that Presbyterial may know the full amount to be raised. She also urged that the secretaries should present this department in more vivid way. Talk about money, Mrs. Bailey said, with timely advice regarding planting a Victory Garden which followed would greatly advance the cause.

Victory Garden.

Rules for planning a Victory Garden to grow vegetables for the New World Order.

First plant five rows of peas—preparation, practice, patience, perseverance and plenty. Then plant three rows of squash—squash that is not criticized, squash that is conference. Then plant five rows of beans—to be faithful to duty, to be humble and loyal, let us true to our God's obligation, let us obey rules and regulations, let us be considerate of others, let us be neighborly, let us be unselfish, let us be forgiving, turn up with a smile, turn down with a frown, turn in with love, turn out with charity, turn over with faith, turn back from temptation, turn on for something good and turn off evil.

Plant plenty and plenty end rips and plenty of hoeing.

Add plenty sun and speak plenty and smile and smile and plenty and air and time a garden's made.

It must be pruned when life the soil and forms are dewy out.

It must be cultivated to be a partnership with God.

—Author Unstated.

Mrs. H. A. Zinn, in reporting her secretary's report, said she remitted $1,000.00 in 1944 the sum of $1,400. She was filled with pride at the magnificent response of the Mission Groups. Mrs. Zinn also paid tribute to a small group of five ladies who contributed $8.00 each to the cause of missions and who have been faithful in every way since the date of the Roby meeting. The members who have passed in the name of their beloved leader, Mrs. Roby, were read at the Thursday morning. The financial secretary for the year 1944 was most encouraging.

Mrs. Ryan's report dealing with 2019 members had 302 meetings.

Mission Bands, 264 members, 9 meetings.

Six affiliated societies contributed $50.00.

She was glad to report Wellman's auxiliary and Wellman's mission band auxiliary at Trenton were made of Rosney Hill, who was the first member to pass away in 1944. Rosney has been the Monthly Letter secretary to World Friends. Mrs. Thomas Hoskins, Wellman's secretary, who celebrated their 50th anniversary.

Two memorials observed "The World's Day of Prayer." Next paragraph dealt with the Study Book and social objects.

She closed with thanks to all who made her department a pleasure, and as Mrs. Jessie Hollins served seven years as corresponding secretary.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon worship service was conducted by Mrs. Jessie Hollins, Mrs. Henderson of Selby addressing the meeting fully organized as Your Neighbors, give of your talents and follow in the Master's footsteps and let Canada be an example to other lands.

Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Dixon announced that the amount of the memorial to Mrs. Hooper's memorial is $230.11.

Presbyterial conferences were held in charge of the various secretaries when several thoughts were established.

Mrs. A. McCreary brought a message on "Advancing in Reading." In 1944 the challenge was "Let's Read." In 1945 we say W.M.S. must been about advance to the slogan "Let's read more for Victory, Peace and Democracy." It is urgent, that all members read to keep abreast of the times.

Mrs. Albert Empey ably introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. C. Maxwell Lowrey Home Mission Secretary who travels across Canada and Bermuda to her audiences a word picture of what our missionaries are doing for Canada, also Miss Ella A. Coulter our own missionary at large in North Hastings who has served almost one year in that area.

All the officers and guests were guest for identification.

Each dept. sec., had her report memorized and all were placed together in one bundle and sold for 15 cents to cover cost of paper, and this will give each auxiliary a clear picture of the work.

A word of thanks was paid to the printers who rushed to complete the programs.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Albert Lewis paid a glowing tribute to memory of Mrs. Fred L. Hooper as follows:

"It is our privilege, today to do honor to the memory of one of the most outstanding members of Belleville Presbyterial of the, Women's Missionary Society, Mrs. Fred L. Hooper, who passed suddenly at her home in Napanee on March 19th, 1944. As a friend of many years' standing and as a close associate in the work which was nearest and dearest to Mrs. Hooper's heart it was given an insight into the rare qualities of mind and heart which enabled her to accomplish such a great deal for the missionary cause.

According to her own statement she became interested in the work in her early teens. Her mother made her a member in order to increase the membership of the society, and to interest her daughter in Mission Bands, as there were in those days no Circles or Bands. Mrs. Hooper's devoted attention to the affairs of the older women of the W.M. She felt her spiritual life strengthened by contact with them, and felt that prayer in W.M.S. meetings were a true benediction.

For thirty-nine years Mrs. Hooper served the Auxiliary of Grace Church, Napanee, sixteen years as Recording Secretary, and twenty-three years as President, and she also held the office of Vice-President of Napanee Presbyterial and Belleville Presbyterial for nine years, and in 1941 became President of the Presbyterial, an office which she held for four years.

Those who were associated with Mrs. Hooper in office during these years, knew her as a devoted and faithful worker to the cause which she had made her own. She was a model of faithfulness and untiring energy, and approached every undertaking with a fine enthusiasm and alacrity. It was her pride to be always well-informed, and she often astonished her friends with the multiplicity of facts and figures which she had at her fingers' ends. The excellence and inspiration of her devotional periods will long be remembered by Executive members.

On the occasion of the Golden Anniversary of the organization of the Auxiliary of Grace Church, Mrs. Hooper spoke of the society's responsibilities for the care of those who are in the firing line of our work." These ambassadors of Christ," she said, "must do their work without our support. There is one thing we may be sure is right, and that is in advocating an advance in Missionary endeavour after this war is over, so that never again will the people of this earth be subject to the ghastly horrors of the present.

And so today we are endeavoring to perpetuate the memory of one devoted woman by instituting in her memory a special for supplying Christian literature to an evangelistic missionary in China. It was her earnest conviction that the future of world peace depends on the spreading of the Gospel of Love. It was the torch which she carried faithfully, and we who are left, catch the torch and hold it aloft in the glad May we be worthy of the past and worthy of the future.

Memorial Service.

Mrs. A. R. Foster conducted the memorial hall hour and Memorial service under the theme "Christ, Way of Life, the Only Way for the Individual." She stated that Lowrey's poem by Browning "The Gathering Years" and tribute to her audience a lovely picture of Heaven. Truly those who serve Christ here on earth shall be with Him and they shall inherit the place He has prepared for them. Loyal and faithful followers.

Mrs. Foster paid high tribute to the 85 deceased members of the Belleville presbyterial and the five vice presidents each brought a message in keeping with the service. Beautiful white stocks were placed in a basket as silent tribute to their memory. Mrs. Bell delighted with a vocal solo.

Holy Communion was served as solemn closing to the morning session.

The ladies of Holloway Street W.M.S. served an appetizing luncheon in the basement, which was greatly enjoyed.

Evening Session.

The ladies of Holloway served a very delectable dinner which all the delegates thoroughly enjoyed and Mrs. Stafford presided over the supper meeting.

Greetings were received from Rev. A. G. McCallum, chairman of Presbytery and he paid tribute to the work of the young people and the old W.M.S. work as a whole.

Mrs. Austin Redmond extended greetings from the Woman's Association of Belleville Presbytery, Mrs. W. C. Haggerty president of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch spoke briefly, and Mrs. Hall gave greetings Mrs. Cecil Macklin responded, voicing the thanks of the delegates.

Tells of Work in N. Hastings.

A vivid description of her first visit to the mission fields of the Woman's Missionary Society in the Northern part of Hastings was given by Miss Coulter. This, said Miss Coulter, had been the most thrilling year of her life. There were many problems, too, but these, she felt, had led her on to better things. Added to the ministerial work which she has charge of four churches, Miss Coulter has community work and sometimes nursing to do. Several schools have been organized and in the village of Maynooth an Explorer group has been organized. The worship service, the study, games and fellowship has been an opportunity for the children who needed Christian leadership.

At Lake St. Peter plans are being made for the erection of a new church. Still many groups are not being reached and there is a challenge for the youth of our land to assist in their work. Helpers are needed to carry on the summer camp which is to be held the first two weeks in August for children from 9 to 15 years of age.

Two vacations are to be sent by the Dominion Board for the six weeks vacation school to be held during the summer months. Miss Coulter hopes there will soon be a minister in charge of children's services so that she can devote her time exclusively to the work among the children and the community work.

G.G.I.T. Contact Service.

Sixteen G.G.I.T.'s of Holloway Street United Church assisted in the contact the evening service with one girl reading the story "The Three Visions" and the others the call to Love's Prayer.

Holloway Street choir presented a musical number of fine quality.

Mrs. Hall closed the meeting.

At the evening session Mrs. C. Maxwell Lowrey brought a message based on "Canada Challenges the Church."

She graphically pictured the work among the non-Anglo Saxon populations, Mrs. Lowrey told of the stations at Montreal the service being accomplished by W.M.S. workers at each, small but all needy fields besides. She gave special instances of work at Stadacona, Halifax, Greenville, medical work W.M.S. doctors and nurses are doing, the church has meant to many people. Mrs. Lowrey also referred to the work among the refugees and stressed the light that brings joy and gladness to folks all over, and the great need our personal evangelism.

Miss Lowrey told how welcome to the hospital at Truxton and our W.M.S. boys are there and surely our W.M.S. work is doing much to alleviate pain and suffering and to make better days for this Canada of ours.

At the Truxton boys school there were 17 boys and Mrs. Lowrys said eleven nationalities were represented all trying to make Canada Christian.

The government is always glad to have the W.M.S. do work in the Indian children and at Portage La Prairie school work and farming are combined.

Mrs. Lowrys also told of various groups of Japanese who are Canadians and who belong to one of our industry groups.

During this year we will pass through many days and we must be willing to help along the work of the Kingdom.

The G.G.I.T. girls gathered the offering which was dedicated by Mrs. Cornelius of Napanee.

Tribute voiced.

Mrs. Stafford paid tribute to the ten members of the executive who are going off the list and tendered these ladies thanks for their faithfulness and read their names.

The president also extended thanks to Holloway Street United Church officials on behalf of the courtesy committee.

Mrs. R. Farnsworth read two memorials re Belleville Young Senior types more attractive and second re having "The Treasurer's department separated from Christian Citizenship."

Messages from the younger groups were given by Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Finlay.

The Mission Band awards for the seventh consecutive year goes to Mount Pleasant Mission Band Belleville and for the sixth time to Ellsworth while several Mission Bands are receiving gold, silver, red, green stars and Band certificates. These will be sent out at a later date.

Advancing with department secretaries was presented by Miss Burnett, Mrs. Hollins, Mrs. Hoyle, Mrs. Way and Mrs. MacMullen.

The National Anthem was sung and Rev. Whallam closed the meeting with prayer.

An international conference in London this fall to draw up the charter for the proposed organization was tentatively agreed upon, representatives of five American farm groups endorsed the idea, already favored by the presidents of the British and Canadian organizations.

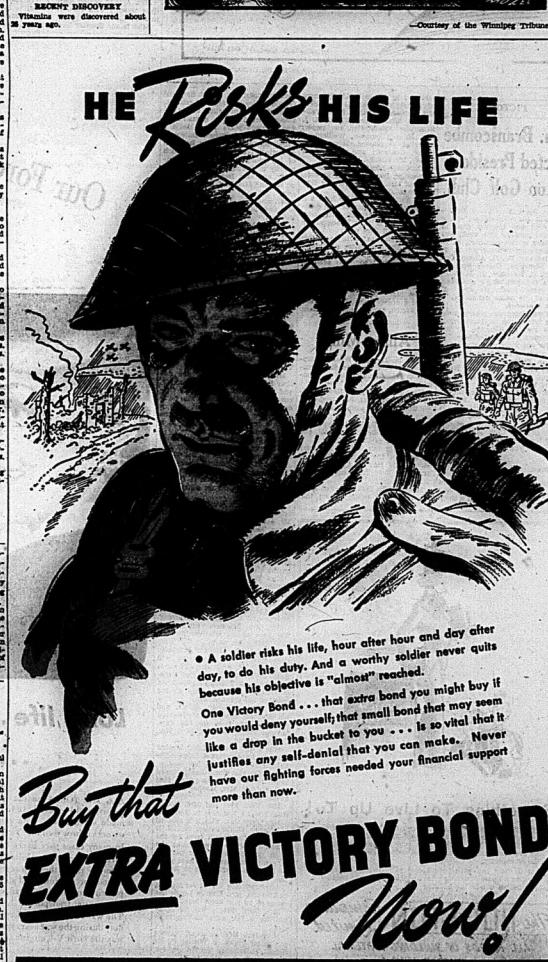
Mission Work in Industrial Centres and Outlying Districts Yields Fine Results Says Speaker

By FLORENCE MacMULLEN

Mrs. C. Maxwell Lowrys, Home Mission Executive Secretary of Canada Board, brought a stirring message to those attending the W.M.S. annual meeting in the city on Thursday. She said never in Canada's history have so many people been on the move and she paid tribute to all those in uniform and also to those who have given any much of themselves for us. So many young men and women are missed the church in their communities at home but now by serving they are being shown the way by our church members.

Special workers of our W.M.S. have been sent to various centres to give whatever assistance they could. She particularly mentioned Miss Mabel Willows and her work at Malarnic and Nobel. When the task was too great an S.O.S. was sent out across Canada so our workers, allies and eleven young women were given a special six weeks' course of training and following their course they served valiantly in needful places.

Miss Mary Lalchell carried on work at Sarnia and by personal organization and visiting a church was finally built at this point. At Windsor seven industrial schools were organized among women and children.



Mrs. Lowrys graphically pictured the work accomplished by Mr. Amos in war time work among the Japs along the Alaska Highway and Mr. Richards who is called the Chaplain to the Burma Road of Canada."

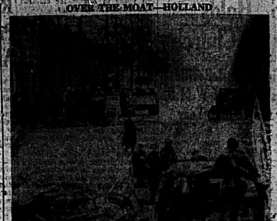
Work has also been started among the trailer camps at Malton.

She also outlined the special responsibility of the W.M.S. as we seeks in special rehabilitation plans for demobilized men.



Her closing thought was "Christ is depending on us for the glorious message of His life to go out to others" and her message will long ring in our hearts."

Drive Seen Shaping to Write Boundary Guarantees into Peace-Shaping Parley

By FLORA LEWIS

Washington, April 20 — (AP) — A drive among smaller powers to write boundary guarantees into any peace-keeping organization today appeared to be taking form.

Such a recommendation will likely be made at San Francisco either by one of the Latin American countries — which secured similar assurances in the recent Act of Chapultepec — or by a British Dominion, probably New Zealand.

The demand for territorial guarantees would include a definition of aggression and go hand-in-hand with the expected United States proposal to empower the assembly of the projected peace agency to review treaties.

Adoption of the guarantees would change the proposed league's fundamental obligation. Instead of providing simply an international pledge to decide when sanctions should be imposed, the organization would be obligated to use the world police force it might create, as it decided that aggression existed.

Accepted Idea at Meeting

The United States accepted the frontier-guarantee idea at Mexico City last month with the reservation that the Act of Chapultepec be made to fit into the projected world peace system.

At the same time, several of the countries outside the four sponsoring powers — Britain, the United States, Russia and China — have worked out formulas designed to secure a larger role in decisions of peace and war. A strong reaction has crystallized against the old Dumbarton Oaks formula which would give the league's security council power to bind all members to send their forces into action.

Canadian spokesmen at the recent Commonwealth Conference in London were reported to have suggested that a two-third assembly vote be required.

Polish Question to Fore

Foreign Secretary Eden, Foreign Commissar Molotov and State Secretary Stettinius are slated to seek agreement on these and other issues this weekend, before they travel to the west coast for the United Nations conference opening next Wednesday.

Efforts will centre on breaking the deadlock over formation of a new representative Polish government, a move agreed upon at Yalta but stalled after twelve days of negotiations in Moscow.

Russia's apparent determination to stick by its guns was seen in Moscow dispatches, but might soften, as some army newspaper Red Star as saying that failure to fortify the provisional government at San Francisco "has evoked the indignation of the Polish people."

Long life . . . low upkeep . . . the Ford V-8 Engine

ALL THE FORDS on the road today are growing old—there have been no new ones made since 1942. The amazing thing to owners is how well they've stood up.

In many cases they haven't had the best of care, for many of the skilled mechanics who formerly tuned them up regularly are in the armed forces, and Ford dealers must give priority to the maintenance and servicing of essential transport.

The way Ford cars have kept on doing their duty during the war years speaks well for the way the Ford V-8 engine is engineered and built. Its rugged simplicity has meant low upkeep cost. Its fuel economy has made thousands of Canadians thankful they owned a Ford when the war came on.

Will the post-war Ford be powered with the same V-8 engine? Yes, a V-8 with all the battle-tested refinements resulting from the war years. Continuously since 1942 Ford of Canada engineers have developed new refinements to enhance the performance of the V-8 engine in the war zones. In the post-war models all these engineering advancements will be offered to you at once.

Graphic Picture of German Atrocities Now Being Obtained As Allies Sweep Across Reich

London, April 21 — (CP) — The grisly record of Hitlerism's savage persecution continued to mount today as Allied armies swept on through Germany. Word that yet another concentration camp of the type of Belsen, Dachau, Buchenwald and Mauthausen, has been liberated, one by one, by advancing Allied troops.

The latest Minister Churchill, the Allies have learned German from the night-mare of the Nazi hierarchy in the Reich's mercenary, in the thousands of execution squads that have, during the past twenty months than five years of war, will be made to pay for the crimes. The Prime Minister said yesterday that, with President Truman and Premier Stalin, he soon will issue a formal statement.

Delegation Leaves London

The British parliamentary delegation, which is to attend the first view of German atrocities left London by air today. The Canadian delegation, a member of the party, collapsed after a period of food poisoning and had to be hospitalized and could not leave.

His place was taken by another labor member, Samuel Silverman, a Jew, who is now ready for the trip to Germany in 30 minutes.

One of the most infamous camps set up by the Germans was at Lublin in Poland, liberated by the Russians last year. There, thousands of Polish men, women and children were found to have been killed and other bodies cremated. Before death, the victims were forced to move their clothes which then were distributed to the German population. A warehouse was found full of thousands of pairs of shoes, intended for shipment to Germany.

Many Victims Found

On the western front, comparable horrors were uncovered with liberation of the notorious Buchenwald prison camp there, the bodies of hundreds of Nazi victims were found. United States and American troops found a large part of the atrocities. They were forced to visit the camp and see the bodies before the burial of the victims. Most died of starvation and beatings. Some of the victims were found to be unbelievably emaciated.

The BBC said today that Buchenwald, a labor camp established in 1940, was reported from Stockholm to have been used as a death factory as the liberating American forces approached. Between 7,000 and 10,000 prisoners were shot, axed and machine-gunned on the night Germany now is believed to be in turmoil.

Stories of Death, Terror

Similar stories of death and torture are coming from many prison camps liberated in recent weeks by the Allies. All were the same—death by shooting, gas or cremation; wanton torture by Nazi guards in helpless prisoners whose resistance had been lowered by years of starvation diet and regular floggings.

One of the many members of German atrocities was Rudolf Mackpuit, released from imprisonment in Salzgitz, told yesterday how Nazi guards, one day before the United States 1st Army captured the city, turned to death more than 300 Russian, Polish and French prisoners. The prisoners were locked in huts, gasoline was poured around them and set afire.

Gen. Eisenhower, Allied Commander-in-Chief, said that "new discoveries," particularly in Germany, far surpass anything previously

Ontario Liberals To Issue Manifesto

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—Mitchell Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, announced in a speech Thursday night that Ontario Liberals would issue an election manifesto which would put them on record as 6-a re-construction party with particular attention paid to the rehabilitation of returned men and to the assisted youth.

The manifesto, Mr. Hepburn said in addressing a nomination meeting, would be issued either Friday or Saturday.

Mr. Hepburn said his return to the Liberal fold was decided after Premier Drew's "unwarranted attack on the French-Canadian people" in his radio address of Aug. 9 last.

"I am an Imperialist, but I am not a nasty Imperialist, if you know what I mean, and I am not a Tory believe that we are a master race. The Premier (Mr. Drew) says that he and his type are better than any race suffered by the Russian race theories that brought Germany to ruin.

"Why, at the outset I didn't quite understand this family bonus. I thought some nuts are on the right track to help the children. We are going to see to it that not only the little children, but also the expectant mothers, are taken care of. Throughout their life you are going to make our youth the best cared for in the world."

Hamilton, April 21 — (CP) — Premier Drew of Ontario last night told a dinner meeting of the Chedoke Chapter, Imperial Order Daughter of the Empire that, strike as its achievements have been in two world wars, the order needs an even greater challenge in the post-war era to "remember in the cause of strengthening the ties of empire."

"If is a time for us to build on the high lessons of the past and apply it to the future," he said. "We live in great times; we will be called upon to build the peace on the victory won at such great sacrifice. Your order has an important part to play in that."

All Canadians should show their faith and pride in the British Commonwealth of free nations and their loyalty to its symbol, the King, and remember how close Hitler's thirst for world domination came to realization in 1940 when Britain stood alone to save the Empire and the World.

The meeting was held in conjunction with the 25th anniversary of the chapter. Almost 600 women from all parts of the Province, attended.

Concentration Camp Presents Scene Of Horror as Canadians Take Over

BY DOUGLAS CRANDON
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Germany, April 21 — (CP) — Canadian troops, some of the Wehrmacht's most infamous camp guards, the organization of German's most ruthless S.S. men already has been smashed in Holland, Belgium, Italy, Poland in brutality, starvation and death.

Here are the living shadows of 100 German soldiers who failed their army. They have been dying at the rate of one a day since the 1st Canadian Army captured them a week ago and are expected to die at the rate of one a day for a long time to come.

Westerwede, just south of the Kiel Canal in Northwest Germany, is one of the many concentration camps the Germans maintained outside their own country for the punishment and torture of foreigners. It was set up originally as a camp for Russian prisoners.

There were 1,000 soldier prisoners in the camp when the guards evacuated, all who were able to walk, leaving only the 100 worst wounded behind. Some of them will be met employed on camp duties, Wrenke said.

I walked through the hospital wards and found many men suffering of most whose condition convinced me there no atrocities of which the Germans, and to the nastiest kind.

Hitler Reaches 56th Birthday

London, April 21 —(CP)— Adolf Hitler reaches his 56th Birthday Friday without the fanfare of past years, Berlin radio said today and there was doing was a mystery.

The only hope held out to their followers was the broadcast declaration by the German D.N.B. agency that Hitler still "lives for a great and exalted mission without the aims which have been set by Hitler."

The few German newspapers still publishing carried articles accusing Germany gained wealth and power under Hitler and Nazism.

The plot was to "destroy in a world of peace until Roosevelt's agitations got a deep hold on all this and brought its into our present position," D.N.B. said.

Hitler himself was depicted as a man who had tried to achieve European peace.

The Tokyo radio quoted Gen. Sakada, of the Japanese army as saying the whole Japanese nation congratulated Hitler. Sakada also declared Hitler faced a fearful crisis, but would never be defeated.

Yankees Also Win Four in Row by Downing Washington

By JACK HAND

Extra base power by the New York Giants' sidekicks kept the Polo Grounders in the National League lead today although manager Mel Ott still blasted away at starting pitcher go the route.

The Giants supported their fond-ed admirers in winning four of their first five games with a display of slugging that found the more ardent boosters comparing the Phil Weintraub - Ernie Lombardi - Ott combination with the famous "Yankee Murderers' Row."

Harry Feldman might have gone all the way in yesterday's 10-4 victory over Brooklyn at the Polo Grounds opener but Ott took no chances and decided to hit for a pinch hitter. Phil WeWintraub ran two into the stands, each with a man on, and Ernie Lombardi drove home two more runs to up his R.B.I. total to 13.

Meanwhile, the New York Yankees took to the road for a delayed Presidential game at Washington and earned their fourth straight victory, 6-5, at Mickey Cochrane's expense.

Cochrane's slugging White Sox ran their streak to three in a row by edging the champion St. Louis Browns, 3-2, on Roy Schalk's double in the tenth.

Rip Sewell became the 11th active Major League pitcher to hit the big road over the Pittsburgh Charlie Gehringer shoo hive, 5-4. Bob Elliott helped along with a two-run homer.

Largest turnout of the "second" openers was at Detroit where 28,357 saw Cleveland's Steve Gromek shackle the Tigers with six hits while the Indians hopped on Stubby Overmire for all runs of a 5-3 triumph.

Butch Newman's dramatic round tripper with two on and two out in the ninth saved the Braves a 6-5 nod over the Phillies' Charley Schanz. Rookie Charley Conerr, up from Atlanta, received credit for his first big league decision.

Franklin Hayes' two-run homer in the first started the Philadelphia A's off to a 3-3 margin over Monday's Washington Senators. Dutch Leonard, playing under setting manager Del Baker in the absence, through injury, of Joe Cronin.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)—Word of sports from northern in the Allied armies in Germany recently have been devoid of sensational performances or sportsmen's war casualty like Olympic Games. Interesting exceptions, however, to some of the sergeants — one a Canadian and the other in the American Army.

The odd aspect of one of the sergeants is that he's holding the rank of sergeant although he's still in his early twenties. He is Sgt. Sidney Galbraith, the Negro all-American track star who, despite the Nazis' racial theories, showed the Germans how fast a Negro can run.

Galbraith, of Chicago, was the first Negro to win the Big Ten 100-yard dash in the mammoth Nebraska-Kansas relays.

The Canadian non-com was reaching the top in the game for stray snipers when he noticed a group of smiling Canadians looking up at him from a picture. The pictures were the Canadian 1932 Los Angeles Olympic track team and the German caption under the photo had some of the names spelled with the Fuehrer's finger.

Mary Priest of Vancouver was listed as "Mary Yiest"; Dave Galbraith's Mary Vanderfield was "Vanderfeld," while Myrtle Cook was given name appeared as the German-spelled "Myrtee." Others in the picture were the team's lithe Mary—Isabel Fleed as Eva Dawes, Alda Wilson and Alexandrine Obed.

Cancellation of the Olympics in 1940 and 1944 brought to mind one of the many stories that the mild-chested memories of Olympic participants. One of the stories involves sprinter Fanny (Bobby) Rosenfeld, ace sports columnist for the Toronto Globe and Mail, when she was at the Amsterdam games.

Fanny was escorted to a dance one evening by Silvesrio Cheradina, umpire in Holland, by a Dutch millionaire. The Dutchman and Fanny played a trick on the Canadian team by tipping the band leader to play "The Maple Leaf Forever" over and over. They succeeded in getting the Germans completely jump to attention. The Canadian team really enjoyed it. The Germans — well!

Discovery of the printed tribute to the Canadian maple leaf coincidement in which Herr Hitler found himself after Cornelius Johnson, as a Negro won the high jump. Der Fuehrer had decided to receive Johnson, but when the latter refused to shake hands with him, but after Johnson's victory Herr Hitler left. His displeasure increased when Owens won the 100-metre dash.

Hitler also ignored the American winners, the whole Nazi crew being completely annihilated in a tottered in 1936 — rather than 1945. His famous "inotition" led him to underestimate.

He had Lois Lenz, a German, beat Jesse Owens in the broad jump, and congratulated him on finishing second. The German can be hurdled back to the Canadians.

However, the tottering of German supremacy on the track in nine years ago has come about. If Galbraith's present rank is any indication, he will have to be satisfied with an "also ran" participant again.

CANUCKS THINK THERE'S A CHANCE TO EVEN SERIES

Possible Askworth and Toole May Not Play in Today's Game

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—Moose Jaw Canucks trail Toronto L. Mitchells Majors 3-1 in the best-of-seven Memorial Cup hockey finals but they expressed confidence they will even the series in today's fourth game.

Canucks dropped the first and third games and won the second and another set-back today would leave them slim hope of taking the cup to Saskatchewan for the first time since 1926, when officials said they still are not convinced St. Mitka have a stronger team. They scored 4-3 victory in the second overtime period of the series.

Canucks, who won the cup first Mile since 1926, were also confident.

"The team is keyed up for the game," an official said, "and they realize that unless they play their best hockey the Mitchell team is hard to beat. And they don't want to be men now after getting this far."

ARTHUR'S

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 982
BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

As Brandeis from trees, bridge practices stem; from basic rules, the basic rule for choice of suits is: With distributional hands, first show the longer, with equal lengths, the higher rank.

The basis for a one-bid suit is four cards. Recall result of that. We shows in our card lounge. Compared with practically any other suits, rabbit or suits or back or w bids show lengths of suits.

Suppose you redid a suit before showing your second suit. That is your way of showing six cards in your redistributable suit and four in your biddable suit.

Thus you may bid twice in succession in spades or hearts or diamonds or clubs. And then you bid your second suit. In such manner that promises six and four; length in their rank.

Suppose you bid a suit once; then bid a different suit once; then rebid your first mentioned suit. That is your way of showing five cards in your rebiddable suit and four in your biddable suit.

Thus you may bid twice in succession in spades or hearts or diamonds or clubs. And then you bid your second suit. In such manner that promises six and four; length in their rank.

Suppose you bid a suit once; then bid a different suit once; then rebid your first mentioned suit. That is your way of showing five cards in your rebiddable suit and four in your biddable suit.

Thus you may bid once in spades or hearts or diamonds or clubs; then once in a different suit; then once more in your first suit. In such manner you show five and four. Despite their rank.

Suppose you bid a suit once and then bid a different suit. If the first mentioned suit is of higher rank than the second suit, the second suit is not longer than the first.

But if the second suit is of higher rank than the suit mentioned first, it must be longer; therefore the lower ranking suit is shown to be five cards and the higher ranking suit four cards.

♠A K Q 5
♥J 6
♦7 2
♣A 9 8 6 5

With that hand you first bid club and then spade to show five clubs and four spades. Because you did not show the higher rank first. Partners in cahoots show their length in suits.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 21 — (CP) — A dozen experts for the last 6 months have been compiling the "fingerprints" of thousands of race horses on which persons will win and lose money during this season which opened Easter Monday.

Some of the recognition experts have kept doing their job for more than half a century. They make up charts containing dots, crosses, and long and short strokes into a series of hieroglyphic signs which enable the expert eye to identify each of the 5,000 or 6,000 horses running every normal year. By the methods, together with the horse's colouring, every animal can be identified just as surely as Scotland Yard can identify a person by fingerprints.

Each of these spotters has a copy of the annual "Horses in Training," containing the name of every horse, with age, sex, color and markings. each name the spotter adds the distinguishing signs.

In these signs a cross represents the patch of white found on most racers' foreheads. A dot stands for a small patch and a long stroke for a blaze. Dots and strokes at each end of a horizontal line represent small or large white patches on feet and hind legs, and the horizontal line represents the horse itself.

One of the spotters is 70-year-old Bob Brook. He has been able to identify sixty one of the 30,000 British horses which have walked past him on Newmarket Heath, whether in line or clustered together for a flat gallop. A spotter of Bob's ability can identify through field glasses any horse up to two miles away on a clear day.

Bill Skrine, a Commando major, was so determined that a war wound in one leg should not prevent him riding that he voluntarily underwent an operation to have his unwounded leg shortened.

"Crimercal," racing writer for the London Daily Mirror, wrote from the story of Skrine, an Irishman who rode his own horse, Fast Horn, as the season's steeplechasing finished at Cheltenham a few days ago, "is the strongest I have ever heard."

Skrine was wounded in the Sicily landing and for 18 months it was problematical whether amputation of the leg would be necessary. When it eventually mended it was two inches shorter than the good one. So Skrine underwent an operation to have the good leg broken and shortened two inches.

The story hasn't a perfect ending, however. Fast Horn was an "also ran," finishing fifth in a field of 10 in a three-mile chase.

The fabulously wealthy Maharaja Gaekwar of Baroda has arrived in England to watch his animals run in the racing classics. With him came the champion jockey of India, Edgar Britt, an Englishman who also rode the Maharaja's string.

The Gaekwar has Her Highness entered for the 1,000 Guineas and the Oaks, and Gaekwar's Pride and Baroda Squadron in the Derby. The horses, of course, have been trained in England.

Last year the Maharaja, 36, married and father of eight children, met Sevi Devi, 21, daughter of the Maharaja of Pithapuram. She, too was married but could not be divorced under Hindu law. So she embraced Mohammedanism and obtained a divorce. Then she and the Gaekwar married in Bombay after Sevi Devi had resumed her Hindu faith.

A Canadian soldier, J. K. Kosikoon, points from the jutting ramp of the above German V-1 bomb-launching site, captured by Canadian forces during clean-up operations in the first-gun territory north of Eotphen, Germany. Hidden in a wooded area, it had not been damaged by Allied bombs.

Stop his cause to receive the freedom of the city and to help honor two of his colleagues, the First Lord of the Admiralty, R. V. Alexander, and Labor Minister Bevin, who are to receive degrees of Doctor of Law from the University.

Concerning the five past years, which saw Britain rise from the fear of invasion to the heights of near-victory in Europe, Mr. Churchill said simply:

"I had an absolutely united nation behind me and had the support of colleagues as loyal as any personnels in British hse ever had."

Praises Mr. Bevin

He paid particular tribute to Mr. Bevin — the man who perhaps will oppose him when Britain soon holds the first general election in 10 years.

"In Mr. Bevin," he said, "I have found a colleague who handled the most intricate and difficult problems of maintenance, not only of one strike but on four occasions, and who has laid a heavy, but in many cases not an unwelcome, hand upon every human being in the Kingdom."

The Prime Minister added:

"I never could have gotten through this business if I had not had with me a powerful band of representative of the nation, ... by a loyalty which rose far above party politics."

PRACTICALLY DEFEATED

Paris, April 21 —(CP)— Gen. Eisenhower said last night in an order of the day that German morale of the rest were "tottering on the threshold of defeat."

The order, issued after the Supreme Allied Commander conferred yesterday with Field Marshal Montgomery only a few miles from the front, called the great Allied victory in the Ruhr a fitting prelude to the final drive to crush what is left of the German army.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the headlines on his way to the sporting page, and I was starting to think about beginning to do my homework, and ma noticed the hole in the knee of my new pair of blue serges. How that's the last straw on the camel's back. What's the sense of buying you anything new if you're going to turn it into shreds and patches before it's a week old?

Well O, ma, I mean jimminy, the lady had a perfectly good case, as I said, and ma said, Now dont talk in fridtles. If anybody chased you, you must of been doing something you shouldn't of, or else why should anybody chase you, or at least, say lady? she said.

Well good night, ma, it's no crime for a couple of fellows to pretend they're buttlers and run around flapping their arms for wings and making smelling sounds among imaginary flowers by sniffing up through their noses, is it, ma? I said, and ma said, Well, it sounds innocent enough, but then everything does the way you tell it, and then again I must admit that certain women seem to have a way of acting as if they couldn't bare to see children enjoying themselves.

That's a way this lady must of been, all right, I said, and pop said, Something tells me that by the bottom of this story is shrouded in verdigrus. What did this lady in question have to do with the butterflies in question?

Well, nothing much, except she waltzed passed me and Pods thinking and she had so much perfume on her it smelt as if she must of spilt the whole bottle by mistake, so that gave us the idea of the flowers and that's how we got the idea of the butterflies, so we ran passed her and back again, flapping our wings and sniffing with our noses, and she must of got the idea that she had something to do with it after it happened a few times, I said.

Meaning that was when she started to chase us and I fell down and put the hole in my new cowboy pants.

AT THE CAPITOL — Frances Langford is doing some expert piloting of the showboat in "Dixie Jamboree," in which she is co-starred with Guy Kibbee. Eddie Quillan seems more interested in the lovely lady pilot than just where they're going. "The musical comes next at the Capitol Theatre with the added bit "Double Indemnity."

Say 20,000 Prisoners of Camp Save Selves From Massacre By Note Written to Director

Paris, April 21 (AP)—Frenchmen liberated from the horror camp at Buchenwald said Friday that prisoners themselves prevented a massacre of 20,000 survivors of the rigors of the camp. They gave this account:

An American armored forces approached the camp the commander there received an order to put all the remaining prisoners to death.

The General was preparing to carry out the order when he received a note from a group of the prisoners which stated: "If you spare the lives of the prisoners of Buchenwald we will testify that you have been a model camp director."

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 15

"If I only knew what to leave out!" he thought. "All design is an abstraction. You've got to omit the which facts cannot reach other, then whatever remains would be the pattern of the murder and the murderer."

Carefully, he read every word. When he had finished he turned back to the exhibits on the floor and it was then he noticed something in the evidence he had not noticed before. Such a small thing! No wonder he said. Foyle had missed it every time they went over the file of the case.

Again he flipped over the file of the bulky manuscript, paused, re-read a page, and frowned. Was this the "message in code" he had been looking for?

The idea came in a flash of illumination as sudden as lightning.

Murderers who seemed outwardly normal were well known to forensic psychiatry. The signs of abnormality were slight enough to escape their closest friends for years. And self-possession was always a marked trait in psychotics. Even poor Crippen was calm to the last.

"But it can't be—it mustn't be!" He was startled to find he had spoken aloud.

Basil called Ann Claude on the telephone.

"You remember saying that the nurse was clean and tidy on the day of the cocktail party?"

"Why, yes." Ann's voice was puzzled. "There was no mud on her sweet scented flowers it was quite lovely and Mrs. Jowett asked Gregg to open a window."

"Was that before or after Gregg announced Philip Leach?"

"Let me see. . . I think it was just before. Yes, I'm sure it was. Basil left Headquarters and took a taxi to the public library at 42nd Street. Downstairs in the newspaper room he accosted a pallid boy in shirt sleeves.

"The 'Times' for this year? On that shelf. Help yourself. New! We ain't got anybody to help 'im 'ere down!"

Basil spent a strenuous hour carrying huge bound files to a reading table. He went sleuthing through the last eight months issues of the paper he usually neglected — the society pages.

"Oct. 4—

"Latest studio portrait of Miss Katherine Jocelyn, whose will be presented to society in December at a dance to be given by her stepmother, Mrs. Gerald Jocelyn . . .

"Nov. 16—

"Among those who reached New York yesterday on the Queen Mary were Elmer Burton Berry of Chicago, Miss Amethyst Jocelyn sister to Liberia, Mrs. Gerald Jocelyn of New York and Paris, and her stepdaughter, Miss Katherine Jocelyn. Zeke Pasquale, artist, and Liza Liberia, the latter of a leading woman's magazine. . . .

"Dec. 1—

"Dec. 12—

"Miss Lillian Hope will take part in the Countess Pat Castiglione's in the historical pageant to be given on Jan. 6th, for the benefit of the Chinese war orphans. Miss Katherine Jocelyn, whose graceful dance took place two days ago, has given up the part for reasons of health. . . .

Basil shivered a little as he recalled that Kitty was dead when that paragraph appeared in print. "Reasons of health. . . ." But of course, the moment Kitty disappeared, Rhoda would cancel all immediate engagements.

He went upstairs to the magazine room. "Have you a fashion magazine devoted to—er—fashion and society?"

The librarian brought him a number of highly glazed magazines. In which it was impossible to tell the articles from the advertisements. Pictures and photographs of Kitty Jocelyn all through the spring and summer issues. A few portraits proclaimed her as a bourn in Cannes and her arrival in Nantes. Then the first paragraphs of any length devoted to her had been published in February over the signature of "Lowell Cabot."

"According to all rumors, the Jocelyn-Leach engagement will be something quite out of the ordinary. . . ."

Basil smiled grimly.

". . . Not the least interesting aspect of the affair is the fact that it will be Kitty Jocelyn's first public appearance in this country. Those who saw her in Cannes last summer are prophesying that she will be the most beautiful debutante of the coming season. Kitty—her real name is Katherine but every one calls her 'Kitty'—is tall and charmingly slender. The many black and white photographs of her publish in this connection do not do justice to her coloring. She has rather fastidious taste in dress. . . .

"There was something peculiarly pitiful about that," thought Basil. Basil plowed on until he had read every published reference to Kitty Jocelyn. Then he sighed and forced.

When he had finished, he sat still, watching the pigeons strutting on the sooty parapet outside.

One by one details fell neatly into place, like a process of crystallization. What had been a shapeless unorganized mass, was becoming a pattern. It was hard to realize that his own mind was doing the trick. It seemed as if some facile hand began to move and arrange themselves while he sat passive, watching the result.

His body was tired by this time, but his mind refused to let him rest. He went out into the early winter twilight, hailed a cruising taxi and gave the address of the Bureau of Records.

"I want to see the death certificate of Jane Jowett. She died last May."

In a few moments he was looking at a printed form filled in with rather untidy handwriting.

"Cause of death: hyperpyrexia (toxic)history . . . cause of death: patent nostrum containing hydrocyano-amino-benzoic 1,3,5,6."

Basil made a note of the doctor's name and took another taxi uptown to a private hospital. He sent in his card with a scribbled message to the house surgeon. A fussy, voluble little man came bustling into the ante-room.

"Dr. Willing? But do you do! I remember the case quite well. It aroused some interesting features." He spoke with a certain pride. "I was fascinated by the sudden, board-like heat rigor, but there was no autopsy, because it was such a plain case, and I got a positive Derrien from the urine before death. Just what is it you want to know?"

"What!" The house surgeon had been interrupted in a purely medical question. He looked at Basil curiously, then, rang for his secretary and asked for a file on the case.

The secretary returned with the file, the doctor adjusted his glasses and chuckled. "The names have slipped my memory. I believe it or not, it was actually called 'X-Wrip'."

"The name X-Wip was not published in the newspaper at the time?"

"No." The doctor chuckled again. "Not the name of the nostrum, at all that!"

"And when the Jocelyns case appeared in the papers, it didn't occur to you to connect the two?"

Basil didn't wait for explanations. He left the house surgeon behind him, he reached the too exquisite offices of the De Luxe Advertising Agency. A young man in a double-breasted waistcoat welcomed him with the friendliness, cordiality manner of a salesman and advertising men.

"Dear, I've arranged those documents of Kitty Jocelyn's did you deal with her personally or at the office?" Jowett frowned.

"The first time we got her address through a Park Avenue shop house. After that we always dealt with her personally."

"Did she ever sign endorse X-Wrip?"

"Oh, yes. Kitty was the first, but there were a dozen girls on the list altogether. Each one from a different part of the country."

"May I have a copy of that list for the official attorney?"

"Certainly. We're always glad to co-operate with the authorities. But I do hope—I mean to say—I'm sure you'll understand that we don't want the name of our firm involved in anything the least bit unpleasant—or don't you know, We—"

The young man's voice trailed away. Basil was frowning at the typed lines of names. There was one he recognized:

"Boston—Isobel Archer."

"If any one of certain there will be another murder tonight" Sebek's face was hidden in the shadow cast by his lighted desk lamp, but his voice was anxious. It would not be a good thing for Boston—too much sympathy with the defendant.

"Because the conditions are exactly the same locale is the same the night Kitty Jocelyn was murdered," explained Basil. "And criminals tend to repeat the same automatically under the same external conditions. I had a shell-shock patient who had been captured by a German and escaped by killing the German as they stood at through a little wood. Afterward he would wander about alone with one other person in a little wood the impulse to kill overcame him. Case like that explain why the French police believe that reconstructing the circumstances of a crime has such emotional effect on the criminal it may force him to confess."

"But that doesn't explain why he motive for his crimes—he was insane. In this case, there's no question of insanity. No sane criminal would repeat the same crime in the same way."

"Is there such a thing as a sane crime, or a sane criminal?" returned Basil. "Even when there's a logical motive, a criminal shows the tendency to repeat his crime in the same way indefinitely. You know as well as I do that professional criminals are very slaves of habit and tradition that the police learn to identify the life history of the criminal by the technique of his crime. That's 'autocatalism' a chemical term, meaning of mental debility. Poisoners show it particularly. They use the same poison over and over again. We are dealing with a poisoner tonight. And there is no mistake for forward."

"But I thought morphine—"

"Only because you take it in advance over a long period. If you take it for the first time after a fatal dose of morphine, it doesn't do the slightest good."

"Then you should have warned the Archers instead of coming to me!"

"I did the moment I learned that Isobel Archer" had endorsed X-Wrip last spring. I telephoned Police Commissioner Archer and tried to make him understand the danger his niece was facing. He finally promised to keep her from taking any more X-Wrip. But he wouldn't take any other precautions. He complained that I was trying to 'pull' psychology. He told me that the first time I met him during the war. General Archer was one of those old-fashioned fellows who believed that all shell-shocked soldiers should be shot for cowardice and malingering, instead of being sent to mental hospitals. . . ."

Sebek's face fell and rose. "The sooner we get to the Archers' the better. We'll pick up Foyle on the way."

The inspector was not easily shocked, but he felt a normal to shake him.

Isobel Archer sat at her dressing table studying the flower in her hair. Would it have been better a little more to the left? It was too late to change. Just what a hairdresser had gone and she would not leave such an important decision to her maid. She was surprised to find that her hands were cold and trembling. It was absurd to think so much about her coming-out ball.

There was a tap on the door and Celia came in.

"Darling, you say she thinks it better for you not to have anything before the ball—not even champagne?"

"How silly! I always take black coffee before a party and I must have it tonight."

"But Maudie says—"

"Celia, please, dear! Emily, I want it and I'm going to have it!"

Celia shrugged and went downstairs to the kitchen. The coffee had been started in a small percolator before Mrs. Archer told her that Isobel was not to eat or drink anything. Mrs. Archer obviously thought the request unreasonable, but she did it in a huffed by her embarrassed manner. It was the old general who had insisted on it as persistently without any explanation. Celia had no respect for his medical views and she hesitated about ignoring his orders.

She carried the tray up the back stairs and hurried along the corridor. When she tapped again on Isobel's door, it was opened so suddenly she almost dropped the tray. She threw an indignant look at the general. It was that old Mrs. Jowett had something to do with the arrangements for the ball, and as the hotel this evening. Just what Celia didn't know, or she might have wondered why Mrs. Jowett was not at the hotel now.

"But, madame, I might just as well—"

"I'll take it."

Celia handed over the tray and went back to the kitchen.

"Here is your coffee, my dear," said Mrs. Jowett, "Shall I pour it out?"

The question was rhetorical. Mrs. Jowett had already poured the coffee and was coming toward the bed with the cup in her hand.

Isobel took it thinking: "The old girl looks really excited this evening. I should think she'd be used to coming-out parties by this time."

Aloud she said, "Thank you. Is there any one else certain there or should it be a little more to the left?"

With flushed cheeks and brilliant eyes, Mrs. Jowett watched the girl drink the coffee.

"Drink your coffee, dear—before it gets cold," she said, archly.

"Did you put in sugar?"

"Oh, yes. Two lumps."

Isobel sipped the fiery nice of you to remember that I always take two lumps!"

They both heard steps and voices in the corridor. The door flew open, some one dashed at Isobel and she cried aloud as she felt the hot coffee on her bare throat and her tulle skirt.

And then her face shivered and changed as a face reflected in water shivers and changes when the water is stirred. From her lips came words that are sometimes heard on the lips of conventional women: words of hatred.

"I am glad I killed Kitty Jocelyn." Mrs. Jowett smoothed her skirt and smiled as she said it—the calm, motherly smile that had once made Inspector Foyle think of milk from Holstein's and newly baked bread. She was dictating her confession to Detective Dunt — one of the strangest confessions in the records of the Police Department.

"My husband died years ago—Janey—my daughter—was all I had in the world. But Kitty Jocelyn took my husband, and she was still as young as a child. I knew she worried about, but I didn't know that she was taking X-Wip. She died in convulsions after they had been in misery all night. She had not taken more than the one dose that the doctor ordered, but the doctor's told me that the drug was 'capricious.' I kept saying, 'Oh, Kitty, Kitty, why did you do it?' And she answered every time, 'I thought I'd be safe.' I'll be safe if a girl like Kitty Jocelyn said so. She was using it herself—she said so herself—she said so at the side statement. And I wanted to look the way she did in the picture, slim and modern. . . ."

Interesting Decision In County Court

An interesting decision was handed down Thursday by His Honor Judge Reynolds in the County Court action of Florence Pobert Vs. Elizabeth Pobert, the issue having originated from the village of Tweed over the effect of a rescinding of trade clause in an agreement for the sale of a beauty shop. The defendant, Elizabeth Pobert, in October 1942 sold her beauty shop and equipment at Tweed to the plaintiff and assigned to her the benefit of a restrictive covenant which purported to restrain the defendant from carrying on business in Tweed. The defendant, at the time of the sale to the plaintiff, agreed to purchase another beauty shop in Tweed, Ont. for the sum of $1,000 and to exchange a beauty shop for another party or parties. The defendant left Tweed to reside with her husband in Hamilton, but due to various circumstances he declined to return to Tweed where he had business interests, and opened a beauty and barber shop himself. This he did and engaged his wife, the defendant, and another lady trained to perform most of the duties in the beauty shop department of his business. The plaintiff contended that this constituted a violation of the terms of the agreement and commenced action against Mrs. Elizabeth Pobert. At the trial the evidence disclosed that Mrs. Pobert was employed by her husband in the same capacity as other employees, that he had opened the beauty shop and that his wife was not a manager of same. As there was no term in the covenant prohibiting the defendant from being employed by anyone, Judge Reynolds dismissed the action which will permit the defendant to continue as an employee of her husband.

The original agreement was drawn by the Toronto dealer himself and not by any solicitor. Mr. F. J. Conlin, K.C., acted for the defendant and Mr. Howard R. Pollwell for the plaintiff.

8th Victory Loan Opens Monday, April 23rd

This is the symbol of Canada's Eighth Victory Loan . . . the symbol of an opportunity and a challenge. Join the millions who will wear the investor's pin as a sign that they too have done their part to FINISH the job!

Is this Victory Loan different?

NO This Eighth Victory Loan which begins today is no different from each of the other seven before it.

The money millions of Canadians will lend becomes the tools and supplies of war—ammunition—armour—clothing—food—for our fighting men . . .

These dollars represent things we do without now in the cause of freedom—to assure the safety and sanctity of home—our loan to place beside their sacrifice!

Like the seven loans before it, this eighth is just a loan—not a gift—a loan backed by the soundest security in the world—an investment for the things they will need and we will want in the brighter tomorrow.

No, this Eighth Victory Loan is, in many ways, just like the seven before it in which Canadians have participated so fully.

YES In one way this loan is utterly different—different because it is infinitely more important than those other loans.

This time we are facing an enemy with his back to his last wall . . . an enemy who will stop at no frightfulness to damage us or to postpone his own defeat.

Therefore we must give our enemy no slightest chance to recover from the defeats being heaped upon him.

We must press on to FINAL Victory . . . backing our fighters to the very last . . . so there can be no doubt of the issue when we give the last great "heave."

But the essential point is a thing of the mind. Our effort must rise to a climax as our enemy's desperation rises . . . our support must match the fever pitch of the final battles. We here must feel it, as they over there know it! That is why this loan is different.

Eighth Victory Loan Objective . . . $1,350,000,000

1ST CANADIAN CORPS IN ITALY NOW IN GERMANY
RUSSIANS HOLD ONE-FOURTH GREATER BERLIN

Escape Corridor Now Narrowed to Less Than 5 Miles

Shells and Bombs Tumble Buildings into the Streets

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 23 — (AP) — Red Army troops held a tight grip on one-fifth to one-fourth of greater Berlin today and bored in from 2 sides toward the heart of the blazing capital now blanketed by shellfire and all but surrounded.

Moscow dispatches said Red banners fluttered from battered and smoking buildings in the capital and that Soviet storm units appeared to be only a few miles from the Wilhelmstrasse and from Under Den Linden and the Reichstag in the heart of the city.

There was only one way out, of Berlin — westward by way of Spandau — and unconfirmed reports said this escape corridor was being narrowed to little more than five miles.

To the south other Russian forces were within 15 miles or less of a junction with their American Allies.

A Ghastly Monument

Berlin was being transformed into a ghastly monument to smashed Nazi resistance as Soviet shells and bombs tumbled buildings into the streets, heaping new ruin on that accomplished by past Allied aerial blows.

By official Moscow account 21 of Berlin's districts, of 692-sixth of its total size, were in Red Army hands. The fighting men of Russia were back in Berlin for the first time since they occupied the city on the 1760 in the Seven Years' War.

The German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau reported Russian tanks and infantry in the heart of the city, and told of 3,000-2,000 residents crowded so closely in 400 underground shelters they could not be seated.

The Reds radio reported that Soviet troops had reached Under Den Linden and that fierce fighting was raging around the Brandenburger Tor in the area. Gen. Gen. Weidling's tanks and infantry in the Zimmerstrasse, which runs 10 blocks south of Under Den Linden, were the source of many of Berlin's newspaper plants.

The Swiss radio chimed in with a report that the Russians were fighting for the Anhalter railway station, about a mile south of the Brandenburger Tor, and Berlin's western city. Red Army troops were reported in the Moabit district, site of once a Communist centre.

Flames were raging through the Anhalter station, the Swiss report said.

Soviet Bulletin Conservative

The Soviet midnight war bulletin was more conservative than these accounts, but said 18 of Berlin's inner districts and three outer suburbs were cleared and that fighting was in progress in the area of the Berlin belt railway.

At least 10 Germans were killed in Berlin Sunday, and prisoners taken in the past five days mounted to 20,000, the Russians said.

As Red Army forces pounded through the city of Berlin, reports of stories to the south rolled as much as 21 miles across the Brandenburg plain, a Soviet broadcast that carried them into the Potsdam rail and road centre of Brandenburg, 27 miles northeast of bombshell Dresden.

Weather Forecast

Monaco and Rainy River: Fresh to strong winds; cloudy and cool with light snow or part rain. Tuesday, partly cloudy and cool with scattered snowflurries.

Manitoba: Strong winds; cloudy and moderately cold with light snowfalls or flurries. Tuesday, partly cloudy with scattered snowflurries and not much change in temperature.

Berlin Crumbling At Rate of Many Blocks an Hour

By DUNCAN HOOPER

Moscow, April 23 —(Reuters)— Berlin is crumbling before the Red Army assault at the rate of several blocks an hour. Darting and twisting through the streets with the skill of veteran street fighters, the Red Army troops are stacking German mines against buildings to blast any strongholds.

Soviet troops massed in the Weissensee district, three miles northeast of the city centre, have struck directly towards the river Spree where it flows through the city near Unter Den Linden. Their aim is to split the German forces north of the river.

Other flags are waiting to be hoisted including one of enormous size which a crack soviet Guards unit is carrying into the city with the intention of flying it over Hitler's chancellery. Big enough of it is still standing when the final break-through comes.

The Red Army has captured a German "secret weapon" — the armored train with the name "Berlin" etched into the plating—on the approaches to the German capital.

The battle continued throughout the night in the light of the fires with the Soviet Katiusha rocket batteries firing from positions in the ling note to the deep roar of the heavy guns and the constant crash of mortars.

Soviet artillery was moving up through the southeastern outskirts and was within range of the Tempelhof airfield as well as being able to become completely useless to the Luftwaffe.

The German capital—long familiar with the precision bombing of the A.A.F. and the U.S.A.A.F.—now is experiencing a new kind of terror. It is the close-in, point-blank bombing by Soviet midget planes which fly at almost roof-top level and deposit their loads with such

Lt. Col. Merritt, V.C., Had Grandstand View as Americans Took Leipzig

A Canadian Reception Centre, Southern England, April 23—(CP)—(Cable)—Recalled by Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C., of Vancouver, B. C., Canadian prisoners of war whom the war has been eight hours of blazing battle and nearly three years of prison-camp life returned last Friday from Germany to England.

Men from the Canadian Army regiments engaged in the great "rescue operation" which began on Aug. 18, 1942, were among the group of freed prisoners. There were men from the Essex Scottish, of Windsor, Ont., the South Saskatchewan regiment, Regina, and the Royal Regiment of Canada, Toronto; Les Fusiliers de Sherbrooke, Sherbrooke — but outstanding among them was the tall, muscular figure of Lt.-Col. Merritt.

Beginning to Live Again

This ship, a converted holding soldier who won the Empire's highest award for valor — first given to Canada during the war in this war — for fearless leadership on Dieppe's fire-swept beaches summed up the feelings of his men when he looked at the many English countrymade around this camp and said:

"We're all beginning to live again."

Enemy Resistance in Netherlands is Reported as Varying Moderate to Stoy

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the 1st. Canadian Army, April 23 (C.P. Cable) — The 1st. Canadian Army, to which the 1st. Canadian Corps has been joined in action, made advances of from one to four miles during the last 24 hours in its push north towards the German ports of Emden and Wilhelmshaven.

Gen. Crerar announced that the 1st. Canadian "and attached troops which have been serving in the Italian theatre of operations since 1943 have been transferred to the western European theatre where they have joined the 1st. Canadian Army."

Meanwhile the Canadian thrust northeastward into Holland has established and activity in western Holland has been restricted to patrolling along the Ems River—the so-called Grebbe line.

The enemy seems to have reorganized righ across his front and especially in west Holland where he has recovered from the surprise of the Canadian and Allied river crossing.

Polish troops who occupied Polsbroek and Oud Gastel, Holland yesterday progressed a mile farther, early last night to bridge the vital advance since yesterday to 4 miles.

Polish armor in a small-scale engagement firmly established itself in the area less than 2 miles northeast of Hulsterbrock, northeast of Papenburg, 20 miles southeast of Emden.

Progress in the 4th. Canadian Armored Division's Arnhem-Canal bridgehead was limited to a little more than half a mile by strenuous opposition. The South Alberta Regiment of Medicine Hat and Redcliff, Alta.

Best Off Enemy Attacks.

The Lake Superior Regiment of Port Arthur, Ont., which was pushing east on the south side of the Canal bridgehead had a tough time. It beat off a strong counter-attack with the 250-foot waterway.

NEW OFFENSIVE HURLED AGAINST HITLER'S REDOUBT

Luxembourg Radio Says U.S. 1st Army Had Joined Russians Near Torgau

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 23 (AP) — The U.S. 3rd. Army veered sharply southeastward for 38-mile gains in a new full-blown offensive today, shearing most routes between the Pilsen-Prague munitions and Hitler's national redoubt in the Bavarian Alps.

The Luxembourg radio asserted that the U.S. 1st. Army had joined the Russians near Torgau, 81 miles northeast of Leipzig, finally splitting the Reich in Northern reports doubt from the mountain-fastness in the south.

Allied supreme headquarters had no confirmation and said the junction would be announced in Washington and Moscow. At last report, the Allied and Soviet lines were 15 to 20 miles apart.

In the north, the British 2nd. Army opened the finally assault on Bremen and besieged Hamburg, second city in the Reich. Prime Minister Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's tanks pulled up to the Elbe on a 20-mile front, toward the west of the 150-mile stretch held by the U.S. 9th. and 1st. Armies, Canadian Army Headquarters said.

The 1st. Canadian Army besieged Emden 25 was forced the western Holland on the flooded Grebbe-Ems River line. A field dispatch said German resistance had stiffened all along Gen. Crerar's front, notably in western Holland.

Gains of from one to four miles were reported everywhere but along the Ems River.

Dempsey's men were reported two miles or less south of Emden while other Tommies had seized Rotenburg, 21 miles farther east.

The 3rd. Armored Division of the U.S. 7th. Army reached a town on the Danube 50 miles from Munich after a 14-mile sprint southward, it was announced. The 3rd. Armored's town was not identified. A two-lane bridge was captured intact, being the 7th. captured farther west.

Reach Lake Constance

The U.S. 7th. and French 1st. armies reached Lake Constance's western limit of the Bavarian redoubt, and captured the cities of Friedrichshafen (33,000) and Lindau (11,800). They sealed off thousands of Germans in a 1,000 square mile pocket in the Black Forest, containing the last intact section of the Siegfried line. The pocket was formed by a plunge to the Swiss border (83,000) by Gen. Patch from Austria.

Gen. Patton's new offensive carried to within 26 miles of Regensburg (83,000) on the Danube and within 138 miles of Berchtesgaden. His troops moved within 125 miles of Innsbruck, Austria, and 125 of the Austrian stronghold of Linz.

The 3rd. Army swung southeastward along a 125-mile front with

HITLER IN BERLIN AND HAS DECIDED TO REMAIN THERE

Attempt to Convince Residents Invaded Capital Would Not Fall

London, April 23 (CP)—Hitler is in Berlin and has decided to remain there, the Hamburg radio said today in a broadcast directed at Berlin residents in an attempt to convince them the bombed-out Hitler would not fall.

Both the tone and wording of the announcement made it clear that rumors were sweeping Germany that the Fuehrer was in flight.

The broadcast said the announcement was made to stem what was described as "outlandish rumors" which the enemy is attempting to undermine the morale of the German people.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels is also in the capital, the broadcast said. It conceded that the fall of Berlin would virtually mean the end of the war.

"There are two beatings which we cannot and will not cede", Goebbels was quoted as saying, referring to Berlin and Prague, the capital of Bohemia-Moravia.

"If these two bastions fall into enemy hands the whole of Europe will perish with Germany", he said. "Should Bolshevism capture these capitals of the Reich and the Protectorate, Europe ceases to exist".

Afraid Rises Would Not Hold

"Many people are afraid that the German line may before Berlin would not hold against the Russian onslaught but now it has been shown that these lines did hold fast after all", the broadcast said.

"We tell the whole world: the Fuehrer has decided to stay on in Berlin."

"The Fuehrer is directing the battle from the front line in Berlin and he has forces still available to forces to stem the Bolshevist onslaught", the broadcast added.

Yesterday a D.N.B. broadcast said the Nazi troops in Berlin were under command of "Lt.-Col. Reymann". Previously Lt.-Gen. Bruno Bitter Von Bauenschild was reported military commander in the capital. No mention was made of his fate.

FIVE DANES KILLED

Stockholm, April 23 — (AP) — Five Danes were killed, 10 were wounded and "considerable" number of Germans became casualties in a skirmish in Copenhagen early Sunday when Danish Patriots tried to take a cannon out of a German barracks, Swedish dispatches from Malmo said today. Several detachments of Austrians joined in the fighting and were said to have mutinied and supported the Danes.

ALLIES APPROACH VITAL PO RIVER AT SEVERAL POINTS

Now 35 Miles North of Bologna and Close to Ferrara

Rome, April 23 (AP)—Allied 5th army troops, driving rapidly forward in pursuit of retreating German forces, have reached points 35 miles north and northwest of Bologna, Allied headquarters announced today.

At the same time British 8th army forces, operating on the 5th's right flank, have driven up within less than 1 1-2 miles of Ferrara, 30 miles northeast of Bologna, the announcement said.

Both armies, reaching out with their armor in an effort to smash the fleeing enemy, are approaching the vital Po river at several points.

Fifth army troops still were running into numerous demolitions and strongholds as well as mortar and artillery fire. The Germans have left many snipers behind to harass the advancing Allied forces.

The 5th army now has two spearheads less than two miles from Ferrara—one approaching along the Po di Primaro river line and the other, the Ferrara airfield and only 1 1-2 miles from the city itself. Another spearhead is within 1 3-4 miles to the southwest.

Nothing New Reported.

Nothing new was reported from the central sector of the line in the flank, where patrols of both sides are active.

On the eastern coastal sector British troops were thrusting northward from the northwest corner of the Commacchio lagoon while other forces were moving northwest from the lagoon along roads which are only a few feet above the surrounding flooded fields. Bridgeheads over the Po Divalano river have been established.

Northeast of Bologna the Germans are reported having hastily behind the Reno river in an effort to hold up Canadian troops. Eighth army troops moved up to a dug-in enemy infantry line running southwestward from San Pietro in the Canale area.

Italy-based Allied planes flew about 1,200 sorties yesterday, blasting reinvesting German columns along the road and railways of northern Italy. Their toll yesterday included 702 motor vehicles and 269 horse-drawn vehicles destroyed.

Day of Retribution Approaching For Nazi Party Men in Germany

Olle Olien, Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Morgenbladet, says evidence is mounting the approach of Nazidom's doom from the German capital where he lived, when he returned to Stockholm.

By OLLE OLLEN

Stockholm, April 23 — (AP) — wave of German deaths at German hands is approaching a climax. The odor of death seems to float over all Germany.

Hell is the city of the Nazi execution squads. But other Germans say the time of vengeance is come.

These other Germans, many of whom have left Fuehrer without question in the day of triumph, talk now of bitted hatred for the leadership which has brought Germany to ruins. They say it will be a terrible day when it is loosed against the Nazis—who failed to deliver the promised victory.

Retreat and Fear

There is the hatred among the survivors of Germans who went to death in concentration camps. There is the hatred of the oppressed. And there is fear. All Germany, by the time I left Berlin, felt a "day of reckoning" would come—especially if the Nazis of the Polish, Russians and Frenchmen who many Germans now by now, have the Reich all to collect.

How, many families are there in Germany who have relatives in concentration camps?

How many have received the laconic message, "Your husband, son, brother has died. Inform where belongings should be sent."

I was told that many persons already have received messages of victims for vengeance. It was said that when the Nazi grip was broken the people of Moabit and Neukolln, the workers' quarters of Berlin, would act. Their crowded houses accommodate several families each in cramped space, while their Nazi bosses have fled, bolting the doors of their Dahlem and Runewald villas behind them.

Formerly Fought With British 8th Army in Italy

Move Began in February, Completed During March

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army on the Western Front, April 22 — (CP) (Cable) — The 1st Canadian Corps, which formerly fought in Italy with the British 8th Army, has joined the 1st Canadian Army, Gen. Crerar announced today.

An official statement said:

"The general officer commanding in chief of the 1st Canadian Army announces the 1st Canadian Corps and attached troops which have been serving in the Italian theatre of operations since 1943 have been transferred to the western European theatre where they have joined the 1st Canadian Army.

"The 1st Canadian Corps, commanded by Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes of Antigonish, began the move from Italy in February and the transfer was completed during March under a security blackout.

"(The Canadian last week reported an advance on the 8th Army front Feb. 24, which a front dispatch from William Boss, Canadian Press correspondent, told how they transferred German attempts to dislodge them from positions along the east bank of the Senio River, opposite Fusignano.)

Combat formations involved in the transfer are the 5th Armored Division under Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster, D.S.O., and Brig. Bruce Sutherland, the 5th Armored Division under Maj.-Gen. B. M. Hoffmeister of Vancouver and the 11th Armored Brigade under Brig. W. W. Murphy of Vancouver.

Canada's overseas army of five divisions and two independent infantry brigades now is all together on the western front for the final phase of the war in Europe.

The 2nd. and 3rd. Infantry Divisions, the 4th. Armored Division and the 2nd. Armored Brigade already have been reported in action on the Rhine front. The Polish 1st. Armored Division and the British 49th. Division remain under Gen. Crerar's command.

Hospitals and other Canadian institutions in Italy have been transferred to this theatre along with the 5th Corps.

In welcoming Foulkes' men, Crerar said:

"Now that we are all together, I look forward to the reunion in no uncertain manner."

Arrival of the Corps in this theatre will be cheered in reunions like an old home week. Everyone is agog with Crerar's statement, "it's simply great to get together again."

In dozens of camps there were reunions between soldiers who had not seen each other for many months. Veterans of the west have campaigned with the 1st. Canadian army gave veterans of the Mediterranean campaigns with the British 8th, Army a warm welcome.

Enemy Unaware 1st Canadian Corps Was Being Moved

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army in Northwest Europe, April 22 — (CP) —The 1st Canadian Corps, veterans of Sicily and Italy, and the 2nd Canadian Corps, veterans of fighting in France, Belgium and Holland, have been reunited under the command of Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, within his 1st Canadian Army.

Announcement that the two corps —five divisions and two armored brigades — were finally fighting in the same operational theatre was double historic.

And for another, this was believed to be the first time that a corps, complete with everything required for combat, was transferred in the field has been taken out of the front line in one theatre and transferred intact overseas to another, 1,000 miles away, ready for action.

The same guns which smashed the Germans on the Canadian line in Italy last December now are in action in northwest Europe, fired by the same crews. The same tanks which cleared the enemy from Valguarnera, Agira and Leonforte beaten foe in northwest Europe.

British Units Transferred

Where British units had become an integral part of the 1st Infantry Division and the 5th Armored Division, or where British officers were attached to Canadian formations, team, they too, were transferred to the Italian front.

The troops didn't know when they were pulled from the line last February, that they were to be in a hookup with the 2nd Corps. Only officers kept in the picture were selected personnel in various headquarters. These privileged few were highly elated. They saw in it something the troops had been harping about for a long time.

They didn't feel the fighting on the western front would be any harder or any easier. But they figured their fighting would receive more sympathetic treatment back in Italy they felt they were the forgotten men of the war, their deeds as dangerous and bloody as those elsewhere, were not as widely heralded and they were not engaged in a principal theatre.

Decision to Make

During the joint conference then of chiefs of staffs which preceded the Big Three meeting at Yalta withdrawal of certain troops and their eventual move to the west was

Weather reports were hurriedly consulted and when it was learned the snowstorm was to be of only brief duration, decision was made to proceed with the parade as scheduled. CHEESE SUBSIDY INCREASED

A Canadian Press dispatch which appeared in Friday's issue of the Ontario Intelligencer quoted Mr. A. E. Ames, chairman of the Canadian Cheese Producers' Association, as stating that the usual provincial subsidy of two cents a pound for cheese was to be paid this year. It would mean a loss of half a million to the Ontario farmer.

When Mr. Ames's statement was criticized was that if the subsidy were not paid it would mean a loss of half a million dollars on the production of milk and cream, the price being based on the figures for the corresponding period in 1940.

Ingenious Sign For Victory Loan Atop City Store

Indicative of originality on the part of its designers, the Eighth Victory Loan sign atop Black's Tobacco store at the corner of Front and Bridge streets is distinctly a novelty in that it combines the purpose with a campaign thermometer and at the same time is supportive of an event which Allied nations may soon bring about.

The county objective of $2,600,000 is listed in large figures across the face of the sign and the sign will be white at one end is a campaign thermometer which, as purchases figure, and a picture of Hitler with a rope hanging over his neck.

Religious Service Follows Colorful Military Parade To Open 8th Victory Loan

Wing Commander M. C. Johnson Gives Stirring Message on Armouries Lawn

Under a sparkling sun shining from a clear blue sky, the Eighth Victory Loan campaign was officially launched in Belleville on Sunday afternoon as Wing Commander M. C. Johnson, senior chaplain at No. 2 Training Command, Trenton, delivered a challenging message to Belleville and district residents on the local Armouries lawn.

Principal speaker at a civic Victory Loan service following a colorful parade through the principal city streets and which marked the opening of the campaign, Wing Commander W/O Johnston held the fortunes of the campaign as a challenge to Canadians at the present time.

"I like to think of the Eighth Victory Loan as a challenge for Canadians to put on their overalls he declares to put on their overalls he declares and get busy, pulling together in a great national future, proceed with our termination to let the powers of aggression know that Canadians are together and to pray together. May God help us to do it."

Large Assembly

Speaking to an audience of approximately 2,000 persons, together with a large number of the armed forces drawn up in parade formation on the Armouries lawn, W/O Johnston declared that the Eighth Victory Loan been planned with a recognition of God and through a desire to have Him on our side, the campaign is being held in appreciation of the fact that Canada has been spared through the many dark days since the fall of France.

"It seems to me that we have sought on a hell leather as our approach to God and that our appearance is concerned. We have got to the point where we have lost confidence in and our feeling of the need of God and where our victory is lagging. But it was not always so."

Seemed to be Answer

The speaker recalled how the staying of Axis powers following the fall of France, seemed to be the answer to the prayers of Allied prayers. At one time Germany was hammering at the gates of Alexandria and it seemed only to be a matter of weeks before the Suez Canal would fall before the enemy onslaught.

Britain's miraculous escape and courageous leader had rallied his nation to the task of victory. He declared that there was a God and that the righteous cause would win through. Undaunted faith in the eventual victory in the end assured was the big factor behind the British spirit which was Britain's.

But although Victory over the enemy powers had been accomplished there was the danger of complacency, the spirit of the Allied armed service personnel. And here tribute to workers on the home front was paid by the speaker when he stated it was Canadian workers who had turned the tide at El Alamein and which had changed conditions in the Mediterranean.

Production on the home front had been equally as important as the bravery and heroism of the fighting forces. "We are in this war as a nation" declared the speaker, "and we must think not as not in it, then for God's sake let's get out of it."

Full support of Canada's Eighth Victory Loan campaign was the duty of all on the home front was the duty of all on the home front was the Canadians, civilians and overseas personnel alike declared the speaker who urged support for a great national objective.

New Trenton Band.

Heard for the first time in Belleville a new Trenton R.C.A.F. band made its appearance on the Armouries city streets and acted as army band for the parade. Under Bandmaster Jones, where with hundreds of bands in the city. In the words of several well-loved tunes, the band rendered afternoon brass. The boys' choir of St. Thomas' Church, under Cecil Wood, A. A. Simpson, led in singing and Mrs. Simpson at the organ "Abide With Me".

In charge of the parade, Victory Loan Service was Rev. Beaumont Payne, with the dedicatory prayer being said by Rev. Jay Hall, assisted in the absence of Magr. J. F. Hand, Rev. Father A. L. O'Donnell. Rev. Father J. G. Kennedy. Also present on the platform were Mayor Mayor Frank S. Pollwell, Warden J. Fred Wills, M.P., and Lt. Col. Porter, chairman of the County Victory Loan committee.

Cars Decorated.

Official Victory Loan cars appropriately decorated and bearing members of the county committee and committee headed the colorful military parade which was the forerunner of the service on the Armouries lawn. Following was the Trenton R.C.A.F. band, the Eighth of airmen and airwomen. Provincial Police Motorcycle Corps and detachments from an admiring crowd which lined streets.

Following the R.C.A.F. personnel marched the local Argyll Light Infantry battalion under the command of Lt. Col. Clare R. Porter, and the Canadian Legion and Argyll Veterans and veterans with their respective banners. The Belleville Municipal Band occupied a central position in the parade, while the C.N.R. veterans, two cadets, officers of the Salvation Army, R. C. I. and Albert College, Belleville Collegiate Institute and John Ambulance Brigade followed. Vehicles of the Fifth Battalion and Argyll battalions brought up the rear of the parade.

March Through City.

Route followed was from the cenotaph at Victoria Park, Front Street to Station, west on Station to Front and south to Dundas. The march was then up Pinnacle Street to Bridge and thence into the Armouries lawn.

At the conclusion of the service parade units were dismissed by Lt. Col. Slater who expressed his appreciation to members of the various units for turning out and making the parade a success.

Remembrance Week Overtime.
Lord Haw Haw said that the Nazi executioners are working overtime in preparation for the week to come.
From the German front broke on the Rhine before I left Berlin there was much guessing and rumor-mongering. But when Field Marshal von Rundstedt, former Commander-in-Chief of the armies on the western front, was convinced that the Germans could not force the Rhine and this marked his exit as commander of the west.
For the present, let not before the Nazis got hold of his wife and child. They became hostages in a hopeless situation. Those who could not flee to Switzerland who fled to Berlin and tried to suffer the crowds—are many. There are said to be about 200,000 of them.
Since a new control and checkup of military papers has been instituted 30,000 of the latter have been recaptured by the military authorities. They have been sentenced to death but execution of most sentences has been postponed.

The Sultan's All-Girl Orchestra

(By Writer in Christian Science Monitor)

Almost everyone in America is familiar by now with the emancipation of Turkish women and the restrictions imposed upon them before the advent of the new Turkish Republic. But I wonder how many people know that the rejected women of Turkey, who went about in the streets with their faces tightly veiled, enjoyed an important right which women in many European countries were denied. A Turkish woman could not appear in public place, she could not sit with her husband in a restaurant or at the theatre, but she could control her own money and her property and Turkey, unlike those in her own name. And, although she could not humble before her husband, as a rule, yet she could be independent of him if she had a private income.

A strange contrast. But Turkey, in the past, was full of contrasts. Take the matter of a women's orchestra. Only on Sunday night do we are reminded that the All-Girl orchestra is the first one ever to be formed in the United States. And that was not a long ago. But there was an "All-Girl Orchestra" in Turkey in the middle of the fifteenth century, under the reign of His Omnipotent Majesty Sultan Abdul-Aziz, master and absolute ruler of the Ottoman Empire. I heard about it from my father.

* * *

When my father was a little boy, he lived for a time with his grandparents. Theirs was a typical old Turkish house, its wood dark with age and lack of paint, rambling comfortably and without a definite plan by an hideous garden surrounded by a stone wall. The house had many high-ceilinged rooms, with rows of windows that shook in unison when the bitter north wind blew. There's a small boy could be happy, especially if he had the kind of grandparents my father had when he was a boy. Seated close to the brass "mangal" or brazier, heaped with glowing charcoal in winter, he listened to many stories told here by grandmother.

One fine day, the Great-Aunt from the Sultan's Palace came to with Shevek's grandparents. In her hands she held a small flat case which she deposited carefully in the room provided for her. There was much excitement in the house and a great commotion in the kitchen, for Great-Aunt from the Palace was the favorite sister of Shevek's grandmother. A feast was held before her that night, and later, seated by the mangal, Great-Aunt told endless stories of Palace life until the children were dead on their feet.

Early the next morning, Shevek was awakened by the sweet sound of music as if a nightingale were singing close to his room. He opened the door cautiously, afraid that the slightest noise might disturb the unseen maker of music. The sweet notes were coming from Great-Aunt's room. Shevek stretched to the door and knocked gently.

The music stopped and Great-Aunt opened the door. In her hands she held a long and narrow black instrument with many holes like the flute of which the little boy had never seen before.

"Come in, come in the pupil of my two eyes," his Great-Aunt greeted him. "Did my flute play-ing wake you?"

Shevek entered and straight he went to his Great-Aunt and lightly touched the magic instrument in wonder.

"Great-Aunt, I, too, want to make music just as you do," he said. "Will you teach me how?"

She was delighted and that same day she gave Shevek his first flute lesson and set him on the road to become, years later, an accomplished flutist. And from Great-Aunt, too, he heard the story of the "All-Girl Orchestra" in which she had played the flute as a young girl. It was really a brass band, composed of some sixty players, all young and all beautiful, which only performed for the pleasure of Sultan Abdul-Aziz.

The Sultan personally undertook the selection of the candidates. He lived in his large audience room in Dolma Bagtche Palace, while before him passed a procession of all the young women and girls in the vast Palace. The Sultan picked out the girl one by one and the choice fell not on the most gifted, as one might have to play but on the most beautiful and youthful. Thus picked out at random, the Women's Band came into being. But who was to teach them? The Sultan had skilled musicians, for he already had a Palace orchestra and band; but the players and teachers were, naturally, all men. No Turkish woman could appear before strange men that was the unwritten law. The Sultan, as usual considered himself above the law written or unwritten. He called in his Italian orchestra leader and told him:

"I want a band composed entirely of women and I have already selected the candidates. It is for you to teach these girls. Select the suitable teachers and take charge of the whole thing. But beware that their eyes linger not on the faces of their students."

The Sultan, however, decreed that individual lessons were forbidden; the girls had to learn en masse. One by one they came into the immense hall reserved for their use, their hair carefully veiled and on their faces showing.

After many months of painful struggling, puffing, and panting, the women finally became a skilled unit. And when they had advanced so that they could handle an overture from an Italian opera without murdering every passage, the women's band performed before the Sultan himself, who showed his delight by giving each player a five-lira gold piece.

* * *

"It was a sight I shall never for-get," said Great-Aunt to little Ek-rem. "The Sultan had ordered for us red dresses, with long trains and gold lace, and red fez with kerchiefs for our hair. Red was his favorite color. We started with an overture by Rossini and, I must say, we surpassed ourselves. Of course the men in the other band were jealous of us and said we could not play as well as they do. The Sultan finally decided that the two bands would hold a contest, and that he himself would judge which was the better band. The day was set and that night we appeared in our saffron-colored dresses made for the occasion. We started our piece with a great deal of flourish. Sultan Abdul-Aziz and the Royal Family applauded wildly. Finally came the turn of the men. They lifted their instruments to their lips and blew. But not a sound came out. You see, a few of us women had secretly inserted a piece of cork in each instrument, so carefully that no one could see the obstruction. The men were furious, but the Sultan laughed so heartily that the tears stood in his eyes. To each of women he gave a small silken bag filled with gold."

"And thanks to Sultan Abdul-Aziz and my Great-Aunt," my father told me, "I learned how to play the flute and from my childhood I acquired a love of music. And music," my father added, "is the best friend a man can have."

Blind See With Sixth Sense

(By Maurice Carr in "Everybody's Magazine," London, Eng.)

A tall young man strode across the private park towards a New England mansion, whistling. He called a cheerful "hiya, Pal!" to a man reading in a lawn chair, walked around the big elm tree in full bark, and affectionately slapped the trunk as he went by. Skirting a car parked in the driveway, he disappeared into the house.

His actions were so normal and matter of fact as to be hardly worth an onlooker's second glance. But that is the point: They were normal. They were full of life and zest and the man was totally blind!

He was an advanced pupil at a unique school operated at Old Farms, a former boys' school in the Berkshire district of Connecticut, where scores of war-blinded veterans undergo the supervision of Dr. Jacob Levine, a prominent Boston psychologist, are learning—not "how to live though blind" — but how to live without eyes.

Method by which these men learn how to see again is not merely a new invention or technique. It is actually one of mankind's protective devices, the "sixth sense" which warned the caveman of unseen dangers either when he "walked towards a cliff's edge by night, or when a saber-toothed tiger crouched in ambush.

"Call it sixth sense," says Dr. Levine. "Call it 'human radar' or what you will. I cannot explain the mechanics—but I do know it works."

After a few weeks of being shown how, if not why, it works, graduates of Old Farms begin to lead lives which are amazingly parallel to those of their seeing brothers. They walk and dance without bumping into other persons — in fact, a number of men claim they enjoy dancing for the first time. They stop for traffic lights and safely avoid obstacles. Self-confidence is one of the first characteristics regained, when this is accomplished, half the battle is won in the fight back to normalcy.

Many have developed talents and skills which, before they became blind, they never dreamed they possessed. Some are now working on precision instruments in Harvard War laboratories, and are as adept as veteran craftsmen. Although war veterans have priority on this type of training at present, Dr. Levine hopes that eventually the facilities can be extended to include all blind persons.

Roughly, "human radar" or "facial sight," as it may also be called, is based on the principle that the human body emits tiny but definite rays of energy, some mysterious variety. These, on coming in contact with a house, wall, or any other object are "bounced back." A person taught to be attuned to these messages receives them. In some little-understood manner, through the skin or facial nerves. With training, their meaning can be interpreted by the brain which thus builds a picture of the surroundings. Sounds and their echoes are interpreted through their ears; smells by the nose, and shape and texture can be determined with remarkable accuracy. What happens is that the fact, and, in some degree the whole body is converted into a supplementary organ of sense.

A normal person, able to coordinate seeing, hearing and the sense of touch in ordinary activities, never finds it necessary to heed such messages. In fact, he does not know that this personal equipment exists.

Blind persons are not aware of it automatically. They have to be taught. He naïve and, "How," is done at Old Farms by gradual development of the sense. First, the student is taught to distinguish the behavior of simple sound waves. He encounters, say, a fence, a long room, at one end of which is plain plaster wall. With the help of a "stapper" which they click as they walk, they learn such things as distance and type of surface from which waves are reflected. Later, they progress to the stapper and aided by increasingly sensitive facial sight they find their way in tall, for example, which side of a chapel is covered and which is free. And they can walk through a maze without touching the walls. Advanced pupils can distinguish objects 30 to 35 feet away.

Not all blind persons become equally proficient in the use of human radar, just as not all men see or hear equally well. And this form of sight is especially to the possibilities. In supplementing this natural faculty, of a device being developed in British laboratories for the aid of the blind.

This device, sponsored by Sir Ian Fraser, blind M.P. and philanthropist, uses the principles of radar to send out waves, instead of employing the human "sixth sense."

"It is really," explains Sir Ian, "a refinement of the human blind man's cane, with which he taps along, listening for the change the echoes from the taping notes to tell him where he is in relation to objects around him. The radar device could supersede the cane—but the radar hand is might be a better idea to install these sets in-side canes, providing an easy way to carry the seeing device!"

Sir Ian, carrying a "sensitive" in his pocket, has thoroughly tested radar for the blind in his home and his country seats, in his office, and on busy streets and corners.

Great advantage of an actual portable radar set, he says, with its adjustable "range sender" is that it is less of the man's progress accuracy, certainly, and above all unobtrusiveness.

Events Inspire Loan Buying

There has just begun the Eighth Victory Loan canvass, but Canadians for weeks have been thinking of this call of their country to stand steadfast and loyal by the present issue and put it over the top and complete organization is now at work. The groundwork has been well laid and the result should be enthusiasm to "invest in the best" beyond any previous flotation of the loans in history.

What a scene meets their eye today! Germany broken up, Berlin swiftly passing into the last chapter, Italy's armies in full retreat, Hitler and the Fuehrer or leader of the German state is said according to Hamburg to be in the German capital. For some time it has been thought that he might flee to the Alps and hide there in his "fortress" and direct a guerilla and underground struggle against the United Nations conquerors of Nazi Germany in the foolish and mad hope that something may turn up that will save him and the Nazi associates from the just punishment he and others who are responsible have merited for the crimes they have done against humanity across a large part of the Continent of Europe.

Was ever an enemy more foul or was he ever brought to such a pass as that which has met Hitler and the Nazis and Germany?

This is what Canadian money, invested in the best security the loans hitherto raised, has helped to do. What it will do now will be to finish the job of smashing the enemy and when Nazism will be completely rubbed and blotted out. And this money will help to put the Nipponese where Hitler and the Germans are now and help to finish the work on the Far Eastern scene.

Canadian investors see victory at hand. They will subscribe to settle once and for all the monsters of evil in Germany and Japan. They are inspired by the deeds of the Allied armies which have achieved something that has never been equalled in all the history of warfare—the destruction of so great military power as that of the barbaric state of Germany.

The inspiration of these days is so great to Canadians that the loan cannot but go over the top.

What Is Happening

Now the world sees the coming of victory. There was a vast country in such a calamity as Germany now. Hitler, through his Nazis with the help of the German people who have never demurred though he directed them into a course of infamy and destruction is carrying Germany to the limit of destruction.

What has happened and is happening is not "the twilight of the gods" or Goetterdammerung as the Germans call their legendary story of Teutonic mythology. What is taking place is the destruction of the most foul and fiendish leader and his gang together and the cleansing of the earth of the evil and sin of Nazism. The Nazi gang are monsters of murder and iniquity and by no stretch of imagination can they be called "gods" but rather they are fiends and what is this war is not merely a twilight, it is the retribution on these monsters and of all the foul gang and crowd who delighted in war upon innocent free nations, it is the slaughter of Nazism and German militarism, never to rise again. Twilight ordinarily means the approach of night and infers a tomorrow. But there will be no tomorrow for Hitler and the Nazi company and all those who have had their part in the crime which Germany has caused on earth.

Getting Their Target

Every Canadian who has fought in action with the other heroic boys and men of freedom, everyone who has worked with all his or her might and skill at home, everyone who has helped to put across the War Loans and Victory Loans has a part in the impending capture of the capital of Nazism, Berlin.

Of that Canadians can be proud. They immediately on the outbreak of war chose Germany's capital as their target and ever since September 1st, 1939, they have had this objective in their mind with all the consequences which the loss of Berlin will bring to the Germans.

Canadians have done well and proudly they have carried out their task, often grim and hard, but they have always done their duty and they have a share in the blotting out of Hitler and the rest of the enemy monsters.

Now the people at home have another chance to knock to pieces whatever remnants there remain of Nazi authority.

Canadians at home have now the opportunity of tripping up the pockets of Nazis have got into and Canadians will with their financial means pursue Hitler, Himmler, Goering, Goebbels, Ley and the rest of the underworld of the other spirits even if they hide themselves deep within the caves and dark caverns of the earth.

The Last Time Berlin Fell

(Montreal Herald)

Even though the optimistic expectations of last weekend proved premature, no one doubts that the Allied entry into Berlin is near at hand.

Speculation centres largely upon the form which the historic event will take. So let us consult our "Britannica" and see how the Berliners reacted to the last Germanic "unconditional surrender"—surrender to Napoleon.

"Marshal Ney in pursuit of retreating Prussian soldiers the French were received with open arms," informs Britannica. "The people even turned their own wounded out of doors to make room for their Frank allies. . . . Napoleon appears to have received a splendid ovation on the victors and abuse on the beaten army."

There is little likelihood of any such ovation for the American or Russians who first enter Berlin on this occasion.

But the readiness of Germans of 1806 to blame their leaders for failure presents an interesting parallel to the reported eagerness of Germans in occupied cities to dissociate themselves from Naziism now that it has failed to work.

German Shelter of Lies

(London Chronicle)

From what spirit, this arrogance, this sullen ignoring of a defeat so obvious? Goebbels can answer this question. These Germans are his people. In twelve years he has built around the German mind a shelter of lies. Goebbels hopes that shelter will survive defeat, and that it will keep the Germans unrepentant for another generation that they might nurture hatred in their hearts and in that hatred will find the will to fight again. These Germans our men are meeting today show the measure of his success. Their defiance is the product of the Nazi school. The things they have learned to believe is that Germany is a guiltless nation, encircled and attacked by jealous neighbors. That is the lie we must destroy. Upon it is built the desire for revenge that will exist in the German heart even after the last German city has been occupied. Upon it is built that mad Nazi plan to make a last-ditch stand in the Bavarian mountains. The creation of a fanatical band of warriors the world want to fight their last battle there and, by this fantastic downfall, create a German legend for all time.

Puzzling Over Nazi Treasure

(New York Herald Tribune)

The $100 million gold treasure which the American 3rd Army captured in a salt mine at Merkers was supposed to be the entire gold reserve of the Reich.

Thinking it over, experts in Washington began to wonder if this gold were sent out for troops in Germany to keep their eyes open for more.

The experts recalled that even before the war the Nazis had unconscionable lust for gold. In 1939 they took Poland's. In 1940 they stole an estimated $200 million of Belgian gold from the Bank of France. They looted the Yugoslav treasury and they ran out on Italy with perhaps 100 million.

In all, the Nazis must have got at least half a billion in gold in their clutches. Some they spent, of course, but the question was, how much?

Providence has given us hope and sleep as a compensation for the many cares of life.—Voltaire.

MAN NURSE

Thought myself as rather good;
How and what to do,
Thoroughly I understood;
All the tricks I knew,
But I went from bad to worse
Volunteering as a nurse.

"Call me when you need," I said.
"I'll be on the spot!
Smooth the pillows on your bed!
Trust me! Worry not!"
Love, my friend, can be a curse,
Lacking proper skill to nurse.

Hands that tender tried to be
Often proved but too rough.
This she smiling said to me:
"Love is not enough!
Think you'd better stick to verse.
You will never be a nurse."

Mosquitos on Okinawa Almost As Troublesome as the Japanese

This article by Ernie Pyle was written just a few days before the famous war correspondent was killed in action on le Shima Wednesday.

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa, — (By Navy Radio) — That was the night the mosquitoes nearly damn nights out of hundreds of miserable nights I have spent in this war.

Bird Dog and Gross and I turned into our sacks just after dark. So did everybody else, who wasn't on guard. It was cool enough to go to sleep, so we just lay there in the darkness and listened to the mosquitoes faintly all over the hillside.

We didn't put a bit of our clothes, of course; nobody does in the field. I slid take off my socks but Bird Dog and Gross left theirs on for they said the night watch on the field telephone from 1 till 2 a.m.

The three of us lay jammed up against each other, with Bird Dog in the middle. We smoked one cigarette after another. We didn't have to hide them under the blanket for we were in a protected position where a cigarette couldn't be seen very far.

Right after dark the mosquitoes started humming around in force. These Okinawa mosquitoes sound like a flame thrower. They can be driven off or brushed away.

I got a little bottle of mosquito lotion out of my pocket and doused my face and neck, though I knew it would do no good. Gross and other boys didn't even bother.

After a while the hillside grew silent. The hours went past. By an occasional slap I knew mosquitoes each of us knew the others weren't asleep.

Suddenly Bird Dog sat up and pulled down his socks and started scratching. Fleas were after him. Even the grass has fleas in it over here.

For some strange reason I am immune to fleas. Half the boys are red welted with hundreds of itchy little flea bites, but I have never had one.

But I'm the world's choicest morsel for mosquitoes. And mosquito bites poison me. Every morning I wake up like a prize fighter who's been shot.

And that was the way it was all night, with all of us—me with a double dose of mosquitoes, all the rest with a mixture of mosquitoes and fleas. You could hear marines hushfully cursing in the area around the hillside. Suddenly there was a terrible outburst, just downhill from us and a marine came jumping out into the moonlight, cussing and jerking at his clothes.

Bird Dog and Gross and I turned into our ponchos while he stood there in the moonlight, stripped and cursed. It was even though it was very chilly. He doused them with lotion, shook them out then back on.

Then he disappeared, and was Corp. Leland Taylor of (101 Franklin Street, Bradshaw, Ohio. His real name is Pop, since he is 33 years old.

Pop is a "character". He has a black beard and even in the front line wears a big, floppy Australian dress cap which makes him stand out.

After Pop went back to bed everything seemed quiet for several hours, but hardly anybody was asleep. The next morning the boys on guard said that they hadn't smoked their three packs of cigarettes that night. It was the same way on Bird Dog, Gross and me.

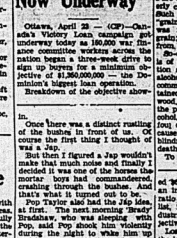
One of the boys on guard came to wake my bedmates at a quarter till one, but they weren't asleep. I thought maybe I could get to sleep while they were away, but I didn't; the mosquitoes were really crunching me.

The boys came back about two o'clock and took off their shoes and socks. Then all three walked the south-ern part and also shooting flares to light up the fronts in the south.

There were times when we could actually see the shells, travelling horizontally the whole length of their flight, ten miles away from us, and then see them explode.

Every now and then destroyers in the night and company more ships were called upon to shoot at targets over the beach behind us, just to make sure nothing was coming in.

Once there was a distinct rustling of the bushes in front of us. Of course we had a loaded rifle and was a Jap.



But then I figured a Jap wouldn't make that much noise and finally I decided it was a land crab. Once a mortar boys had commandeered, crashing through the bushes. And that's what it turned out to be.

Pop Taylor also had the Jap idea, at first. He crawled around to Pvt. Bradshaw, who was sleeping with his head at the foot of Taylor's head during the night to wake him up when it came his turn to pull guard. Brady laughed and laughed about it, for lying on the ground between all of those boys was a regiment of two carbines, two shotguns and three rifles.

Along about 4.30 I guess we did sleep a little from sheer exhaustion. That gave the mosquitoes a chance at us. We pulled our ponchos over us and crawled stiffly out into the daylight my right eye was swollen completely shut.

All of which isn't a very war-like night to describe, but I'll tell you so you'll know there are lots of things beside bullets that make war hell.

CELEBRATE FREEDOM

Foreign Ministers Confer in Capital Before Conference

By JAMES B. WHITE

Washington, April 22 — (AP) — Their ranks complete, Big Three foreign ministers met today prior to the second round of momentous discussions looming up to the San Francisco Conference, which opens 24 days away.

Their first session — began less than four hours after Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov arrived by air from Moscow — broke up at 11:30 p. m. Sunday night. State Secretary Stettinius said that they would meet again this morning. Mr. Molotov and Foreign Secretary Eden were silent.

Wearing a broad smile and carrying dried wood from Marshal Stalin on Russia's final attitude on such issues as the debated veto question, Mr. Molotov stepped from the U. S. Army transport plane which brought him from Moscow at 2:46 p. m. yesterday.

Mr. Eden quickly greeted him with a hearty "Welcome, welcome."

Whisked by limousine to the Blair-Lee mansion, Government guest house which is the Soviet flag in the front, Mr. Molotov retired briefly, then walked next door to greet Secretary of State Stettinius in Blair House, temporary executive headquarters.

Conference on Arriving

By 3:30 he was conferring with Messrs. Stettinius and Eden at the State Department across the street.

Also present for the talks were Soviet Ambassador Andrei Gromyko, Averell Harriman, American ambassador to Russia; Sir Alexander Cadogan, British permanent undersecretary for foreign affairs, and Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, British Ambassador to Moscow.

There was no hint of the nature of their first talks.

High on the agenda, however, must be the issue of Polish representation at the United Nations parley, in addition to problems to be discussed at the Big Three meeting on Monday.

Dispatches from San Francisco, meanwhile, said that delegates arrived there expected the Molotov-Eden talks to point the way toward solution of controversies at the San Francisco Golden Gate conference in charter a world peace-keeping organization.

Canada's Victory Loan Campaign Now Underway

Ottawa, April 23 — (CP)—Canada's Victory Loan campaign got underway today as the 16,000-odd canvass committee workers across the country began their drive to sign up buyers for a minimum objective of $1,350,000,000 — the Dominion's largest war financing.

Breakdown of the objective showing the quotas assigned to each province is expected to be announced in.

Once there was a distinct rustling of the bushes in front of us. Of course we had a loaded rifle and was a Jap.

But then I figured a Jap wouldn't make that much noise and finally I decided it was a land crab. Once a mortar boys had commandeered, crashing through the bushes. And that's what it turned out to be.

Pop Taylor also had the Jap idea, at first. He crawled around to Pvt. Bradshaw, who was sleeping with his head at the foot of Taylor's head during the night to wake him up when it came his turn to pull guard. Brady laughed and laughed about it, for lying on the ground between all of those boys was a regiment of two carbines, two shotguns and three rifles.

Along about 4.30 I guess we did sleep a little from sheer exhaustion. That gave the mosquitoes a chance at us. We pulled our ponchos over us and crawled stiffly out into the daylight my right eye was swollen completely shut.

All of which isn't a very war-like night to describe, but I'll tell you so you'll know there are lots of things beside bullets that make war hell.

CELEBRATE FREEDOM

Canada's Victory Loan Campaign Now Underway

Ottawa, April 23 — (CP)—Canada's Victory Loan campaign got underway today as the 16,000-odd canvass committee workers across the country began their drive to sign up buyers for a minimum objective of $1,350,000,000 — the Dominion's largest war financing.

Breakdown of the objective showing the quotas assigned to each province is expected to be announced in.

Once there was a distinct rustling of the bushes in front of us. Of course we had a loaded rifle and was a Jap.

But then I figured a Jap wouldn't make that much noise and finally I decided it was a land crab. Once a mortar boys had commandeered, crashing through the bushes. And that's what it turned out to be.

Pop Taylor also had the Jap idea, at first. He crawled around to Pvt. Bradshaw, who was sleeping with his head at the foot of Taylor's head during the night to wake him up when it came his turn to pull guard. Brady laughed and laughed about it, for lying on the ground between all of those boys was a regiment of two carbines, two shotguns and three rifles.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

(A Rare Type)

We visited your city time months ago and we stopped to watch a lot men playing lawn bowls. One of them noticed you, and he said he'd have to revive the picture of you with a brush. Then he said you managed to fix in our minds. Hereafter we'll think of you as a shaggy young man who gets from his keyboard more fun than a barrel of mobsters. Ct. R.

Answer—For the hands of persons whose work involved handling water, strong soaps, alkalis etc., a few drops of a mixture of equal parts of glycerine and witch hazel lin should be applied to the wet hands after the day's work and before beginning work, again just after washing. ALCOHOL

How does wood alcohol differ from denatured alcohol?

The common names for alcohol in the vernacular are ethyl alcohol. Pure alcohol — CH3OH — is properly called ethyl alcohol or ethanol. Wood alcohol, because it is the "grain alcohol" because formerly it was distilled principally from grain; later it was made chiefly from molasses, and today chiefly from petroleum and natural gas. — CH3OH — is of a different chemical composition from ethyl alcohol and is called wood alcohol or methanol. It received its name because formerly it was obtained principally by distilling wood. Wood alcohol has some of the properties or ordinary ethyl alcohol, but unless purified it has a foul odor, and is extremely toxic or deadly poisonous, even in small doses, and may cause blindness, vertigo, coma, or even death.

To "denature" means to "change the nature of." Denatured alcohol is ethyl or pure alcohol that has been rendered unfit for bodily consumption without impairing its industrial qualities. Denatured alcohol is ethyl alcohol and is put in ethyl alcohol to denature it and for that reason any denatured wood alcohol is often incorrectly called wood alcohol.

"Alcohol" is derived through Medieval Latin from Arabic "al-kohl", the "al" meaning "the" and "kohl" meaning "fine powder". Arabian alchemists gave to a fine metallic powder, such as powdered antimony, which they used to stain the eyelids. Paracelsus, a 16th century writer, first used it to refer to this practice. In Europe the Arabic term was picked up and applied to any finely rectified spirits, a significance it never had in Arabic. Later it further required the meanings of "alcohol" is still used in Arabic for staining the eyelids." The earliest recorded use of "alcohol" in English is dated 1594.

BOYS' SPORTS

The main object of interest in sports during the past week will be the opening of the All Star Softball House League on the hour after school, when Grade XII takes on Grade X. As further results of the schedule draw, Grade IX will play Grade XIII on Monday, April 30, while the School Staff will play Grade XI on Wednesday, May 2. These games should provide some real after-school entertainment. Then on Thursday, April 26, at noon hour, the Grade IX interform softball will begin. Form representatives are now asked to consult the sports bulletin board for playing dates.

Incidentally, there was quite a show our pyramid boys put on at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night under Mr. Stevenson. They brought great credit to their director, to the school and to themselves by the fine manner and exact precision with which they went through the various figures. During the two years that they have been in operation they have provided a new and interesting feature of our school life.

EASTER AT HOME

The slowly revolving spot in the centre of the girls' gymnasium, illuminated a changing array of colors in a variety of colors. The G.R.D. Orchestra, under Miss Dunn, in a solid style, and the late-comers turned in the right at the door in the hall, meeting the receiving line headed by Mr. and Mrs. Turner, and composed of members of staff and students. These are some of the conditions under which the B.O.I.V.S. "Easter At Home" took place last Friday night.

The whole of the credit for the overwhelming success of this dance which is the first of its kind to be held in the school in the last five years, should be directed to the Students Council and its various committees, who worked as whole heartedly to put this venture over the top.

At the hour of eleven-thirty, the dancers moved upstairs to the library, where the Ladies' Aid served an excellent luncheon at no extra charge.

The clock on the wall indicated approximately one-thirty as the last of the dancers ended, after which the tired dancers went home and exchanged a dance with sleepiness.

COMING EVENTS

Week of Monday, April 23 to Monday, April 30.

Wed., April 25—At approximately 4.30 today about ten fellows will start from the campus in a race for the five mile cross-country honors. According to time set by practice the course should be covered in about one half-hour. So if you should happen to be around the school that time you can add the fellows some one was interested.

Fri., Apr. 27—The All-Star series kicks off with a bang today when two strong teams, the Masters and Maroons Grade XIII get in what promises to be a free swinging affair. Students please give the players a chance and stay a reasonable distance from the diamond. The first-aiders will be still in operation, so come out to your regular Friday night relaxation.

Mon., Apr. 30—Another of these All-Star fills will be held—at which XIII and IX tangle today. Both these grades profess to have powerful teams and a really good display of softball is promised for the spectators.

With the kind permission of the students and the consent of my boss, W. J. B., this column, because of the lateness of the publication on Monday, will print the Monday's column "Coming Events" from Tuesday to Monday's heading. We hope this change will prove to be beneficial to the student community of what takes place on Mondays.

Thanking you in advance for your co-operation.

A.Y.P.A. NEWS

At the regular weekly meeting of the A.Y.P.A. of Christ Ch. arch, Miss Pat Mabrey was presented with a beautiful prayer book, on behalf of the members of the society.

The meeting began with the customary devotional period and business. President Lloyd Gladwell commented on the urgent need for membership in the Committee meetings, and announced that Mr. Jean Foote would take over Group No. 1 in the temporary absence of Doug McIntosh. The meeting was then turned over to Mary Fry, chairman of the Edification Committee, who presented a Spelling Bee, assisted by Vice President Helen Hall, and the group was won by the team led by Gordon Legge, roundly thumping their leader Doug McIntosh by a score of 25-11.

The members then divided into social groups, and spent the next half-hour addressing envelopes, folding letters, inserting letters and stacking mail. Due to the bee-hive industry, hundreds of letters to all parishioners of Christ Church were sent out. This activity was in connection with the installation of a new heating system in the church.

Following a short, impromptu sing-song, the members gathered in a circle, and after prayer by Rev. Mr. Sparling, Lloyd Gladwell called Pat Murray, and made the presentation on behalf of the group. The prayer book, bound in brown, gold impressed leather, was inscribed—"Presented to Miss Murray, from her friends of the Anglican Young Peoples Association" and who is a group leader, thanked Lloyd and said that she was very sorry to be leaving a society with whom she had had so many enjoyable evenings.

Peroxide and Lemon Juice

French chiffon scarves take romantic air in mild skin bleach

By HELEN FOLLETT

YESTERDAY gardeners: don't forget that you're going to raise freckles along with shiny noses and carrots. This is the season of the year when you must condition your complexion. Again the flock of yellow polka dots that is simply no longer in style.

Keep it lubricated. Freckles are caused by the action on the skin that produces a chemical change in the pigment at the skin. The more oil that is used, the weaker is the effect of sun-rays.

Cream your face before you face forth to plant seeds, to cultivate or to transplant. When coming in from exposure, cream it again, removing atmospheric dust, adding more cream, which must be wiped away before you get busy with your make-up.

Facial bleach.

Use it after face washing at bedtime, rinse and dry, apply a lotion made by combining equal portions of peroxide and strained lemon juice. Buy a fresh bottle of peroxide and keep it in a dark closet.

Apply the mixture with pledgets of cotton, let it dry on. In the morning when the face is with cold water, dry and apply a little cream. But don't use cream the same night you use the lotion.

Powder acts as a protective agent; select a heavy one with an oily base. Broad brimmed hats are a help; think of that when you go stalking stillinery.

Freckle On Arm.

As for the face freckles, arms will too; sometimes arms take on freckles when the freckle-making trait is free of them. Apply the lemon-peroxide lotion freely.

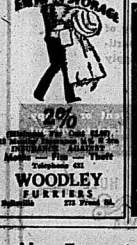
Time was when women had skin peeling treatments for freckles. And a lot of good it did them. The treatment was drastic, sometimes painful, and when the new skin appeared it would freckle just as quickly as the old one. It is a full-summer fight. Keep right at it. Lots of people consider freckles piquant and sassy. Let that thought console you.

The Marry Go Round

SPRING NUMBER

There can be nothing quite like the thrill a serviceman's wife feels when she reads of his brave exploits and sees his picture in the paper. But it is often so mixed with laughter and anxiety that the after-effects must be like coming out from under an anaesthetic. I have often wondered about this when I read of one of these experiences.

The average husband can always tell you how he admired Gertrude should handle its billions, evil; when he can't tell you how he spent that last ten dollars he was planning to give to the Red Cross.



A man is cautious and puts off the idea of marriage until he's waiting to meet his ideal girl; then comes Spring and the marrying fever, and he idealizes the first girl he happens to meet and rushes blindly into it.

Girls may be divided into two classes: the gals without dates and one-man women. The lady-wolf has a heart like a subway train. In which there is always room for one more. But a normal girl's heart is like a telephone booth which holds only one man at a time—and holds him tight.

The best way to forget the war, at least now and all your other troubles, at this time of year is to go out and start struggling with a perverse little war-garden which is full of bugs and self-determination. Never try driving a car after a domestic scrap or a lover's quarrel. Mere accidents have been caused by those who have been indulging in a love or anger, than by those under the influence of alcohol. You may have murder in your heart, but why murder some quiltless party?

"Jealousy" is what a man calls a girl's ability to read his thoughts and secret emotions before he marries her; "suspicion" is what he calls it after marriage. I call it clairvoyance and the clairvoyancy of love.

In spring everybody feels the need of a change. That's why a woman buys a new hat and begins moving the furniture around from place to place; and a man takes out his lighter emotions and begins moving his heart around from girl to girl.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

For a Formal Church Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

1.—My son is to be married soon at a formal church wedding. My husband and I have three other children, the oldest daughter who is fifteen, a son, ten, and the youngest daughter six. At what time should we arrive at the church? In what order are we seated? And at what time may we leave?

2.—Should we take the children to the reception? The bride's family have known the children very well for some time.

3.—What will be our places at the reception which is to be held at the home of the bride?

4.—The wedding is to be in the evening, and I plan to wear a dinner dress of champagne shade with gloves to match. Will it be necessary for me to wear an evening hat?

W. T.

1.—You and your husband and children should arrive at the church about ten minutes before the hour set for the ceremony. Your children should not enter the church with you and your husband, but should be seated by an usher, in the first pew on the right of the aisle, several minutes before you and your husband come down the aisle. If your oldest daughter is responsible and capable of assuming the responsibility of keeping the younger children in good order, she may safely select a heavy one with no children following. Otherwise, it would be better to have her sit with a close woman relative of yours to help manage the children.

After the entire wedding party is in the church, the doors of the church are closed, you are escorted down the aisle by the head usher, your husband following you, and you and your husband are the guests of honor at the wedding, and so your entry is somewhat on the "ceremonious" side. (This too is the reason why you and he are given the honor of sitting in the first pew on the right of the aisle.)

As soon as the recessional is over, an usher from the bride's family seats the bride's mother down the aisle on the bride's escort; another usher will then escort you down the aisle (your husband following), and another usher, your children.

2.—Children are not usually expected to be present.

3.—The bride and her mother will inform you about your places in the receiving-line. The bride's mother and usually her father, as hosts, and first in the line, then the bride, by the groom's father, and then the groom's mother, with the groom at the end. Just on the ground right, the bride then the bridal attendants. But this order sometimes varies.

4.—Consult with the bride's mother about this, for some church-es demand head-coverings for women.

A House-Warming Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My daughter's husband left for overseas right after their marriage three years ago. Now he is home, and they are going to start house-keeping. Her marriage was so hasty-like that she did not have a shower, and now a friend of ours has offered to give her one. I am wondering if this would be proper? What do you think me? H.F.

Instead of giving a shower for your daughter, I suggest that your friend, or perhaps a group of friends, wait until the couple have moved into their new home and then give them a House-Warming Shower. This would be proper, practical, and a friendly and generous gesture to make to this couple about to establish their home.

A BEST MAN'S DUTIES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

My son is going to be best man at a wedding. The bride-to-be told him that he has to pay for the maid of honor's flowers, and that he also has to pay half of the cost of the car that is to be hired for the bridal party. I never heard of this before. Will you please tell me if she is right?

L. L.

I've never heard of this before either! The car hired for the bridal party should be paid for by the bride's family. And certainly the bride's family supplies the flowers for the bridal attendants or attendants, although occasionally the bridegroom (not the best man) buys them.

The best man's only expense, before attending the attire he wears at the wedding, is the wedding gift he sends to the bride-to-be. As a matter of fact, it is the prospective bridegroom who invites the best man to be his attendants and who gives him any necessary "directions"—for this is not the privilege of the bride-to-be.

Compliments are Always a Delight

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it correct for me, when a friend wears a new dress or a new hat, to say something about it, for example that it is attractive and very becoming, or should I wait until the friend says something about "my new dress" or "my new hat"? My niece lives with us, and she certainly likes pleasant compliments and hats. I don't know whether or not I should mention them and comment on them, but I will do as you say. And I've heard this question discussed so often that I am sure your answer will help others as well as me.

—M. M.

I've never known a woman or a girl who wasn't delighted to hear a friend tell her that her new dress or hat is "attractive and very becoming!" And you certainly needn't hesitate to make this pleasant admiring comment until the woman or the girl has mentioned that she is wearing some "new" item. It's only when we don't think the new dress or hat is becoming or attractive that we should observe "do not mention it." And all of these suggestions apply to your commenting on the ever-increasing wardrobe of your niece!

Questions About a Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—Is it proper to have a married girl as a bridesmaid?

2.—Is it incorrect not to have a flower girl?

3: Would this make an awkward arrangement for the processional: three bridesmaids, one of whom is a maid, and a maid of honor?

M. L.

1. Yes.

2. If the wedding is to be of any degree of formality, or even semi-formality, and there are a considerable number of guests to be seated, it would certainly be inconvenient and awkward not to have flower girls. Sometimes in these days of "man-shortage" the friends of the bride are asked to be ushers; and sometimes teen-age boys whose manners and sense of responsibility can be depended on, take over the duty of ushering.

3. I think this would be an awkward arrangement, since it means only one attendant walking alone; three bridesmaid, the junior bridesmaid, and the maid of honor. A preferable solution would be to invite one bridesmaid to be a maid of honor, and then have the two maids of honor, dressed alike, walk together.

Setting a Standard.

It's marvellous what a profound effect the good manners of a servicemen have had on the home life before meeting him, didn't see much sense in polishing up her manners.

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—The Canadian Youth Hostels Association, which uses hostels extending north from Toronto to North Bay and west to London, has been "caught" by the housing shortage, it was stated last night by Audrey Saunders, Toronto vice-chairman. She said the association has more hostel-minded than ever before, "but we don't know just how we're going to accommodate them all."

LUCKY ASS THOSE whose slim figures are so right for the junior-ite cotton summer frocks. A neat little number is of seersucker, in white with a tiny navy well-spot print. The dress has narrow shoulder straps, a bra bodice above a wide, fitted midriff. A matching bolero with puffed sleeves makes it right for town wear.

THE LURE OF LACE continues to entice. A lovely evening frock is of cloud-blue lace with wide scrolled bands of matching velvet appliqued on the wide skirt and edging the capelet that frames the neckline.

NOT SO MUCH navy millinery available, so when a navy hat appears it gets plenty of attention. Nice for sunny days ahead is a navy blue Milan straw made with short brim in back that widens considerably in the front. Natural hessan buttons and little dotty motifs form a border near the edge of the brim, and there are grosgrain streamers in back.

CONTRAST is an important feature of many Spring fashions, one that is expected to carry over for autumn. A charming evening frock has a flower and buttery print of black-outlined blue and green printed crepe used for the draped top, and appliques of the print drawn over the white chiffon skirt.

THE STORY for coats is the topper for day or evening. An attractive evening topper made with flared back and cardigan neckline is of shocking pink woolen with a wide centre band on the sleeves and across the back of turquoise latticed all over with silver dots.

WITHOUT BENEFIT of an inch more of fabric than regulations permit, there is a new fuller look to the new skirts. This is noticed in a navy woolen business suit whose skirt has a full Zouave drape in front, and a wide, crushed cummerbund of the same fabric. The bolero is lined and worn over a white eyelet batiste blouse with frilled V neckline.

HELP TO FELL THE EVIL TREE

Taking Over a German Town

By RHONA CHURCHILL
In the London Overseas Daily Mail.

Erkelenz, Germany.—This is the first inhabited German town we have taken in our new drive and the first time in any campaign that German civilians have presented the Allied Military Government with a major problem.

Aachen had only a few hundred civilian inhabitants in the first days of its occupation. But 3,500 civilians lined the streets of Erkelenz—3,500 mouths to feed, bodies to shelter, and identities to check.

And all the while the battle was raging a few hundred yards away and our armies were moving up for another pounce.

What happened?

Captain Mack W. Terry, wiry, energetic 45-years-old lawyer from Binghouton, New York, swallowed his powdered egg and coffee in a nearby village and said to Corporal Ralph Uppman, age 24, of Takoma, Washington: "Well, let's get going". And they drove their jeep into shattered Erkelenz.

They were to be the military governors of the town for 24 hours—until the spearhead A.M.G. detachment, consisting of three officers and three men, arrived to take over.

Captain Terry is Civil Affairs Officer for his division. His chief job is to keep the civilians out of the way of the combat troops and find a burgomaster to take charge of them.

Actually he thought this was going to be one of his easy days. Two hours after he and Corporal Uppman drove into the town a total of eight frightened civilians had crawled out of their cellars and asked to be taken away. He had them driven to a nearby village and thought his day's work was over.

Then the fun began.

In tens and hundreds the multitude began to pour into Erkelens—wizened old women carrying little children, boys wheeling their bicycles and wheeling their bedridden grandmothers in wheelbarrows, a mother carrying her twins, toddlers, old men hobbling with their sticks, blind men, the mutes, the sick, and the hungry.

They looked like a pilgrimage of aged and infirm, and they looked like the people their own soldiers had sent into the streets of Europe five years ago—only no one dive-bombed this crowd and, by their manner, they showed they did not fear us.

Captain Terry surveyed the scene and realized it was likely to get out of hand by lunch-time. He knew he had to get them all checked and under cover by dark, so he sent out an S.O.S. for the spearhead detachment waiting a few miles back.

An hour later bluff Captain Sam Johnson, from Douglas, Arizona, chief of the spearhead detachment, breezed into Erkelenz, and cried: "Watcha, Mack, how's business?"

Mack said it was "fine", and together these two men—Mack thin and solemn, Sam fat and jovial—set to work to clean up the civil side of Erkelenz.

They found a deserted school building which still had a bit of a roof to it, rounded up some military military police and army interrogators, and stated the task of opening new town records.

Each civilian had to register, giving full name and address and other particulars. before being allotted a temporary billet.

"Find me a likely man for a burgomaster", Captain Terry told interrogators. "Better have a welfare worker for this lot if there is one".

I was told: "We are not bothering to inquire closely into his political activities, since the pressing problem at the moment is to get this multitude fed and housed, and he is undoubtedly the best man for that job.

"In 48 hours' time we shall know how he stood with the Nazi Party, and if he was an active party member out he will go. Today we must have a man who can take most of this load off our shoulders.

"A Nazi could do us little harm as burgomaster in such a short while, and a good administrator can work wonders.

The new burgomaster was told: "Your job is to get food and shelter for these people. Now, where is the town's food stored? Where are the hidden hoards? Where are there some shelters or cellars for them to spend the night? Where is there fresh water?

"Get together some able-minded men to go out and fetch food under an armed guard. Find some farmers who can milk the cows, so that the children can have milk before they go to bed tonight.

"You've got to make this community self-supporting. We are not going to feed it. There's food enough here and they must produce it.

"Tell them we will see no harm comes to them; but they must not be a nuisance and must obey all our orders instantly".

The burgomaster collected his "teams", put some to work collecting food, others cleaning out basements for the people to use that night.

It was a slow process since these people seemed to lack any kind of communal spirit. They stood around in little family groups. Not once did an able-bodied man from one group help an overladen woman from another.

At dusk, when Captain Terry was still wondering how his multitude was to be fed, a farmer drove up with a cart laden with food.

"Mein, mein", he shouted as the captain, in the name of the Military Government, requisitioned the food for the people.

He wanted it all for himself—enough food for a month for him. He would have seen his own people starve rather than share it.

Telling that story at the end of the day, Captain Terry remarked, "Guess that farmer still doesn't know what a good turn he did his neighbors today".

By midday a spruce Volksturm captain marched into the school and gave himself up. He had refrained from going out with the Volkstrum when the order came. He remembered how good it was to be our prisoner in 1918.

He apologized for being late, but "had been home to change his shirt".

And what of the people—this motley crowd of beaten Germans? The most striking impression they gave was one of listless selfishness. Not one lifted a hand to help his or her neighbour. They waited to be told before making any move, and then did exactly as ordered.

I saw sights in Erkelens which I never saw in the darkest days of the London blitz. Those dark days made Londoners more neighborly than they had ever been before. Such days seem to have the reverse effect on the Germans.

In Erkelenz you could see white-haired old women of 80 and 90 struggling, unaided, with heavy bundles; a woman of 60 bent double bearing her invalid boy of 15 on her back; a girl of 12 wheeling her bedridden grandmother in a wheelbarrow—and at the end of the column, but within eyesight of such incidents, loafed grown boys and men, hands in their pockets, never thinking of aiding the weak and overburdened.

Leopold—Patriot Or Quisling?

By WILLIAM TAUNTON

(In South East Asia Command Services Newspaper.)

King Leopold of the Belgians is a prisoner of the Gestapo in a village called Possenhaven, in Southern Bavaria. He was forcibly taken there two months ago.

He is known to be heavily guarded and without contact with the outside world.

The constitution of Belgium prevents the government of the country from being carried on without a monarch at its head—just as in Britain.

So until Leopold is released from German bondage, any new Belgian Government—M. Pierlot's resigned last weekend—may be compelled to appoint a Regent. It will be one of the surrender terms with Germany that Leopold is delivered up without harm to his people.

But the question is: Will King Leopold be acceptable to his people?

War correspondents writing from Belgium, have noticed "a coldness" among some people toward the king when his name has been mentioned. There are some signs, not very well marked, of a Republican movement in the country.

Misunderstanding.

There is, above all, a great deal of misunderstanding among Belgians—as well as the rest of the Allied peoples—about the part Leopold has played in this war.

I can tell you this, however. Leopold was completely acceptable to M. Pierlot's Government which was constitutionally elected, and had been in being since before the occupation.

In all the ministers' rooms in their block of offices in Eaton Square you could see his photograph, draped sometimes with the red, yellow and black flag of their country.

Yet some of these same ministers have said harsh words, and in public about Leopold. In the chaos and bitterness of May and June, 1940, they were not above calling him "the quisling king".

Some of the other Allied statesmen, too, did not mince their words then. It was left to Mr. Churchill to ask the world "to reserve its judgment" till the tragic events of those tragic days could be seen in their true perspective.

What was the principal complaint against King Leopold? It was that he gave the surrender of the Belgian army to Hitler, acted unconstitutionally in doing so, and did not inform the Allies of his intention.

The constitutional issue has never been completely determined, and will become one of the controversies of Belgian history. It is worth remembering in favor of Leopold that he was also Commander-in-Chief of his armies; they had fought to the limit of their strength and as a soldier, he knew that further resistance would have meant their slaughter.

As to letting the Allies know what he meant to do; he did. But the messages he sent never reached them. Communications had gone completely haywire, the defeatist French generals had broken down the liaison system between the three Allies in the field and one sector of the crumbling front had no idea what the next to it was doing.

Leopold is exonerated on that charge.

German Overtures.

And after the German occupations of Belgium? It is here that the Government bases the strength of its case for Leopold.

Throughout the four long years he acted not only with great correctness towards the invaders, but with considerable personal bravery. They tried all they knew to win him over to their side. He scorned their offers, rejected all the tempting bait they held out to make him a great king in a "New Order".

He chose a path of dignified poverty, a form of house arrest in his own land. More than that, he was not afraid to raise his voice in protest against the savageries the Germans committed.

By word and deed he remained the open enemy of the invaders. He was no quisling, whatever his mistakes. He proved himself a true son of his illustrious father.

People's Decision

Belgium, as soon as it can be organized, will hold a General Election. (But there are first more than half a million Belgians doing forced labor in Germany, who have to be brought home).

When the vote is taken, one of the issues will probably be: Do you wish to retain Leopold as your King?

During the occupation, he has married again to a commoner. That in the eyes of many of the more conventional Royalists of the country, might at one time have gone against him but time and peoples' minds have changed. I would guess from my knowledge of Belgians that when it is put to the test, King Leopold will be firmly re-established on his throne.

They Were 'Little Men' 30 Years Ago

History is a dull subject and the sort of schools we have did their best to make the worst of it. But that is a thing of the past. If you are not under 30 you have seen history made—plenty of it—and enough to fill the first book or two in 1960 or so.

Who would have guessed in 1913 that a penniless ex-writer living in frowsy Munich lodgings would one day send you to war in a tank or a Marauder? Or for a chapter thought that a Scottish schoolgirl was destined to be Britain's Queen? The King himself, at that time a "snotty" on H.M.S. "Collingwood", counted tea-making among his duties. Anthony Eden, was still in the fourth form at Eton, Churchill was First Lord, but Roosevelt was only just being appointed Assistant Naval Secretary of the U.S. Government.

One of the best athletes in public life, Roosevelt had some hopes of ever gaining America's Presidency. Had you told him that this high success would come after he had been crippled by infantile paralysis he would have laughed.

Nearly all the leaders of today, it is odd to realize, were "little men" in 1913. Many men and women whose names are now household words were poor and obscure. What particular promise was there for a 14-year-old boy actor of those days, by the name of Noel Coward?

You Stand in Line For Nearly Everything

By L. NORMAN SMITH
(In The Ottawa Journal)

New York—Here's the way it is: you line up to go to a movie or to your office, to buy a paper or to wait for a hotel room, to catch a restaurant table or a taxi or a shoe shine.

At the theatre ticket wickets are many large cadences; if it is a hit show like Oklahoma! the query is not what day, but what month.

"I sat in the ballet-box office for Oklahoma!, and know the secret, or at least one of the secrets, of its success. The men in the orchestra and the girls in the chorus and the lead role people still play this colorful American light opera as though it were in the first week instead of the 104st. They have fun, the whole crowd of them. And when Music Director Arthur Norris waves his wand to him, he starts. I'm sure he watch him. They're always working. This clean and lovely musical must be a pushover to those who thought it took smut to keep a show going on Broadway.

One entertainment to which admission is about as sticky as Oklahoma! is the broadcast "Information, Please." Tickets are given out by folks on the Inside who have friends or who have friends who have friends. The line-up in the NBC building prior to the broadcast must be one of the strangest in New York; an odd combination of professors and politicians and sports fans and musicians.

The program, to put it simply, looks pretty much as it sounds. Clifton Fadiman keeps it moving in the most casual and urbane sort of way, sitting at his ease at desk with his cards of question and answer. Facing him as a long table sit the four experts, all of whom have a mike at their heads. Awaiting about a bit nervously, Producer Dan Golenpaul appears to be the power behind the scenes—and they say he is indeed the big chief.

Before the program gets under air, Mr. Fadiman introduces the experts to the studio audience and explains that they will begin at once with a sort of practice run to break the ice. He has only one request to make of the audience: "We know that you are a mighty intellectual audience and will know most of the answers to our questions. Please keep them to yourselves, nor even whisper them to your neighbor. Our experts have terrific ears and will chisel if you even move your lips".

For 15 minutes the program is carried on as though it were on the air, and then, with a minimum of waving and signalling the real broadcast begins, unrehearsed as usual. The preliminary questions have nothing whatever to do with the one that follows.

John Kieran is the surprise—a man with white hair who seemed be crowding 60. The map of Ireland is his face, and he raises about the room and the ceiling with a fly-away look searching for an answer. F. P. Adams is jpgy and balding, sad looking for a man of his wit, mischievous like unto Groucho Marx and too fast on the repartee for anyone except a crowd like Fadiman and Kieran. The two guest experts share the same table but not with the same ease. Adams and Kieran enjoy themselves, put in no advance study because they have no inkling what is going to be asked, draw reportedly fantastic salaries that enable them to drop their broadcast earnings into the mail floor to the party tells me it is $500 a broadcast, and all in all manage to look quite unaware of the fact that they are men at work.

"I don't pick it up", says F.P.A. innocently, "I read."

W. Shakespeare is making a reappearance on Broadway in The Tempest. (Visitors to New York's theatres is on Broadway now but the old term covers the theatre district.) The play seems to have been away for more than a month or so now, and the Margaret Webster presentation of The Tempest is doing him high justice. It is a beautiful production; the source, incidentally, of "We are such stuff as dreams are made of and our little life is rounded with a sleep". (Here's from memory so don't fence me in.) From the mouth of some woman walking up the aisle in the show's intermission seems to rob as apt a comment as will be found: "Now I will go home and read my Shakespeare again". How many modern plays leave such a challenge, impel such thoughts? Sit two hours with most of today's plays and you feel not only that you have all they have to say but that you'd just as soon not say it yourself.

Of interest in The Tempest is the background of the three leading players: Vera Zorina, former ballerina with the Russian Ballet, then into popular musicals and now speaking Shakespeare with considerable authority; Canada Lee, former contender for the welterweight boxing championship and a negro actor who called "Native Son"; Jamour Arnold Moss, a B. A., and Phi Beta Kappa at 18, and later an M. A., and professor, possessing the almost unique distinction of being the fourth generation of a family of New Yorkers. Of such stuff is Shakespeare fashioned.

The night clubs, they tell me, are jammed and comfort and reason; and having to clear out at midnight curfew after laying 4 dollars on the table for food and entertainment worth x less 10 is not an added attraction. More of this to come under my department.

Meanwhile the big show goes on—the show of New York City itself. There's the shop on Broadway where the fellow sells you a five turtle with your or her name, and any other thing you want, carved on its back; there are the otherwise windows of George Jensen and Tiffany where cost and quality race wildly out of reach.

For line-ups, of course, there's nothing to touch the queues for cigarettes. In Boston, I saw a two-deep line stretch half a block outside the South Station and a news editor here tells me the line outside Bloomingdale's store has dangled two blocks. Big places like these put cigarettes on sale regularly. Smaller places pull out a carton irregularly and infrequently. As soon as they appear the cash register starts to jingle and people run from all over the store. One packet per person is the rule, and even the well placed purchaser with money and favorite stores is hard pressed to garner more than about four packages a week.

Some of the 30,000 German prisoners taken during the recent advance are sitting on the sacred grounds of a former Nazi military academy in a key German city somewhere in the 7th Army sector.

HERE ARE THE GERMS WHICH CAUSE THESE DISORDERS

CATARRH

Usually the first infection is due to the neglect of a simple cold. This process continues and processes. Later, secretions which are dislodged by blowing the nose often fall back into the throat, infect the tonsils, and result in sore throat and inflammation of the throat. Lantigen "B" Oral Diluted Vaccine offers an effective treatment for sufferers of Catarrh. The distressing effects of the complaint are greatly reduced and replaced by a feeling of well-being. It works because it is DISSOLVED.

AN EMINENT PHYSICIAN

Writing in the "British Medical Journal", speaks as follows in the issue of January 15, 1916: "In my experience, the oral antigens have been mostly employed for cases of Catarrhal infections, rheumatic conditions and catarrhal enterocolitis. Chronic bronchitis has been quite definitely benefited." This important statement, however, heralds the dawn of a great release for Catarrhal sufferers.

the effects of the germs causing these diseases. This positive relief is something which no sufferer can afford to miss. Think what it will mean to gain relief from sneezing, coughing, sniffing and gasping for breath!

In most cases relief can be obtained from the annoyance and humiliation of nose stoppages, mucus and phlegm, head noises, catarrhal deafness, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, antrum, sinus and other respiratory tract troubles.

WHAT IS LANTIGEN?

LANTIGEN is not a patent Medicine, and is devoid of drugs altogether. Toronto Leafs Win Stan'ley Cup Defeating Detroit Red Wings 2-1 in the Seventh Game

Babe Pratt Scores Winning Goal After Apparently Fyoked Hour Equalizer Leafs Lose 1-0 on Saturday

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto Maple Leafs hold the Stanley Cup today, for the second time in four years, and they could not have chosen a better "welcome home" gift for the dynamic veterans of this war who steered them in the world's professional hockey championship in 1941-42.

He won't among the 14,800 fans in Detroit's Olympia last night, but Mel Gray Olympia must have been the guiding spirit as Leafs shaded Detroit Red Wings 2-1 to climax a shiftless comeback in the best-seven play-offs. Victory in the seventh game of hockey's "world series" came on a five-foot drive by defenceman Walter (Babe) Pratt four minutes after Murray Armstrong delighted the largest crowd in Detroit's history by tying the score 1-1 at 8:16 of the third period.

It was a fabulous anniversary for Smythe. The Toronto manager left for the west shortly after Leafs won the 1942 title from Wings in seven hectic weeks and didn't return until he was heralded home last fall. The severe wounds he suffered in France prompted doctors to predict he would be "retired" while the Toronto game was being played.

In winning, Leafs prevented Detroit from reversing Toronto's achievement in the 1942 series when they won four straight games after losing the first three.

Setting the Scene

The setting was the same this time. Behind silent backfiring by Frank McCool, 26-year-old Calgary sports writer who won the Calder Trophy in his freshman season in the National League, Leafs won the first three games 1-0, 3-0 and 1-0 to create a record for successive shutouts in the play-offs.

But Toronto manpower was wearing thin and Detroit, exploiting every finishing power, won the next two 6-3 and 2-0. In the sixth meeting at Toronto Saturday before 13,953 paid admissions, Leafs — and particularly slick Sweeney Schriner — had chances enough to win half a dozen games. But youthful Harry Lumley in the Detroit nets held off all challenges until Eddie Rimmerset ended the tense struggle at 14:15 of the first sudden-death overtime period.

Pratt took the stage for a seventh game in the eight-point series as the Olympia Sunday. The Leafs opened the scoring at 1:36 of the first period when Mel (Sudden Death) Hill carried a rebound from Ted Kennedy, 19-year-old Port Colborne, Ont., centre who is playing his second season with seven scores and perhaps was the outstanding performer of the first period.

Armstrong Scores Equalizer

Detroit, outlifting Leafs 15-14 over the route, finished the period under heavy pressure shortly after the third period started when Murray Armstrong, Toronto right wing, equalized the puck into an empty net after Joe Carveth's shot and McCool sprawling.

The Toronto players turned in deep gloom fewer than four minutes later when Pratt — on one of four Leafs' rushes that all ended in the third period — slammed Nick Metz's rebound home from the point at the crease. Veteran Syd Howe of Detroit was in the penalty box when Pratt scored.

It was the sixth victory for a Toronto team in the Stanley Cup final since the cup was donated by Lord Stanley of Preston, then Governor-General, in 1893.

"Beardless Ivan" Rasputin to Be Seen Here Fir.t

"When wrestlers show promise that's the time we give them recognition because after all the fans are always behind an aggressive athlete," stated Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A.C. while announcing he had moved Wilbur "Tuffy" Morgan to the top spot on his weekly wrestling show at the Hume Arena.

"I'm showing no favors to Morgan when it was decided to give him a shot at the great Russian grappler Ivan Rasputin, but Morgan earned his spurs by bolting the villainous Rob Wagner to a draw in Belleville following which he battled Red Mazurne to a split decision in Toronto. "Tear" has fully recovered from his injury here in Belleville last year, and following a few months of lagging in his newly-adopted home near Lindsay "Tear" Morgan is the most improved wrestler we have. This is proven in the fact he hasn't been defeated in over a month's campaigning north of the International boundary," added Tunney.

Of course Mr. Tunney forgot to mention the fact Ivan Rasputin is still smarting under the defeat at the hands of Nanjo Singh in Toronto last week when under agreement "Ivan the Terrible" was shorn of his whiskers when beaten by Nanjo. Belleville wrestling fans will have the opportunity of seeing Rasputin without his famed Russian beard before any other wrestling fans when he meets Morgan Wednesday night here.

Strangely enough Mr. Tunney dared to include Singh on the semi-final versus 361 pounds of Georgia-born manhood in Chuck Martin. Then for an opener it's Tom Collins and Jack Wentworth.

WHITE SOX AWAY TO FLYING START IN AMERICAN LOOP

Win Twin Bill From St. Louis Browns to Remain Undefeated

By JOE REICHLER
(AP Sports Writer)

For the first time in 26 years, Chicago White Sox are away to a flying start in the American League pennant race.

In winning a twin bill from St. Louis Browns, 4-2 and 6-3 yesterday to sweep their three-game series with the American League champions the Pale Hose annexed their fourth and fifth straight of the season without a defeat.

Joe Haynes and Orval Grove each hurled eight-hit jobs before 18,781 fans to keep the major league's only undefeated team a half-game ahead of the New York Yankees, who have won five out of six.

Chicago's National League entry, the Cubs, also stayed in the limelight with a 5-3 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-0 and 2-1 before 27,680 fans. A wild demonstration was staged in the Cubs' fans' box which they yelled everyone in sight with short blasts of their disappointment.

Wynn Hurls

The St. Louis-Cincinnati doubleheader which the Cards and Reds split was marked by the brilliant pitching of pitcher Bucky Walters of Cincinnati and Johnny Beazley respectively over a decision calling him out at third.

The Cards went on to win 3-0 behind the hurling of Ted Wilks but the Reds took the nightcap 5-4 on 10 innings, in which nine pitchers took part, six by the locals.

Dizzy Trout won his second game of the season, pitching Detroit to a 6-3 victory before 36,000, over Cleveland while Philadelphia Athletics handed Washington their sixth straight loss, 6-1.

In the National League Brooklyn Dodgers defeated New York Giants 3-1 before 27,762 fans, behind the hurling of Curt Davis, who pitched his second triumph. Boston Braves and Philadelphia Athletics split, the Braves winning the opener 5-3 and the Phillies coming from behind with three tallies in the ninth to win the nightcap 7-6.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr

New York, April 21. (AP)— Bill Gap Terracino recently a boxer told the district attorney that he "would guarantee there would be no more foul rights on this side of the bay" if a grand jury investigation of boxing was dropped. That probably was the most startling development in a series of events within New York's ring world since boxing "no longer the safe sport it was before the 'war. . . . Fistic men who keeps tabs on such things, reports there are been approximately 30 "no decision" bouts since Jan. 1. Ordinarily there wouldn't be that many in four years. . . . When officials refuse any decision in a fight, you can bet sure that one convinced it isn't entirely on the up. . . . Nat's theory is that gamblers deprived of their usual outlet by muting ban and chased out of New York by Mayor LaGuardia's "anti-tinhorn" campaign, have moved in on boxing on a big scale, and they've found a number of co-operative fighters and managers. . . . At any rate, it adds up to a condition that requires vigorous attention from boxing commissioners everywhere.

Bill Sanders, the 16-year-old Texas schoolboy who kept a couple of fruitless floods up until after midnight last February so they could sign him, the minute it became legal to touch American Legion talent, insisted on warming up with Southpaws in training camp.

Manager Fred Fitzsimmons watched the procedure add finally asked the reason. "I haven't seen much of left-handed pitching," Bill explained. "I warm up with left-handers so I can study how the ball comes in, the angle of it and what it does when it's coming toward me."

ST. MIKES NEED ONLY ONE GAME TO TAKE TROPHY

Moose Jaw Canucks Outlucked As They Lost on Saturday 4-3

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 20 — (CP) — If Moose Jaw Canucks bow out of the Memorial Cup race in tonight's fifth meeting with Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, much of the credit for their elimination will go to a fellow-westerner—19-year-old Frank Turik, of Trail, B.C.

Playing his second successive year in junior hockey's world series, the St. Mikes centre star contributed three goals towards his victory in the fourth game Saturday. Majors, leading the series 3-1, need only one victory to capture the trophy.

Turik, who says he will play professional hockey "if I can get even the opportunity," started St. Mikes moving on the road to victory when he slapped home a pass from Bob Gray late in the first period Saturday after Canucks had opened a 2-0 lead on goals by Jackie Miller and Ralph Bitrem.

He added the other two, both close-range efforts, in the second period after Tommy Thomson of the defence steamed down the left boards and slid his own rebound behind goalie Bev Bentley. Lou Hauck accounted for the third Moose Jaw goal, sandwiched between Turik's last two.

"Veteran of last year's cup finalist Tyall Shooks Bates, Turik echoed Coach Joe Primeau's post-game comment that Majors will "wrap it up" in the fifth game but added the warning "Don't sell Canucks short."

They outplayed us Saturday and they'll be really fighting tonight. It was the smart work of goalie Paul Woolmer and Thompson that saved the game for us. My goals were just a matter of luck."

Coach Roy Bentley of the western Canada champions shared the opinion his team was outlucked, especially in the third period when they missed a few pucks from close range," he said. "It was the old story of record and we couldn't. It's pretty hard to take."

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

W. J. Snider of Hamilton, veteran key man of the Ontario Baseball Association, was honored at the 26th annual meeting of the organization in Toronto Saturday by election for the first time to the presidency and by a return to his old post of secretary-treasurer. Vice-presidents are R. B Hall, Port Colborne, and J. E. MacIlwain, Galt. The elected members of the executive being Fred Bradley, Hamilton; Ken J. Codling, Belleville; Robert Dawson, Guelph, and Frank B. Peppiatt, Toronto.

The meeting reduced the number of U. A. player imports per team from five to three; adopted a plan for universal birth registration, of players in all minor organizations of Ontario and ruled that players already signed by the Thurston Benevolent Club in Hamilton were free agents on the adoption of a constitution amendment which provided that certificates are valid only if signed after the date of the O.M.A. meeting.

Hayes Hell Cats of Merritton, defending senior basketball titlists of Canada, are scheduled to play in the Galt Arena on Thursday night early in May when they meet the champions of series between Fairmount Laurels and Raymond Union Jacks, the latter being the Alberta contenders. Saturday night the Laurels defeated Jacks 79-45 in the first of the two-game series at Vancouver.

The Canadian squash racquets doubles championship round at Montreal yesterday was won by American affair. Andy Ingraham and L. James Reynolds of New York defeated Johnny Smith and Don Grant, also New York, in three sets for the title for which 26 Canadian and U.S. teams competed.

Welsorux Ladies defeated Viridun United, Quebec champions, 57-18 Saturday night at Brantford to take the second game and the final series of the Canadian Women's Intercommunity basketball championship.

William Boland of Galt was elected president of the Western Ontario Cricket League at the meeting in Galt. The circuit will operate with four teams, Brantford, Woodstock, Galt and Hagersville Flyers.

St. Jerome's College, Kitchener, bowed out of the Canadian Junior Basketball championship tourney last night at Ottawa when Glebe Collegiate turned back the western Ontario title holders 39-29 in the second game of the semi-finals. Glebe will now play the MacHigs challengers for the title.

Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You may take your bridge more or less casually. But if you have read anything about Horse Sense, you must have noticed how much easier it is for you to understand the game.

Take this business of showing suits. The order in which you bid them tells which, if either, is longer. The order in which you rebid either tells the length of each.

When you rebid a suit and then mention a new suit, you show a six carder and a four carder. When you bid a suit; then a new suit; then rebid the first suit, you show a five carder and a four carder.

How do you show two rebiddable five carders? By bidding the high rank first; the lower rank next; and then rebidding the one of lower rank.

To understand why, step right into the two suits in this hand:

♠9
♥A Q J 9 7
♣J 6

Your first bid is hearts. Partner assumes you have four hearts. Your second bid is diamonds. Partner assumes you have four diamonds.

With the same length suits, first bid the higher rank. With suits of different lengths, first bid the longer. Thus, a lower ranking suit is longer only when it is bid before a higher ranking suit.

Thus, when you bid hearts first and diamonds next, partner is told that your diamonds are not longer than your hearts. Having bid each suit only once, he sees only four cards in each so far.

On the third round you should bid diamonds again. Rebidding a suit shows it is at least five cards long. Therefore, the rebid of your diamond suit tells partner you have five diamonds.

But your higher ranking hearts were bid before your lower rank diamonds. So, if you have five diamonds that are not longer than your hearts, you must have five hearts.

Jap Prisoners Eager to Please

(By Quentin Reynolds, in Collier's Magazine)

The relations between the Jap prisoners and the marine guards on Guam is a curious one. When marines are first assigned to guard parties of Japs, they are tight-lipped and grim. But the Japs are very, very anxious to please honorable masters and they work very hard at clearing the jungle, building huts and digging trenches for water pipes. Because they are fed well, they are content, and a contented Jap is a cheerful little monkey who grins every time you look at him and who doffs his hat and bows every time you speak to him.

Soon the new marine guard starts shaking his head in bewilderment. He has only known the Jap in combat, and in combat the Jap is a fierce and treacherous beast. Any resemblance between him and any known type of human being is entirely accidental.

The marine finds these grinning, amiable, eager to please prisoners and he is horrified to find that sometimes he thinks of them in terms of human beings.

He gets to distinguish one from another and he gives them names. I have met such honorable Japs as "Moose Face," "Mickey Mouse", "Chicken Head" and "Cue Ball."

Language differences present few difficulties to resourceful guards. They have worked out a series of commands used when marching the prisoners to and from work. When they yell "Banzi!" the Japs execute a snappy left face. When they cry "Saki!" that means a right face is indicated and the Nips obey with alacrity and grins. The final command which brings the detail to a sudden deathlike halt is a raucous throaty "Tojo." It all works out very nicely, and everybody is reasonably happy.

The Jap prisoners evidence no desire to escape at all and seem very pleased with their lot. To them the principle of hara-kari seems to be a very distasteful subject and they want no part of it.

Some of them live in the hope that if they are good boys they will be allowed to go to America some day. Few want to return to Japan.

"Licked by the People You Kicked"

(By Herb Caen, condensed from San Francisco Chronicle)

We were waiting at the dusty landing strip in France for the German general to arrive. The officer who had been detailed to meet him peered nervously up the road. Negro M.P.'s in a soiled approximation of a Class A uniform, stood rigidly at attention.

Finally an American staff car roared up. We got our first glimpse of the captured general, his head sunk deep into the folds of a huge overcoat.

His cold beady eyes rested for a few seconds on the Negro guards. Then he slowly turned. "I won't get out of the car," he said stiffly to the American captain, "until those Negroes are removed."

The American officers seemed non-plussed. We were afraid he was going to comply with the monstrous request. But he stuck his head into the car and talked in German. "This is the American army, General," he said. "These Negroes are American soldiers and you are a prisoner. I will not have them withdrawn."

The German general said nothing, but stared straight ahead with the eyes of a dead man.

A slow flush tinted the American's face. "Listen, General," he continued. "I'm afraid you don't understand the American army. We've got all kinds in America, so we have all kinds in our army. You and your kind are being licked by all kinds of people you like to kick around. By the Negroes from the South and the Jews from New York and the Poles from Pittsburgh, and the Italians from Chicago and the Chinese from San Francisco. They are the people who are beating you—all the people of the world brought together in one army, from one country that recognize all people as one.

"You're licked, General." His voice was harder and even more cutting. "You can't just sit there and say what's what any more, understand? You're a prisoner. Your whole Nazi set-up is washed up. Now get up and get out of that seat!"

Slowly the general moved out of the depths of the American car. As he marched past one of the M.P.'s he turned his dead eyes toward the Negro. The Negro glared back with cold eyes that blinked but did not waver.

The general dropped his eyelids for a brief second. Then he walked on slowly . . He almost seemed to be thinking.

One-Armed Bandit Always Has the Drop

Unless a chap just pops in and pops out with the jackpot, and never takes another chance, the player of a slot machine has no chance whatever of winning, or even of "breaking even." The intelligentsia in this field may know the slot machine better as the "one-armed bandit." It well deserves its name. How well it deserves it may be appreciated from a brief consideration of the result of almost endless experiments made by a professor. This professor did a thorough job. He took the romance and glamor of slot machines, if any, and threw them out of the window. When he was finished with the slot machine, it stood revealed as a persistent, petty pilferer.

This professor, according to a writer on the Milwaukee Journal is Prof. Philip G. Fox. He is a professor of business administration on the faculty of the University of Wisconsin. Prof. Fox did not merely work out something on paper on the law of averages. He experimented on a slot machine which he obtained, somehow, from the county sheriff. The machine must be the real thing, all right. Prof. Fox "learned the hidden secret of slot machines by keeping a record of 80,000 plays on a dime machine he keeps in his office."

For one thing he learned that the machine will take any percentage of the money put into it, which the operator decides he wants. Let it be supposed that the operator wants only 25 per cent for the "house." How does that work out? Here's the bad news in a nutshell: "The man with a ten-dollar bill can play the dime machine 100 times. The machine can, without difficulty, be played 14 times in one minute. In a little over seven minutes the $10 goes into the machine, and the player gets back in payouts about $7.50. This he puts back into the machine in a little over five minutes, and receives again, on the average, some $5.60 for his pains. This will go back in four minutes, and become $4.20, which will go back in even less time. At the end of 236 minutes the machine will be 100 dimes heavier.

All this amounts to is that the player pays the operator to take the player's money. Is that fun, or even gambling?

RELIEF PITCHING BY CRIP POLLI BEAT LEAFS TWICE

Jersey City, Montreal, Rochester and Baltimore Each Won Doubleheaders

(By The Associated Press)

Crip Polli's relief pitching in both ends of a twin bill helped Jersey City beat Toronto twice in the International League yesterday and stretched the winning streak of the undefeated leaders to four straight.

Roy Nichols delivered a two-bagger in the ninth inning of the opener to drive in the tying and winning runs of a 9-8 triumph. Charley Mead clouted a home run with one on in the third inning of the nightcap in a five-run uprising that paved the way for a 7-5 victory.

Montreal, Baltimore and Rochester likewise won doubleheaders. Montreal whipped Syracuse, 9-4 and 4-2, behind the effective pitching of John Gabbard and Jack Banta. The latter yielded only two hits in the second tilt.

Baltimore had to go 10 innings to beat Buffalo, 5-4 in the first game, then belted out an 11-8 victory in the nightcap. Jim Tropea's pinch-hit single win the opener. Ralph Kress clouted six hits for the Orioles in the twin bills, including two homers, two doubles and a triple.

Rochester socked Newark Bears, 10-2 and 6-4. Glenn Gardner went the route for the Redwings in the opener while Lou Sakas won the nightcap in a relief role.

Little Benny's Note Book

The different schools are going to have a paper drive to see which one can collect the most waste paper, and today Miss Kitty was telling the class how important paper is, saying, Now I wonder if any of you have any original ideas on the subject of collecting waste paper, if so, kindly raise your hands and make your suggestion.

Which Puds Simkins quick raised his, saying, I suggest to call up everybody you know and tell them a big parade is going to go past their house with General MacArthur at the head of it, and then everybody will gather up all the old paper in the house so that they can tear it up and throw it out the window when General MacArthur goes past, and then I suggest to go around and tell everybody it was all a big mistake and General MacArthur is still too busy for parades, and they'll all give us the old paper just to get rid of it, except maybe the ones that decide to keep it for the next parade anyways.

I'm afraid that's neither very practical nor very ethical, Miss Kitty said. Yes, Benny? she said. Meaning me waving my hand, and I said, I suggest avvertizing in the newspaper that a handsome millionair wants a wife and he dont care what age, so all the old maids will write long letters explaining how wonderful they are, and there would probably be enough letters to fill about a thousand barrils full of paper.

Making everybody start to laugh and clap their hands, and Miss Kitty said, Oh, dear, there seems to be such a thing as original ideas being entirely too original. What I had in mind was some such thought as requesting your naybors to put aside their paper bags for you after they do their marketing instead of thoughtlessly throwing them away. Perhaps we'd better put the entire subject aside for a while and begin the spelling period, she said.

Which we did.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 26

"Kitty Jocelyn murdered my daughter—just as surely as if she had thrust a knife into Janey's heart. But the newspapers glossed it over as 'accidental death from a patent reducing medicine' without mentioning Kitty by name. Why by name. I consulted a lawyer and found that I could not institute criminal proceedings against Kitty or the X-Why Company. The most I could do was to bring a civil suit for damages. The X-Why Company actually made me offering twenty thousand dollars damages. I refused. By the same mail, I received a letter from Rhoda Jocelyn, then in Europe, asking me to arrange for the debut of her stepdaughter, Kitty, in New York the next winter.

"I was speaking the truth when I told Inspector Foyle that I refused Kitty as a client last May. I only lied about my motive for refusing. It was something of a shock when Rhoda and Kitty walked into my office this autumn and begged me to reconsider, that was the first time I ever saw Kitty and I realized that she was beautiful—much more beautiful than Janey could ever become—and I hated her. She was on the threshold of life and love. And Janey was dead. When Rhoda pleaded with me and said: 'Kitty must have her chance in life', I smiled, and thought of Janey who would never have life nor chance nor anything, because of that thoughtless, selfish, stupid girl. They were planning to spend sixty thousand dollars on Kitty's party. I had never had a twentieth of that amount to spend on Janey all her life. I don't believe I showed my feelings even then. I merely said that I didn't care to bring out a girl who had been published as scandalously as Kitty.

"And then Kitty laughed and said: 'I suppose you're thinking of X-Why the 'reducing method of the sophisticates'?'

"I was surprised at the calmness of her own voice as I answered: 'Perhaps I am. Do you really take X-Why yourself?' She little knew how bitterly I loathed her at that moment. She laughed again and said: 'Of course not. As that newspaper story I made up my mind that Kitty Jocelyn should die exactly as Janey had died—for the same reason, in a beastly disfigured by the same yellowness, suffering the same tortures for the same long hours. It would never be proved in court beyond a reasonable doubt that she had not taken an accidental overdose of X-Why. And I had ordered Star death, like Janey's, should be slanted to the barrier of the drug, and her doctors, like Janey's, should be absolutely unfortunate about her 'instructive' symptoms.

"I only agreed to take charge of Kitty's debut, because I knew that I would give me a chance to poison her. I only accepted the double fee Rhoda offered because I knew I would need some explanation for my actions in my mind about taking charge of Kitty's debut, if the police investigated her death.

"When Rhoda told me that Kitty had suffered from malaria during her in Europe, I knew that fate was on my side. After Janey's death, I read everything I could find about thermol and I knew that malaria victims were more susceptible to thermol poisoning than ordinary people. I bought a bottle of X-Why outside the city limits. I used to assist my husband in his dispensary. It recognized the tablets as those triturate tablets that crumble so easily. I dissolved them in a little water so they would pour smoothly. Like most proprietary drugs, X-Why is very bitter to make it palatable. There was no danger, of Kitty detecting the bitter taste of thermol.

"For nearly six weeks I visualized myself slipping the poison in to something Kitty was about to drink, and that daydream became more real than reality to me. My chance came at last the evening before the dance when we were drinking cocktails in the Murillo room. The air was heavy with the scent of flowers. I complained of closeness and asked the butler to open a window. That gave me a pretext for taking out the smelling salt phial and carrying it unstopped. The green glass disguised the yellow of the X-Why tablets. Kitty was restless, wandering about the room, glass in hand. When Cleary announced Philip Leach every one turned to look at him. And Kitty set down her glass three-quarters full. With one swift movement, I emptied the contents of the phial in it. I think it was because I was acting out a daydream that I was able to do it with such swiftness and dexterity. It was like doing something I had practised for a long time. There was little sense of volition. I watched her drink with the keenest pleasure. She was so unconscious of what was in store for her!

"As Mrs. Jowett reached this dramatic climax in her confession there was nothing in her manner to suggest the successful director of cocktail parties. She was intense, intent on her tale of avenging her daughter Janey.

"It came to me then in a blinding flash that it was my duty to protect all the girls who had endorsed X-Why. Most of the people who read about it would through taking X-Why were so obscure the manufacturers never heard their name or their fate, and didn't even mention X-Why by name. But if all these girls died, who had endorsed X-Why were to die of thermol poisoning one by one, the newspaper would have to print everything about it, and that would ruin the X-Why Company, and drive X-Why from the market. In each case it would be difficult to prove legally that these girls who were advertised as taking X-Why, never acually touched it, and could not have died from accidental overdose. Kitty was the only one Janey had mentioned by name—indeed, Janey died before the other endorsements appeared. But they were all doing so much harm to other people as Kitty had done to Janey. . . .

"Mrs. Claude's impersonation of Kitty at the dance deceived me completely. I felt no qualms at seeing Kitty alive — I thought Kitty's substitution of a drinking half the poisoned cocktail had saved her from a fatal dose. I had no idea I had succeeded in killing Kitty until her death was announced in the papers.

"During my interview with Inspector Foyle, I played my part with all the skill at my command, and I still don't see what I can have said or done to have undertaken. Of course, I had when I said it was afraid Dr. Jordan's murder would ruin me professionally. What did I care for such a 'profession' as mine? It was Janey I worked for—and when Janey died, I thought he died with her.

"She gave herself away", Basil explained to Archer, as once again they stood before the fire in Basil's living-room. "You remember how she signed her deposition with the name 'Catharine Jocelyn' in place of her own—'Caroline Jowett'?"

"I remember that was only a blunder."

"A blunder has convicted more than one criminal, as I told Foyle early in the case. Hans Gross gives an example similar to Jowett's case—a woman who was so excited she could not remember the name of a man who had attacked her. But when Gross asked her afterward she wrote a man's name instead of her own—quite unconsciously. The police looked up the man and found evidence proving him guilty of rape.

"But Mrs. Jowett knew herself guilty and she signed the name of her victim's adjected Archer.

"Exactly. And in the course of that first letter, she made two other blunders—two mistakes in spelling. Kitty's full, Christian name can be spelled in four ways—Katherine, Catherine, Katharine, and Catharine or Catharine. Kitty spelled it with a 'K' and an 'e'—'Katherine'. All through the letter Mrs. Jowett in her desk were addressed to 'Katherine' Jocelyn', and that was the signature on unsealed check in her pocket-book. But when Mrs. Jowett signed Kitty's name by mistake she spelled it with a 'C' and an 'a'—'Catharine'.

"I noticed that double error in spelling one day when I was going over the file of the case in Foyle's office. I believed there was some psychological reason for such a triple blunder, because I accept the Freudian hypothesis that no individual human act is ever 'accidental'.

"Mrs. Jowett was familiar with the right spelling of Kitty's name for it was under her supervision that paragraphs about Kitty were prepared for the press, and the right spelling—'Katherine'—was used in them. I verified that at the public library. Every published reference to Kitty could find spelled her name 'Katherine'—with just one exception. In the X-Why advertisement Kitty herself, or the printer, had blundered—why we will never know—and Kitty's endorsement of X-Why was signed just as Mrs. Jowett signed her statement—'Catharine Jocelyn', with a 'C' and an 'a'. Yet Mrs. Jowett was selling the truth when she said she had nothing to do with the arrangements for that endorsement.

"I verified that through the De Luxe Advertising Agency.

"Would it be coincidence that she had made the same errors in spelling Kitty's name that occurred in the X-Why advertisement and no where else? Had there been only one error I might have thought so. But two errors, both corresponding to the two in the X-Why endorsement, seemed too specific to be coincidence. Many a conscious plagiarist has convicted because he unwittingly repeated the errors in the thing he plagiarized.

"It this were not coincidence, it not only meant that Mrs. Jowett was familiar with the X-Why advertisements—it also meant that she had seen the particular advertisement which carried Kitty's endorsement. And that was something she had gone out of her way to deny when Foyle suggested it to her.

"I could see no one explanation—she was lying. Nothing is more likely to cause a blunder than a lie. When she denied having seen Kitty's X-Why endorsement, her treacherous hand gave her away by promptly writing Kitty's name in its place of her own and misspelling it exactly as it was misspelled in the X-Why endorsement. Her conscience was using the only way it could use—betraying her.

"In lie in the dark, hieroglyphic way?

"Impossible! I thought at first. You don't develop a deliberately murderous hatred for one girl you have known only six weeks and seen only a few times in those six weeks. The Freudists feigned had been unable to trace any previous acquaintance between Mrs. Jowett and Kitty Jocelyn. They had never even seen each other until Kitty got her engagement with Jowett in New York a few weeks ago.

"And then a new idea came to me. It was not necessary to trace any previous acquaintance between Kitty and her murderer in order to establish a motive for the murder. For Kitty was a public citizen. Thanks to Rhoda and the De Luxe Advertising Agency she was a public character, and there are often could make enemies in her public capacity, whom she had never seen or known personally.

"I tried to reduce the problem to Schoenfeld's formula: Kitty was the stimulus—the murder was the reaction. Who would react to that stimulus with murder?

"Pretty obvious, now you put it that way, isn't it? No one profited finally by Kitty's death. She was described by Ann as generous, easy-going, indulgent to others, not to herself. In all our talks about her history, we found only one thing she had ever done that could endanger the welfare of others—her public endorsement of a patent medicine containing a drug as dangerous as thermol. Kitty's murderer must be one of those who had suffered through that endorsement. In that case, the murderer might be instinctively try to conceal the motive by picking up a stooge out of the endorsement. Mrs. Jowett was the one suspect who had done that.

"Only some one with intimate, mentality or actually, would be taken in by the X-Why advertisements. In Mrs. Jowett's office, there was a picture of a fresh, healthy plump girl about fifteen—her daughter, Jane, who had died last May, the same month that Kitty's X-Why endorsement appeared in the newspapers. It had occurred to any of us before that there might be a connection between Jane and Kitty. For Jane died long before Kitty reached this country and met Mrs. Jowett.

"I owe a great deal to Foyle for the shrewd observation he made during his first visit to Mrs. Jowett's office. He noticed the underlying-nail phial that could be used so easily to carry poison. He noticed the occasional slight fluttering of her eyelid which suggested that her nerves and emotions were not in entirely healthy state. He described her as 'motherly'—the very psychological type most likely to avenge a wrong against the imagined.

"Because we live in a society based largely on the fundamental male emotions, greed and lust, we are apt to think of murder as something that occurs only when one of these two emotions is thwarted. But in the female there is another, originally, a third emotion, equally important, and as fundamental in the female of many primitive social organizations. This maternal instinct is atrophied in many civilized women. But even today you occasionally find women like Mrs. Jowett, who are mothers first and everything else afterward. When you do, sometimes maternal love is just as likely to lead to hate, revenge and murder as thwarted lust or greed. The primitive mother, seeing her young in some one else's cradle, because she is unselfish.

"And Mrs. Jowett was primitive. Had she been a man, or a woman, she would have been more aware of the sexual and legal implications of Jane's death, and that might have made her personal feeling less terrible. But she had no mind for abstractions. Kitty Jocelyn was a concrete, human object for hatred which Mrs. Jowett's mind could grasp. Revenge replaced her daughter as her object in life. You recall how she said: 'Janey was all I had? That had a lot to do with the murder. Most nervous break-downs occur when people lose their only tie in one basket, and something happens to the basket.—

"I think this unhappy case demonstrates the rules of psychology in criminal investigation. A detective's life one form of clue a criminal can neither remove, conceal nor destroy—the one clue that is entirely beyond the imagination of the psychic fingerprint. In Mrs. Jowett's case, her slip of the pen was the only direct indication of her guilt we had. There were no material clues against her. And it was only by reducing the problem to Schoenfeld's formula that I was able to isolate her motive from the mass of other facts in the case".

After General Archer had gone, Basil sat alone before the fire so long that Juniper became worried.

"Anything on on the mind, Dickah, Willie, huh?" he ventured at last.

Basil roused himself.

"—never let me hear the word X-Why again! And turn on the radio—see if you can get that Stravinsky concert."

There was a howl of static, and then came a clear, resonant voice:

". . . you have just been listening to Stravinsky's 'Firebird' through the courtesy of X-Why, the reducing method of the sophisticate. Science says, 'Try'."

LT. COL. MERRITT

Col. Merritt had little to say about his capture and imprisonment. He said he wanted to check safety records of the group with whom he escaped before he would say much about it. He was described as the "boss" in getting the men out of the prison camp. "Come on, there's no decision to make".

He said he couldn't recall his own feelings at the moment. "I was quite a long time ago and I was thinking of other things".

In fact, the Colonel was reticent in telling of his experiences. He only became animated at the fact that he was scheduled for nine months in prison camps, and then liberated. He was never swayed in handcuffs and never had to be blindfolded. He agreed to get keys to them, strike before they were clamped on "em".

He had little to say about his future plans except looking forward to getting back to his farm. Concerning the candidates in the constituency of Vancouver-Burrard, he had no personal election, for which he has been nominated.

He didn't know when he would get home, himself, up to the arrival of "Jo" Stant what he called the "motivating power" was. He said that his pilot officer, the pretty Canadian newspaper woman for photographers, was "a good Canadian girl. I've seen lipstick for three years".

The Colonel was glad to get back here looking up old friends. "We have a lot of them here. One of the first persons he asked for was Rose Munro, Canadian Press' "Rose of No Man's Land" correspondent, the operator.

Col. Merritt described the quiet way correspondent as "one reporter who never bothered me. Just always did a good job".

TO ANNOUNCE WINNERS OF NAME THE CAMP CONTEST SOON

With judges Owen Henry, Orland Wannamaker and Harry Rollins working overtime scrutinizing the hundreds of entries submitted to the "Name the Camp" contest sponsored by the Kiwanis Club here, it is expected that the prizes offered for the three best names will be announced within the next few days. Names submitted by Ted Schwab announced today.

Many of the entries submitted are masterpieces of originality and the judges are being hard put to select the winners.

Names of the winners and presentation of the prizes will be held on the stage of the Collegiate Institute on May 7 the final night of the Kiwanis musical extravaganza "Fun and Your Troubles" scheduled to run three nights in the second week of May.

ONE-TO-FOUR-MILE

Canadians operating south of Oldenburg who gained 3 to 4 miles yesterday had advanced another 300 yards northeast to take another village. Those Canadians have covered three miles since yesterday.

Forcing the lines1 in the Grebbe Line west of Nijkerk, 15 miles west of Apeldoorn, Canadian infantry, with both sides, each of which was making a detailed appreciation of the other's operations and seeking to ascertain local intentions.

Canadian companies moved into the area north of Nunspeetsee and Harderwijk just south of the Zuider Zee last night and fighting in the area continued. Resistance was stubborn.

Canadians patrolling the northwest of Ede got to Renswoude, six miles from Ede, before returning. On the patrol they observed enemy working parties, including some digging mines and blocks. They engaged the biggest group with 3-inch mortar fire, inflicting many casualties.

Canadian Advance to 15 Miles from Oldenburg

The Canadian advance has carried to 15 miles south of Emden and to within 4 miles of Oldenburg. The Kusten canal bridgehead southwest of Oldenburg now is about ten miles wide and more than three miles wide.

The Canadians operating near Oldenburg and in the Kusten canal bridgehead, fighting against what Berlin called "tremendous" casualties in beating off a series of enemy counter-attacks, have captured 2,000 more prisoners, making the total of prisoners taken since yesterday 3,000. Casualties are not comparable.

The Algonquin Regiment of North Bay, Ont., counted 300 enemy dead in its immediate area after some vigorous fighting and they had seen no comparable slaughter since last September in the Falaise Gap. Free French and Polish Parachutists in Normandy had counted 2,000 enemy dead around the German 7th Army.

Some battalions which first crossed the canal—the Algonquins, the Lincoln and Welland Regiment—of the Canadian 4th Armored Brigade and Sutherland Highlanders of Canada—fought all the line and now there has been no slackening of their pressure.

There was all picture of the German front means little to the men who have been struggling to the bridgehead. They have gone with Sherman and when they stop, it was in slit trenches half-filled with water seeping up from peat bogs.

TRENTON

Rfmn. L. Mylles Dies of Wounds

Trenton, April 20—Mr. and Mrs. David Mylles, 109 Leopold Street, have received word that their son Rfmn. Allan Robert Mylles, RCAF, died of wounds on April 15th. He had been previously reported seriously wounded. This is the second time he has been wounded, the first time last July at Caen, France.

Enlisting at the age of 18 he went overseas in May, 1944, for training and was transferred to the Queen's Own.

Sam Factor, First Canadian Jew, to Be Named Judge

By DOUG ROW
(Of Press Gallery Staff)

Toronto, April 22 — (CP) — The first of Canada's 2,000,000 Jews to receive a judicial appointment from the government of his country sat in the Supreme Court today as an honor and a responsibility — a recognition of the Jewish community in Canada."

Russian-born, self-made Samuel Factor had on his desk letters and messages of congratulation on his appointment as Judge of the County Court of the Ontario County of York. Some of them were from non-Jews but many were from Jews scattered through Canada united in message that Parliament now vested in this 53-year-old man who once peddled, for $2 a week.

His appointment was announced Wednesday, at the same time as the appointment of Brigadier King distinguished Senate and other appointments and the Cabinet cabinet shuffle.

Born in Kiev, Russia.

Samuel Factor was born in Kiev, Russia, and came to Canada at the age of eight, able to speak Russian, French and Russian. He worked for two years at a bookkeeper's job before taking his law course at the University of Toronto from which he graduated in 1916.

He was overseas in the First World War with the 180th Battalion and in this war held the rank of Squadron Leader in the Royal Air Force Overseas Headquarters for a year after 2 1/2 years service.

Between the two wars, Judge Factor practised law in Toronto, served on the Board of Education and the city council. In 1930 he became the first Liberal to win a Toronto seat in the Federal Parliament in 40 years when he defeated veteran Conservative H. H. Church in Toronto-Spadina.

Re-elected in 1935 and 1940, he had 15 years parliamentary experience, much of it devoted to committee work.

accuracy that they are sometimes able to neutralize batteries which are surrounded by their own troops.

The Black Bed Flash established its first headquarters posts inside the Berlin outskirts and are directing the artillery fire of the battle from the quiet cellars of a deep six storey building built by the Germans to withstand Allied bombs.

In addition to the quiet headquarters which have gone up in Berlin, Pravda said the Soviet command is also operating red flags even in the front lines of the Berlin streets—carrying the flags forward in a relay race. When one fails another darts forward, takes up the flag and dashes forward with it to a newly-won position, the newspaper said.

"The enemy has poisoned water supplies, a correspondent wrote.

German prisoners were described as "pale and stunned" from the Russian bombardment. They marched eastward like "Zombies, expressionless," a dispatch said.

CALGARY SOLDIERS CAPTURE HUNS

These Calgary Highlanders are seen, just after they "yanked" eight Jerries out of a dug-out near Tenborg, Germany. They are searching the Hitler "supermen" for weapons.

Commander of Horror Prison Camp Played Straus Waltzes While Inmates Were Tortured

By WILLIAM FRYE

Belsen, Germany, April 23.—(AP)—The nameless dead were getting a burial today at this fearsome concentration camp.

No coffins or flowers at this funeral. No tears or well-bred sympathy. No music.

These naked corpses were hauled in trucks and dumped into a pit. Their pall bearers were S.S. (Elite Guard) men and women, now Allied prisoners.

Their litany was the hoarse shouts of British soldiers, sick with disgust and fury, ordering these marked members of Hitler's chosen legions about their horrible task.

I saw Belsen—its piles of lifeless dead and its aimless swarms of living dead. Their great eyes were just animal lights in skin-covered skulls of famine.

Depths of Starvation.

Some were dying of typhus, some of typhoid, some of tuberculosis, but most were just dying of starvation. Starvation—the flesh on their bodies had fed on itself until there was no flesh left, just skin covering bones and the end of all hope, and nothing left to feed on.

Tragically, there is still hope inside these still-breathing cadavers. As long as eyes can stare from the bodies scattered everywhere on the ground there is hope. Hope in these for whom there is no hope. They are living but they cannot live. No food, no care can save them. Ahead of them is nothing—nothing but that pit with the bulldozer waiting to cover them with earth.

Nothing—well, there is one thing, the knowledge that after months of bestiality there is suddenly, unbelievably, friendliness and goodwill around them, was without meaning or significance.

No Sex; No Shame, No Modesty.

I saw them with no sex, no shame, no modesty, no self-respect among these people—driven in a few months backward a million years toward primordial man.

I saw one eating food just brought from the cook-house, eating within a yard of corpses dead for days, unconcerned by the death beside them (or by the stench from slow-burning heaps of rags impregnated with filth).

Inside a hut I choked and cried. What once were men lay on the floor clothed in rags. Already they lay in an some grotesque macabre attitudes of the corpses on the heaps a few yards away.

We could see the light of deliverance flash in those dying eyes. One or two feeble, wasted arms came slowly up and waved a "V" sign.

The officer took me to the cook-house and introduced me to a Polish woman who for several years had been in German prisons and concentration camps. She had been in Belsen seven months.

This is what I heard:

Josef Kramer, S.S. Commander of Belsen now under arrest, previously commanded Auschwitz, in Poland, where children were taken from their mothers and burned alive, where a gas chamber killed thousands, where Kramer kept his own orchestra to entertain him with Strauss waltzes while abominations were practised under his command outside his window.

Horrors began with Kramer's arrival five months ago.

His belabored starvation at promiscuity, kept it up as a habit. He enjoyed the shuddering filthiness that Belsen became.

I heard that occasionally men starving in Belsen watched the dying with hunger, and as soon as they were dead, cut out their hearts, livers and kidneys and devoured them to sustain their own vanishing lives.

I heard from Madame's lips that one man seized in cannibalism by the S.S. was forced to kneel publicly, holding in his teeth the ear of a corpse, the entire day.

I heard that S.S. women tied one living and one dead together, and burned both on a smouldering heap of scrap leather and worn out shoes and clothes while inciting hands in a hideous, bestial danse macabre around this incredible pyre.

I heard that their sadistic joy in watching the slow disintegration of humans into something less than beasts was not always enough to satisfy Kramer's devils and witches—beatings, chopping off fingers and other glittering savageries gave occasional zest to their jaded appetites.

ENEMY UNAWARE

tre theatre was agreed upon.

Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes of London, Ont., received the news at Field Marshal Alexander's headquarters. Gen. Foulkes dispatched a senior staff officer to Major-Gen. Cyrus and by Feb. 11 the move was under way.

Stepped in Its Tracks

The First Canadian Armored Brigade was stopped in its tracks on an overland haul from the Bologna sector to the concentration area of a British corps. The Brigade was turned around, brought 'closer in the Canadian area and held until time to move toward a west coast port.

The 1st Division held their line on the Senio until the rear areas had been reasonably cleared. Then they quietly disengaged and were relieved without the enemy knowing what was brewing.

By that time the remainder of the corps was on the west coast, waiting to be ferried to Marseilles whence they journeyed overland to join the 2nd Corps.

The Germans were kept entirely in the dark about the move by the security-conscious Canadians.

Insignia Taken Down

The move towards ports was another matter. This, the troops were instructed, was explained by the fact that they were going into areas in same dress. Vehicle tactical signs and divisional markings were painted out. The magnitude of the operation called for the utmost secrecy. The men were not fully informed but knew something big was on and shut up tightly.

Withdrawal from the line into concentration areas was explained as the revival of an earlier plan to rest the battle-worn Canadians. Such a plan had been talked about. It was an open secret that advance parties had arranged for billets and recreational accommodation in a certain area and then had been recalled. That is should be reinstated aroused no comment.

Told Whole Story

The move towards ports was another matter. This, the troops were instructed, was explained by the fact that they were going into areas in reserve of 12th Army Group. This was technically true, but once the soldiers watched aboard ships they were told the whole story.

Civilian chatter was more feared in Italy than in France as a security break. Aside from the greater political differences, Italians are generally a curious and gossipy folk, capable of "selling the beans" with the best will in the world.

LET SELF BE CAPTURED'

Paris, April 23 — (AP) — Franz Von Papen let himself be captured in the Ruhr pocket, not because the Nazis had entrusted him with a peace mission, but because he thought the Allies might send him on a peace mission to the Nazis. This conclusion has been reached by Allied officers, including Russians, who questioned the wily diplomat, it was learned last night.

TWO ARMIES CUTTING INTO HEART OF BERLIN
AMERICANS CROSS DANUBE AT THIRD PLACE

Armed Forces Pour Into Dilligen; Ulm Being Overrun

Russo-American Junction Expected Momentarily

TAKE 1 — ARMED FORCES .. ..
By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 24 —(AP)— The three-army assault on the outer ramparts of the German Alpine redoubt burst across the Danube at a third place today, overran the traffic centre of Ulm and carried to within 105 miles northwest of Hitler's hideout at Berchtesgaden.

An American-Russian junction was expected momentarily in the centre, splitting Germany.

Troops of the United States 3rd Army pressed to within 93 miles northwest of the Austrian strongholds of Linz and Salzburg, eastern gateways to the southern redoubt. The 7th Army closed along the last 50 miles toward Munich and the French 1st Army advanced close to the Austrian frontier and reduced three large pockets behind the lines.

Ulm, city of 60,000, is on the Danube. It was the scene of one of Napoleon's greatest victories. It fell after a 10-mile overnight advance.

The 3rd Army made additional gains of 18 miles in the Regensburg area.

Rommel Died at Ulm.

Captured German documents said Field Marshal Irwin Rommel died at Ulm last Oct. 14 of wounds received in a strafing attack in Normandy.

Supreme Headquarters, muffled on any word of a junction with the Russians pending governmental announcements by the Big Three, could give no news of the United States 1st and 9th army lines along the Elbe and east of Leipzig. Many correspondents believed preliminary contact with the Russians already had been made.

Infantry and armor poured into the Danube bridgehead at Dillingen, probing into the foothills of the Alps. The 12th Armored Division widened the bridgehead to 10 miles and deepened it to six, capturing an airfield at Kicklingen.

The 100th Division captured an 80-acre V-bomb plant intact. It had been working until Friday with 2,500 impressed foreign laborers.

1,015,000 Prisoners in April

German disintegration proceeded swiftly. During April alone, more than 1,015,000 prisoners have been captured by Gen. Eisenhower's nine western armies which since D-Day have captured upwards of 2,345,000 Germans.

In the north, the British 2nd army intensified the siege of blazing Bremen and tightened an arc around Hamburg. The city of Harburg, which lies across the broad Elbe south of Hamburg, was being cleaned up.

Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's Tommies had captured Harsefeld, 20 miles west of Hamburg, and Esterbrugge, 10 miles west. From the latter town they were lobbing shells at German shipping on the Elbe.

British troops of the 1st Canadian army had pushed across the Maas river 26 miles east of Rotterdam in western Holland, while in northern Holland Polish troops under Gen. Crerar's command were within 6 1-2 miles of Emden, former U-Boat stronghold.

Hit Tokyo Area For First Time Since April 16th

Guam, April 4—(AP)—Hitting the Tokyo area the first time since a large scale fire raid on the enemy capital April 16, a large force of B-29s bombed the Hitachi engine plant for the first time this morning. Other plants in the Tachikawa industrial area, just west of Tokyo, also were attacked.

The Hitachi company's Tachikawa plant is one of the few aircraft engine factories in Japan which had not been attacked in the superfortress campaign to knock out Japanese airline production.

Bracken States 'Planned Economy' Challenge to Business

Montreal, April 24 —(CP)— John Bracken, Progressive Conservative Leader, told the young men's section of the Montreal Board of Trade on Monday night that "the challenge to business which I consider most formidable is the challenge of Socialism, or what so many more soothingly describe as 'the planned economy.'"

"I find it impossible," he said in an address prepared for delivery at the annual dinner of the organization, "to detect the difference between Socialism and 'the planned economy' which the centralized planners maintain exists. The one—Socialism — begins with and exists to plan the economy and the lives of the people within it. And planned economy, whatever its auspices, leads inevitably to Socialism and, as we have all witnessed in Europe—to totalitarianism."

Mr. Bracken said he noted in people of "all shades of opinion, and all degrees of intelligence" a willingness to try "this strange political cocktail."

Businessmen themselves, he added, would have to work to remove the "stigma" frequently attached to success.

"The question is not shall we do without business. We can't. The basic question is who shall create, control, manage and develop business. It is my unshakeable conviction that in a democracy there can be only one answer — the individual; by the efforts and through the vision of free men."

Some government planning was necessary, but government could not be expected to plan for business. The function of government is "not to obstruct freedom as centralized planning must do, but to see that freedom is fully and equitably realized—it does not exist to direct or manage but simply to regulate."

"HELLFIRE CORNER" MOST BOMBED

Dover, Eng, April 24 (Reuters)—The southeast coast, Britain's front line after Dunkerque until the invasion of France, suffered more from German air attacks than any other part of Britain, Fuel Minister Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George said in an address yesterday.

He said "Hellfire Corner" with a pre-war population of 38,000 was bombarded with 1,146 shells of all types, 697 bombs and a variety of flying bombs and parachute mines.

MARSHAL PETAIN IN SWITZERLAND; TURN BACK LAVAL

King Leopold of Belgium Expected to Reach Swiss Frontier Some Time Today

By THOMAS HAWKINS

Bern, April 24 — (AP) — Aged Marshal Petain entered Switzerland from Germany today after declaring himself willing to stand trial in France. And King Leopold of Belgium, who surrendered to the Germans in 1940, was expected to reach the Swiss frontier some time during the day.

Pierre Laval, arch-collaborationist of the Vichy regime, appeared at the frontier of nearby Liechtenstein, but was refused entry. Laval is under a death sentence imposed by a Marseille court which convicted him in absentia last fall on a charge of having had "intelligence with the enemy."

Petain, who observed his 89th birthday today, was allowed to enter Switzerland after asking and receiving official permission to cross the neutral country into France to surrender himself to French authorities.

The French Chief of State of the Vichy regime, his wife, and several companions crossed the border at 9 a. m., at St. Margrethen, near the eastern end of Lake Constance.

Will Surrender to France

In asking the Swiss federal council to permit his transit, Petain declared himself willing to surrender in France and stand trial, it was announced.

However, he will remain in Switzerland temporarily until arrangements are made with the proper French authorities.

The Marshal, hero of Verdun in the First Great War, crossed into Switzerland as Allied forces rolled forward in the adjacent areas of Germany.

His move to surrender came the same day that his trial, in absentia, was scheduled to begin. Today, April 24, was set nearly a month ago for opening of the trial before a special French "purge court."

This dispatch did not indicate how he had managed to make good his flight from Germany. Ot at least one occasion since he went into Germany he was reported in custody of the Gestapo. He has been head of a puppet French regime set up by the Nazis in Sigmaringen, Germany.

TREASON CANVICTION ETC

Washington, April 24—(AP)—The treason conviction of Anthony Cramer, naturalized German who associated with Nazi saboteurs landed in the United States by submarine, was overturned yesterday by the supreme court on the ground that proof of overt, treasonable conduct was lacking. The decision was 5 to 4, with Justice William O. Douglas dissenting.

Cramer, New York city boiler worker, drew a 45-year sentence on the charge.

Lights of London Windows Cast Golden Glow into Streets Again

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 24 — (CP Cable)—The people of London opened their windows and let light shine into the streets of their city again last night.

From the roof of the Press Association building high above Fleet Street, heart of the city, I saw the capital covered with an amber haze reflected from countless twinkling lights below as millions of citizens who had lived in enshrouding darkness for 5 1/2 years flung back the curtains to let the brightness of their homes shine across the board avenues and bomb-battered alleys.

London from above was still not the glowing spectacle of pre-war this St. George's night as the blackout was relaxed in Britain except for a five-mile coastal strip. Street lamps still remained dimmed and the habit of pulling blackout curtains every night died hard in many places. But golden rivers of light, tion, were enough to show that Londoners were rejoicing in their deliverance.

Off to the west, Piccadilly was a radiant pool. Streets of the west end sparkled as apartment blocks, hotels and theatres in London's playground were ablaze in an orgy of unaccustomed light.

Lights from speeding trains and trucks in the east end districts cast a glow on the waters of the Thames and touched the outlines of St. Paul's into a faint silhouette.

For some, the blackout has become a habit.

One housewife admitted that although she had looked forward "to this minute for more than five years, but now that it's come and I've got the curtains pulled back I feel as if I've got no clothes on."

A survey showed that, while the west end bravely tried to play up the long-expected moment, many store windows were still boarded up, running for miles in every direc-

Believe Hitler Long Since Fled To Berchtesgaden

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, April 24 —(AP)— Despite Hamburg radio broadcasts boasting that Hitler was in Berlin personally commanding the defence of the toppling capital, it was believed generally at Allied Supreme Headquarters today that the Fuehrer actually has long since fled to his southern redoubt and probably now is at Berchtesgaden.

It is hardly conceivable, even with his flair for the melodramatic, that Hitler would have so painstakingly turned the Bavarian and northern Austrian mountain belt into a final fortress of Nazism if he had not counted all along on being there himself for his final days in power.

HEPBURN PLEDGES MANY REFORMS IN MANIFESTO

$25 Basic Minimum Wage For Men to be Set and Youth Assisted

Windsor, April 24—(CP)—Liberal leader Mitchell Hepburn launched his campaign for the premiership of Ontario Monday night by issuing a 14-page manifesto pledging a $25.00 basic minimum wage for men in industry and commerce, a broad program of public works and "every conceivable assistance" in marketing Ontario products.

The manifesto, read at a party convention in Windsor-Sandwich riding which chose Mayor Arthur Reaume as Liberal-Labor candidate for the constituency in the June 4 provincial election, also promised "universal" health insurance, floor prices for agriculture, increases in old age pensions, creation of a new youth department under a separate minister "who knows the score," reduction in voting age from 21 to 18 and equal pay for equal work by women.

The 48-year old Elgin-County onion farmer who rose to the premiership in 1934, dramatically resigned Oct. 31, 1942 and then returned to the party late in 1944 after sitting in the legislature as an Independent Liberal, was interrupted frequently during his address and sat down at one stage after persuading one of his interrupters to take the platform.

Not Opposed to Unions

After identifying himself as William Martin, member of the C.I.O., the man asked Mr. Hepburn about his stand on the C.I.O. Mr. Hepburn said he did not oppose the union as an organization, but objected to some of the men the union had sent to Canada.

"I raised my voice in objection because I said they were no good," said Mr. Hepburn. "When you put faith in men like Parent, Reaume and Burt, then I'll support you."

Alex Parent and George Burt were chosen U.A.W.-C.I.O. candidates respectively for Essex North and Windsor-Walkerville at a meeting Sunday, Arthur Reaume, Windsor mayor, also was chosen U.A.W.-C.I.O. candidate for Windsor-Sandwich at the meeting, but last night, after being nominated as Liberal candidate for the riding, he said he will contest Windsor-Sandwich as a Liberal-Labor candidate. Mayor Reaume contested the riding as a Progressive Conservative in the Aug. 4, 1943, election, but was defeated by George Bennett, C.C.F.

Hepburn Endorsed

The meeting last night passed a resolution endorsing Mr. Hepburn as leader of the Ontario Liberal party. Riding associations will be asked to endorse his leadership instead of holding a provincial convention.

"We Liberals believe that a more abundant life lies within reach of the people of Ontario," said Mr. Hepburn in his address.

REVOLUTIONARIES NEARLY ALL KILLED

Guatemala, April 24 — (AP) — Nearly all of 300 wellarmed revolutionaries who swarmed out of Honduras' Espiritu Santo mountains a little more than a week ago and sacked the village of Copen were killed by government troops rushed in to put down the revolt, reliable sources said yesterday.

CANADIANS TAKING HUNS AT RATE OF 1,000 TO 1,500 DAY

Nazi Resistance is Strong at Points But Inevitably Melts Into Surrender

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 24 — (CP Cable) — More than 26,000 German prisoners have been taken by the Canadian Army since the Rhine crossing March 24, and the figure is swelling by about 1,000 to 1,500 daily.

Progress along Gen. Crerar's front has been limited by strong German resistance at some points lately, but this inevitably melts into surrender.

The entire garrison of 400 at Wagenborn, south of the Eser Estuary and 15 miles east of Groeningen, surrendered last night after offering spirited resistance for a time.

Advancing Poles Shelled

German artillery placed north of Emden, across the estuary from Polish 1st Armored Division troops, now is troubling the advancing Poles. It ranges from ack-ack fire from levelled guns to 28-cm. fire with a range up to 25 miles.

Polish troops along the Leda river east of the Ems river and also west of the Ems reported that positions near Leer were the closest they have got to Emden.

The South Alberta Regiment of Medicine Hat progressed nearly 1 1/2 miles along a road leading to Oldenburg last night but fell back today to reorganize. The Lake Superior Regiment, of Port Arthur, Ont., now is working northward after pushing east along the banks of the Kusten canal. Enemy shelling was reported heavy.

NEWS BLACKOUT COVERS LATEST GAINS IN ITALY

British and American Armies Spreading Out in Strength Along Po River

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Rome, April 24—(AP)—The British 8th and Allied 5th Armies spread out in strength along the southern banks of the Po River today as a partial news blackout covered the latest Allied gains in northern Italy.

The 8th Army broke into the outskirts of Ferrara last night after plunging through disorganized and fleeing German forces to that road hub city 30 miles north and slightly east of Bologna. The Ferrara airfield was captured.

Official reports said the Germans were attempting to "escape across the Po on rafts, in boats, and by other means."

The exact areas overrun were withheld from publication to prevent the enemy from ascertaining where Allied spearheads had thrust across the escape routes.

Allied planes have destroyed or damaged at least 4,000 enemy vehicles in the Po Valley in the past two days.

Run Wild Thru Germans

In the advance to the Ferrara area, the 8th Army's tanks ran wild through the fleeing Germans. The tanks shot up many enemy vehicles and 1,000 prisoners were taken up to midday yesterday in the areas of Bondeno and Finale alone. Both Bondeno and Finale lie west of Ferraro on the immediate approaches to the Po.

An official report of this 8th Army action said British fliers "reported a big concentration of enemy transports in the area but decided not to attack when they saw it already was surrounded by our tanks and was already in the bag."

Counter-Attack Repulsed

American and South African units of the 5th Army moved up to the

Armored Forces at Elbe R. 20 Miles From Americans

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 24 — (AP)—Russian troops have tightened their encirclement of Berlin—already more than one-third in Soviet hands — and the German high command admitted today that Red Army men in a swift dash halfway across central Austria have swept to within 89 miles east of Berchtesgaden.

The enemy communique said the surge through Austria carried to Eisenerz, 57 miles from Linz and 85 from Salzburg. Forces of the United States 3rd Army are 93 miles northwest of those two cities, and 110 from Berchtesgaden in their southward slice toward the Germans' Alpine redoubt.

By German account, Russians in Austria were but 155 airline miles from a linkup with the 3rd Army.

Two powerful Soviet armies were cutting into the heart of Berlin in savage street battles.

Near Meeting Place

South of the crumbling citadel of Nazidom, other Soviet forces drew near American troops waiting for an epochal merging of the eastern and western fronts.

The German communique, broadcast by the Hamburg radio, declared Germans still were resisting on the northern and eastern edges of Berlin.

More than a third of Berlin was in Russian hands. German reports indicated that fighting was swirling through nearly one-half of the wrecked city last night. Red Army troops and tanks advanced from point to point over the bodies of Germans who had been refused permission to retreat.

Southwest of Berlin, now almost encircled, Red Army tanks drew up to the Elbe River at a point within 20 miles of American positions.

Being Reduced to Rubble

Berlin was being reduced to rubble, building by building, in savage street fighting as so many European cities have been before it. Both the 1st White Russian and the 1st Ukrainian Armies had hurdled the outskirts and were fighting well inside the central areas.

A Moscow communique announced that Red Army tanks had burst across the belt railroad into the inner city and captured the Metropolitan gas works, only eight blocks from Alexander Platz, a major commercial centre.

As the battle for Berlin rose in fury — there was some belief here it might fall within two days—the German radio announced that Hitler had sent an 11th-hour message to his one-time Axis partner, Mussolini, declaring the "struggle for our very existence has reached its climax."

The broadcast said the message was sent to Mussolini in Milan.

Russians May Effect Junction With Allies Today

By HAL BOYLE

With the U. S. 1st Army in Germany, April 24 — (AP). — The Russians may effect a junction today with waiting American troops, a Soviet tankman hinted in field radio conversations with soldiers on this front yesterday.

(Allied supreme headquarters in Paris has said that first announcement of a link-up will be made by the chiefs of staff in London, Washington and Moscow.)

Staff Sgt. Alexander J. Balter, Russian-born American tankman from Pittsburgh, who speaks both Russian and German, heard the Soviet soldier say:

"Cheerful greetings to our American comrades. God be with you. Greetings and health to our Allied friends. Wait where you are. Hold your patience. We will contact you at your present location."

Then he hinted that the juncture might take place in the next 24 hours. He gave no indication of his position, which would have been valuable information for the listening Germans, who tried to jam the reception.

Field radios used for the conversation have a maximum range of only 30 to 50 miles.

"We are getting closer to you continually," the Russian voice said during contacts between noon and 6 p.m. "More than that cannot be said now. We Russians are not sleeping and are doing everything in our power to reach you."

Germans Offer to Leave Prisoners In Camps for Allied Liberation

Washington, April 24 — (AP) — Capitol Hill heard demands today for a harsh peace as Germans themselves read a solemn warning that ruthless pursuit and punishment await those who mistreat Allied prisoners.

At the same time Britain and the United States announced they had accepted a German offer to leave prisoners of war in camps where they may be liberated by advancing Allied armies.

The warning against further atrocities and those already committed was showered upon Germany in the form of leaflets bearing the facsimile signatures of Prime Minister Churchill, President Truman and Marshal Stalin.

Any person, they said, "of whatsoever service or rank in whose charge Allied prisoners of war, internees or deported citizens have been placed" will be held individually responsible "no less than the German high command" and competent German authorities.

"Any person guilty of maltreating or allowing any Allied prisoners of war, internees or deported citizens to be maltreated, whether in battle zone, on lines of communication, in a camp, hospital, prison or elsewhere, will be ruthlessly pursued and brought to punishment," the leaflets declared.

As evidence mounted of atrocities committed within Germany, several legislators here said they have become convinced that a tough peace settlement is essential.

"Apparently only by being harsh can we drive home to the German people the futility of war and the horror and enormousness of the Nazi cruelties," Rep. Robert Sikes (Dem., Fla.) told a reporter in typical comment.

"We must continue to force the Germans to see as many of the atrocity centres as possible and make them realize how horrible the Nazis have been," commented Rep. Paul W. Shafer (Rep., Mich.). "A harsh peace seems to be the only answer."

Their demands were in tune with angrily-voiced sentiment expressed in the House of Representatives yesterday.

Several members urged speedy and full punishment of Nazis responsible for the mistreating of prisoners, and three representatives and a Senator introduced legislation to create a permanent agency to investigate and keep a record of war atrocities.

The German offer to leave war prisoners in their present camps was transmitted through the Swiss government. The arrangement is to be effective Sunday midnight.

Meanwhile, Elmer Davis, Office of War Information Director just returned from Europe, said Germans themselves will be told "plenty" about the horrors within Nazi concentration camps. Allied newspapers and radio stations in Germany will give liberal coverage to the atrocity stories as they are unfolded, Mr. Davis told newsmen.

Subscriptions Show Canadians Willing to Meet Challenge of Larger Quota

Ottawa, April 24. (CP)—Total purchases of the Eighth Victory Loan Bonds on Monday, first day of the three-week drive for a minimum $1,350,000,000, came to $67,785,300, National Headquarters announced today.

More significant to loan campaign officials here than the aggregate figures for yesterday's canvassing was the "apparent willingness" of individual Canadians to meet the challenge of their allotted quota of $675,000,000 which is half of the National target. Their purchases yesterday totalled $23,791,900 against a first-day total of $19,856,300 for the previous loan.

Alberta Going Strong

Alberta reported the largest opening day sale of Victory Bonds in any loan yet when residents of the province purchased a total of $4,664,700. There were 11,507 individual applications and the dollar total was nearly $2,000,000 higher than at the same time six months ago. It included $3,963,950 from individuals, $251,750 from members of the armed forces, and $450,000 from large purchasers.

An internationally-minded United States general bought the first bond in the campaign in Regina yesterday He is Maj.-Gen. Albert D. Smith of the United States army air forces, formerly in charge of air transport operations at Goose Bay, Labrador, and now on loan to the British government He and his wife have bought bonds in the last four Victory Loan campaigns.

CHARGE TRUCK DRIVER AFTER RESIDENTS COMPLAIN OF NOISE

For some considerable time past complaints have been received from residents in the Foster Avenue-East Dundas Street sector regarding parked transport tractor engines being raced with reckless abandon and to such an extent that the residents of that section were unable to sleep. Early this morning such a complaint was received at the police station with the result Sergt. Ellis and P.C. Evans investigated and found the engine of a Kingsway Transport Company truck had been left running and making undue disturbance. It was disclosed the driver, Ross Grippen of Prescott, was enjoying a cup of coffee in a nearby cafe. The police warned Grippen and all other drivers regarding violations of the anti-noise by-law in the city. Grippen showed indifference, police later reported, with the result a traffic charge was preferred against him today. The matter will be heard in city police court Friday.

John Spencer Dies After Period of Failing Health

John Spencer, well known and prominent business man of this city, residence, 146 George Street, died in the General Hospital at Kingston early this morning. His death occurred suddenly; he was, however, in failing health for some time. A few weeks ago he returned home from Miami, Florida, where he spent several of the winter months.

The late John Spencer, who was in his 70th year, was born at Port Rowan, Ontario, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Spencer. E. and W. Hastings Returning Officers Are Appointed Returning officers for the ridings of both Hastings East and Hastings West have been appointed with enumerators for the two ridings already having been sworn in to act during the provincial election schedule for June 4th.

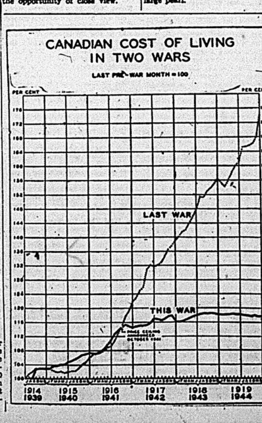
Returning officer for Hastings West is Thomas W. Solmes of Stirling while Mr. Sam Donnan of Moira has been named as returning officer for Hastings East.



Previously Mr. Malcom Burgess was reported in the Ontario Intelligencer as deputy returning officer for the federal riding of Hastings South. This was an error as Mr. Burgess actually is returning officer.

Four Giant Searchlights To be Shown in Action

Four giant searchlights with a combined power of 800 million candles will cone the skies over Belleville on Wednesday evening in an attempt to present to local residents an idea of the action which takes place when an air raid alarm sounds over a city in an active war zone.

The demonstration will be staged by No. 2 unit of the R.C.M.E. in the interests of the Eighth Victory Loan, and will take place approximately at eight-thirty.

With an effective range of eight miles the four giant searchlights will be placed at one quarter mile intervals about the city while one will be spotted directly in the downtown district, thus giving residents the opportunity of close view.

Ex-Mayor Bone To Be Candidate For Nomination

Long interested in politics and with his own particular views on many contentious questions having received wide prominence, Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone of this city will be a candidate for nomination at Stirling on Wednesday to carry the Progressive Conservative banner in the forthcoming provincial election, it has been announced.

President of the Ontario Property Owners' Association, Mr. Bone is vitally interested in the welfare of the property owner. He was Conservative candidate for the Northumberland riding in the last provincial election.

Foreign Ministers Unable to Solve Polish Question

Washington, April 24 — (AP) — Big Four foreign ministers flew west to the United Nations conference today. Three carried to San Francisco with them the delicate Polish issue they were unable to solve after two nights and a day of consultation here.

The talks among Foreign Secretary Eden, State Secretary Stettinius and Foreign Commissar Molotov were broadened last night to include Foreign Minister T. V. Soong.

These four, representing the sponsoring powers of the World Security Conference, discussed "arrangements" for that meeting after the White House formally announced the delay in the Polish talks.

That announcement, noting that President Truman twice had conferred with Mr. Molotov, said that in view of the limited time before tomorrow's conference opening — set for 4:30 p.m. P.D.T. (7:30 p.m. E.D.T.)—"and in order to permit Mr. Molotov to consult with his government . . . the discussions in regard to the Polish situation will be continued by the three foreign secretaries at San Francisco."

Approval by Chiefs Needed

Seemingly the issue — over Polish representation at the United Nations meeting — had reached the point where approval by the Chiefs of State was needed, at least Mr. Stalin's approval.

Russia has demanded that the Soviet-sponsored Polish provisional government at Warsaw be represented at San Francisco. Britain and the United States are insisting that regime be revamped to include other Polish elements as agreed to at Yalta.

Deepest secrecy cloaked all the pre-conference talks here.

The last session broke up at 11:30 last night, 2 1/2 hours after it began. Mr. Soong was present after about the first 45 minutes.

Hurried to Airport

The Chinese minister, Mr. Stettinius and their respective parties hurried to the airport for separate midnight departures. Mr. Molotov took off at 2:26 a.m. E.D.T. Mr. Eden said he planned to leave early in the day.

Mr. Stettinius, last out, said conference arrangements had been discussed.

In this category could be embraced Russian demands for three votes in the Assembly of the projected peace-keeping agency to be chartered at San Francisco. It also could include the question of mandates or trusteeships for former Axis territories and the smaller powers' requests for a larger voice than was blueprinted for them in the organization's affairs.

SCENTED PEARL

Prospects Bright For Big Volume Of Tourist Trade

If other tourist centres of the province can be judged a criterion, Hastings County is in for a banner year in that respect.

According to Mr. J. O. Herity, Chamber of Commerce manager, a number of outside points have notified him that reservations in their sections have been booked solid for the months of July and August.

In the meantime requests for locations of holiday spots in this area are coming in to the Chamber of Commerce offices at a fairly consistent rate, one that is far ahead of that of former years.

Advertising of the county and city's vacation spots sponsored by the joint committees of the City Council and County Council will start in the near future.

Tourist resort owners and others with summer accommodation are readying their premises for what is generally believed to be the largest influx of Canadian holiday-makers in a number of years.

HEPBURN PLEDGES

"We believe that Liberalism is the only path by which this better way of life can be achieved. Neither Toryism, backtracking toward the 1930s, nor C.C.F. Socialism, eager to plunge into the unknown, can attain the goal."

The manifesto guaranteed wages "in keeping with decent living," "decent standards" for white collar and unorganized workers, enactment of a modern labor code ensuring the worker full rights of free association and collective bargaining, establishment of a full-time labor relations board, one of whose representatives would be a woman and a "thorough" reorganization of the labor department.

Revised Upwards

The workmen's compensation rate would be revised upward, the manifesto said, and hours of work in industry and commerce would be shortened. A Liberal government would insist upon vacations with pay and pay for statutory holidays. Old age pension payments would be increased and the age requirement lowered to 65 for men and 60 for women.

Of agriculture, Mr. Hepburn said farmers would be helped to organise into commodity groups — beef, cream, hogs, poultry, fruit, vegetables and tobacco. Research would be conducted into new industrial uses for farm products; strong support for floor prices would be given; basic drugs for common livestock ailments would be supplied at low cost; and livestock breeding would be assisted.

Soil Conservation.

Funds would be maintained for two-year agricultural education courses at Kemptville, Monteith and Ridgetown. A new soil conservation department would be introduced at Ontario Agricultural College in Guelph, where facilities for prevention and control of livestock diseases and study of chemical agriculture and farm economics would be extended.

"We condemn the Drew government for stopping bonuses on cheese, hogs, wool, sugar, beets, etc., by closing Parliament contrary to their agreement . . ." said the manifesto. "We shall reinstate and make these bonuses retroactive when elected to office."

Aid would be extended to young farmers, milk testing methods improved and low cost fertilizer supplied. The Assessment Act would be amended to provide for a maximum 50-per cent reduction in general property taxation in the case of ex-service men and women taking land under the Veterans' Land Act.

Help Pay Snow Removal.

The manifesto added a Liberal government would pay an increased portion of snowclearing costs on county and township roads; assist in establishment of supervised vacation camps; provide teen-aged recreation centres; supply sports and recreation equipment to rural schools; assume up to 90 per cent of school rates now paid by municipalities and school boards; raise salaries and superannuation payments of school teachers; extend the scholarship system; and provide increased dental and public health nursing facilities in schools.

Revise Duties Act.

The Succession Duties Act would be reviewed for possible amendments necessary "to relieve or remove existing injustices," said the manifesto. Air traffic would be assisted by construction of landing strips near highways and a "vigorous" forest and mines development undertaken in Northern Ontario. The highways system would be greatly expanded and an "active" advertising campaign started in the United States to attract visitors to the province.

New industries in smaller communities would be encouraged and a "definite" reduction in Hydro rates to smaller municipalities was pledged.

Pyle Laid to Rest On Island With Military Honors

Ie Island, April 24 —(AP)— Machine guns beat a sharp tattoo and mortars barked at the front only a short distance ahead last Friday as little Ernie Pyle, the Doughboy's reporter, was laid to rest with military honors.

Battle-grimed American soldiers stood at attention as services were said for the columnist who was struck down by Japanese machinegun fire Wednesday.

Attending the funeral on this small island near Okinawa were Maj.-Gen. Andrew D. Bruce, Seventy-Seventh Division commander, Lieut.-Col. Joseph B. Coolidge of Helena, Ark., who was with Pyle when he was killed.

When the service was concluded General Bruce drove off in his jeep to a command post, and Yank infantrymen slogged on up to the front.

Service was conducted in the Seventy-Seventh Division Cemetery by Chaplain N. B. Saucier, former pastor of Coffeyville, Miss., church.

White Cross Painted on Casket.

Solemn GI's holding pistols at the ready and retaining their helmets on order of General Bruce, who feared possible sniper fire, heard Chaplain Saucier recite the funeral prayer.

The surroundings seemed fitting for Ernie, who had seen action on so many battlefronts. Even the funeral party, on the way to the cemetery, had to duck mortar shell.

Pyle's remains are in a wooden casket hand-made by Cpl. Landon Seidler of Richmond, Va. Seidler also fashioned a wooden plaque to be placed at the spot where the columnist was killed. It reads: "At this spot the Seventy-Seventh Infantry Division lost a buddy—Ernie Pyle—18 April, 1945."

A white cross was painted on the casket, and near it rested a floral piece made of local greenery and a sheaf of grain which was fashioned by Sgt. Irvin Steifel of Camden, N.J. One of Ernie's dogtags was nailed to the top end of the casket.

The Chaplain spoke simply of the cheer the little reporter had given those at home, and that "we pray God will bless him doubly—our comrade, Ernie Pyle."

It seemed that Ernie was staying as close in death as he did in life to America's Doughboy, for the small wooden casket was lowered into a row containing fourteen other graves.

Honor Medal Proposed in Senate.

Washington —(AP)— Posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor to Ernie Pyle was proposed in a resolution introduced in the Senate today by Senator Raymond E. Willis, Republican of Indiana.

The Senator said Pyle was "as much a part of America as Mark Twain, or the corner drugstore, or the church in every town."

Senators Homer E. Capehart, Republican, of Indiana, and Carl E. Hatch and Dennis Chavez, Democrats, of New Mexico, joined Mr. Willis in sponsoring the resolution.

The widow of the Hoosier-born columnist lives in Albuquerque.

IN MEMORIAM

WILSON — In loving memory of my dear mother, Christina (Galy) Wilson, who passed away April 24, 1895, in her 38th. year; my brother, Edgar (Ted) Wilson, December 15, 1915, and a loving father, Askin (Ack) Wilson, who passed away suddenly April 7, 1930.

Beautiful memories of loved ones so dear
I cherish with love sincere.
Days that come with sad regret
Are ones that I will never forget.
I miss their love, their cheery ways,
With them I spent many happy days.
As long as I live I will cherish their names,
In memory I see them living yet,
For I loved them too dearly to ever forget.
It is sad but true, I often wonder why,
That the best are always the first to die.
To the world they were just one,
To me they were all the world.
—Lovingly remembered by Grace.

BOVAY — In memory of my dear husband, John A. Bovay, who passed away three years ago today.

A page in the book of memory
Is gently turned today,
I have lost my soul's companion,
A life linked with my own
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
No pen can write, no tongue can tell,
Our sad and bitter loss,
But God alone has helped so well
To bear our heavy cross.
—Sadly missed by his Wife, sons Howard and Evan, and daughter Ada.

Canadians of 1st Corps Fought War in Italy in Spectacular Days Before Being Moved

In Italian War From Start and Many Regiments, Especially Hasty Foes, Won Battle Honors

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Canadians of the 1st Corps who now are on the Western Front fought the war in Italy in spectacular days and later, in comparative obscurity because the war spurned bigger triumphs elsewhere.

Their transfer, begun in February but only disclosed Monday, brought to Gen. H. D. G. Crerar's 1st Canadian Army Command the 1st Infantry Division, the 5th Armored Division and the 1st Armored Brigade and raised his total Canadian strength to five divisions and two armored brigades, together after nearly two years separation from the final days of the war in Europe.

The Canadians were in the Italian war from the start. The 1st Division, by battle, was in the spearhead that July 10th, 1943, when Sicily was invaded and Allied armies returned to Europe three years after the fall of France. Twenty months later they were 30 miles south of Venice after the endless, bloody advance northward through that bony peninsula.

Their reunion with the 2nd Corps was an avowed ambition of Gen. McNaughton. Command has succeeded Col. J. L. Ralston as Defence Minister last November, but it was ever more the ambition of the men themselves, who had become almost resigned to finishing the war amid the mountains and farmlands of Italy. Their orders to move came in the midst of a long static period along the Sereio river. They were shipped to Marseilles, France, and transported overland from there.

Always Remember Rome.

The Canadians will always remember Rome as the turning point in the import of the Italian war. Glittering buoyant, it fell June 5, 1944. The Western Front, great and greedy, opened June 6. In those two days the Italian front slumped from the headlines to the lowly reaches and a theatre that had once rated tops became a front that fought its way primarily to keep German divisions from bolstering the eastern or western fronts. But the success of its role could be measured in the fact that for months the Germans kept 26 divisions facing the 8th and 5th armies in Italy.

Chuckling who read of their men in Italy in the pages of history will know of their courage in grim hardship, will know the historic moment that saw a Canadian division go into action to stay for the first time in the Second Great War; that thousands of Canadians had fought for months—and the 1st Division and 1st Armored Brigade for nearly a year—before the 1st Canadian Army went into action in France; that their men fought in some of the great victories of the war.

NAZI GIVEN 7 YEARS

Former assistant chief of Hitler Youth Movement in Cologne, Joseph Dingler is seen as he was sentenced to seven years in prison. He was also assessed various fines by an Allied military lovernment tribunal for destroying the files of the Hitler Jugend and giving false information regarding existence of those files. He will spend his time in a former Gestapo jail.

chino, Ortona, Pontecorvo, Trasimeno and Rimini, woven into a military pattern with blunt Germanic names like those of the Gustav, Hitler and Gothic lines, will live forever in the Canadian story.

From the 1st Division, the Canadian strength swelled into the 1st Corps—comprising the 1st Infantry and 5th Armored divisions and, at the beginning, the 1st Armored Brigade—in late 1943 and, at that level, their numbers were once announced as being around 80,000. They fought as part of the British 8th Army with the exception of the roughly seven months the armored brigade spent with the 5th Army as part of the 13th British Corps.

Six Segments.

In perspective, their role falls in six segments covering 20 months of the years 1943, 1944 and 1945. Briefly, these were:

(1) The 36-day conquest of Sicily, result of the then greatest amphibious assault in history 39 days after the fall of North Africa and itself the blow that collapsed Italy. One of five divisions fighting in the 8th Army, the 1st division landed on Pachino beach July 10.

They crushed the Germans' Mount Etna line after driving north through heat and dust under 40-year-old Maj.-Gen. Chy Granville Simonds and earned from Gen. (Now Field Marshal) Montgomery the appraisal of "veteran troops of the 8th army." In the last stages of their fight they, with the 78th British division, executed in front of vital Adrano a manoeuvre that was a model for tacticians to study.

Canadian casualties numbered 2,397, of whom 476 were killed and 147 missing.

(2) The landing of the 1st division at Reggio in the toe of Italy the night of Sept. 3 was to be without to Campobasso which, turned into a rest centre, became "Canada Town" in mid-November.

Pressing up the spine of Calabria to relieve pressure on the impsilled 5th army beachhead at Salerno, the Canadians met north of Potenza, covering 400 miles in two weeks over mountain-and-road roads. They cleared Potenza, advancing to the great airbase of Foggia—its airfields were one of the chief objectives of the whole Italian campaign—fought fiercely around Molfa, then through the Apennine passes to the Sangro. From there they crossed the Sifreno river in their heaviest fighting.

Major-Gen. Vyvyan Evelegh, then Brig. Chris Vokes became divisional commander.

(3) Switched from the central mountain sector to the Adriatic coast, the 1st division on Dec. 6 began its fight for the Moro river line. Its battalion of the 90th light division out of the line, tackled the Allis 1st parachute division through into the bastion of Ortona and Orsogna, followed by street fighting drove the parastroopers north. There was the Canadians' first major triumph of World War II.

Heavy Casualties

From Sept. 3—Jan. 8 casualties totalled 5,664, of whom 1,310 were killed and 146 missing. In November the 5th Division and other troops arrived and the 1st Corps, under Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, was formed. It moved into the static Adriatic line as a corps in late January and spent the winter there.

(4) The May-June battles of 1944 that shattered Cassino and won Rome. Switched again to the central sector, the Canadians sent their 1st armored Brigade into the bloody battle of the Gustav Line, their 1st Division into the breakthrough of the Hitler Line, their 5th Division into the Liri valley. Rome and other troops arrived and the 1st Corps, under Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, was formed. It moved into the static Adriatic line as a corps in late January and spent the winter there.

(4) The May-June battles of 1944 that shattered Cassino and won Rome. Switched again to the central sector, the Canadians sent their 1st armored Brigade into the bloody battle of the Gustav Line, their 1st Division into the breakthrough of the Hitler Line, their 5th Division into the Liri valley. Rome and other troops arrived and the 1st Corps, under Lt.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, was formed.

The only Canadians in on the no-holds-barred fighting were those in the joint Canadian-American special service force, which had been fighting with the 5th Army in the Anzio beachhead.

Through the summer the armored brigade fought north to Florence with the 13th Corps. The 1st Corps spent the summer in a rest area, Montepulciano to Siena.

(5) Back on the Adriatic coast, the 1st Corps cracked the Gothic Line (Upper Sept. 1 along the slopes rising from the Foglia River inland from Pesaro, put grim, bitter fighting was necessary before Rimini was entered Sept. 21 and the Rimini-Bologna highway and the Lombardy Plain were reached simultaneously.

Weeks of disappointment—a swift drive to the Po River had been anticipated — static warfare in muddied flatlands and harsh actions along the Rimini-Bologna railway ensued in October and November. Lt.-Gen. Burns was replaced by Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes; Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, colorful and aggressive, turned over command of the 1st Division to Maj.-Gen. H. W. Foster; Maj.-Gen. B. M. Hoffmeister continued to command the 5th Division.

Capture Ravenna in December

(6) Starting with the capture of Ravenna Dec. 4, the corps reached Lake Commachio — 180 miles north of Ortona and 50 miles south of Venice — after more than a month of fighting marked by a bitter struggle for the Naviglio Canal.

The 5th Division spectacularly threw the enemy from the area between the Ravenna-Ferrara highway and the lake. In these December actions, the corps knocked out at least 4,000 troops from the Monterone River to the Senio River; Weeks of static warfare along the Senio followed.

The 1st Armored Brigade—veterans now of the Tradimeno and Arsenio lines, and first tanks to cross the Arno River into northern Florence — struck into the mountains between Florence and Bologna and stayed there for months in grim winter fighting that was largely an infantry affair. They were with the 13th Corps.

It was from the Adriatic flatlands and the central mountains that the Canadians were called back for the end of their campaign in Italy.

'Frisco May Be Birthplace of New World Order

By C. E. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

San Francisco, April 24 —(CP)— San Francisco, where 169 years ago the Spanish built a mission to honor the meek St. Francis de Assisi, hopes to be the birthplace of a new world order founded on the brotherhood of man and free from war.

There now are upwards of 1,350,000 permanent residents in San Francisco and the conference will add an additional 3,000. The city has sprawled out along the waterfront from the Presidio where Father Junipero Serra established his mission in 1776.

It has climbed the steep sides of the seven hills which now are crowned by luxury hotels where the conference delegates will live and work.

The city is built on the lands shore or a lofty peninsula which reaches a protecting arm northward about the outlet of the Sacramento river to form San Francisco Bay.

War shipping fills the bay, ships of all kinds peaceful and warlike. Just now, however, a 26-tonner stands out among them. A freighter, it has huge red-edged letters "U.S.S.R." painted on her sides to show that she is neutral in the Pacific war.

At first it was rumored the ship was dispatched from Russia with ample supplies of vodka and caviar and other delicacies for the Soviet delegation. But it has a more important mission. It is fitted to send and receive from Moscow fast communications. Probably it has some vodka and caviar aboard, too, because there will be close to 100 in the Soviet delegation.

U.S. Industialists Showing Marked Interest in Canada

Ottawa, April 24 —(CP)— A marked revival of interest in Canada on the part of United States industrialists has been noted in recent months, government sources said here Monday.

These sources, said that American businessmen are interested in the possibilities of establishing branch factories and otherwise expanding north of the border and inquiries have been made in increasing numbers to Canadian governmental and other sources of information.

Interest in Canada as a location for new manufacturing establishments is being shown particularly by manufacturers of heavy machinery such as that used in mining and lumbering operations and in certain factories.

This interest is said to spring in part from the increased industrialization in Canada during the war. The Canadian market for such products is believed to have grown and some farsighted businessmen are said to be gained in producing close to the market.

Surplus Funds Available.

Other factors in the situation are said to be the fact many firms, due to wartime prosperity, now have surplus funds available for expansion and are able to consider Canadian locations which were out of the question for them before the war.

The prevailing exchange position also is understood to be a factor. An investment of 90 cents in United States funds in Canada means 1 in Canadian funds, and, because of the difference in price levels, a Canadian dollar actually buys more than 90 cents in the United States.

The close integration of the industries of Canada and the United States with Canadian manufacturers producing components for United States products, and vice versa, is also believed to have made many American industrialists aware of Canada for the first time.

Added to this, the high level of Canadian war production both in quantity and quality has brought about a change in the generally accepted United States appraisal of Canada's industrial possibilities.

The Spirit of England

St. George's Day, April 23rd, the sixth anniversary of the day of England's Patron Saint to pass under the reign of war in Europe with an inhuman adversary backed up by the German nation, was undoubtedly the last to be marked by the struggle with Germany. It would have seemed very apt had Berlin fallen on this day or the declaration come from the Allied Governments of the war with Germany was officially at an end. But Mr. Churchill the other day in the finest words, so indicative of the British spirit of thoroughness, declared that we have no intention of encouraging any festivities until we are assured from our military commanders that the task is so far complete that everyone may join in.

The spirit of England's Patron Saint is the spirit of England and the British Isles. Like St. George, England through her long and honored history of progress toward democracy so that she has become a light to the world of free nations and an acknowledged leader, has often had to fight and defend her right and today she stands high and exalted in the world of those who honor freedom above all. St. George according to the legend, fought the dragon and triumphed. England in this struggle, has fought the worst dragon that ever faced the world, namely the monster Germany, that almost herself to link with evil and crime so that her name for ignomy, callousness and atrocity will long cause a shudder to pass over the world as we think of the terrible period her war government did to poor suffering humanity. England has given of her best and was ready to give all for the sake of her honored traditions and of the world itself rather than fall to the diabolical Nazism and militarism of Germany. The world is free and being freed largely because of what Englishmen, Scotsmen and Irishmen and their colonies and cousins across the world have been—stout of heart and brave unto death.

England had sons to fight for the right and never shall the glory fade for she held the world against the darkness of the pit which was the Nazi evil. The great British Prime Minister, representing England of her best, both of the past and present and the future while at the same time through his mother inheriting the sense of freedom of American democracy, has been a virtual St. George as champion of men and women everywhere who love and live for freedom. Wherever we look at England, in whatever stage of her history and in whatever part of her rich life there is the moral outlook. Her people have been heroes for principle, many gave their lives as sacrificial acts as civilians that freedom might survive the dark night of Nazi depravity.

Britain suffered from the blitzkrieg, many of her cathedrals were destroyed or damaged in Hitler's effort at a reign of terror. But the spirit of England, like that of St. George, rose to meet the crisis and has now come out conquerer and victor while the ruin of Nation and Europe by militarism is being completed. The spirit of the English survived the wreckage of homes, churches and institutions of historic significance in the growth of Christendom that are rooted in the hearts of men, women and children. Britons have that characteristic and it can defy the tempest and hurricane and not be shaken. England honors the shrines and institutions of the past as stepping stones to her present development.

In 1940 and afterwards when Britain received the moral support of almost all the free world and material aid, that was the world's tribute to the nation whose part in history has been to contribute so much to humanity. To most races she is the mother of freedom and of free institutions.

The "New Leap Forward"

A "new leap forward—a new lifting of the body and soul—" is called for by Prime Minister Churchill to defeat Japan and end the Pacific war to a conclusion altogether free from any doubt.

Mr. Churchill can be depended upon to give the striking phrase to represent an important fact. The world has carried on the struggle against the two military powers for a long period. It has been a great strain but it is bringing victory now on the fields and in the cities of Germany. The Allies are sending victory on Germany soil and are forever killing that German lie that Germany was not defeated in the last war. In this war Germany has been defeated in good measure and only Nazi madness has prolonged the struggle and made more complete the destruction of Germany.

With one war about to end, Britain and the United States will turn to the knockout of Japan no matter how long that will last. It means a new lifting of the body and soul with their full measure of power to strike at the crafty militarists of Nippon who struck when they thought that the Allies were in difficulty with Germany.

In the same speech at Bristol, Mr. Churchill showed the way to a world organization "which we must build and shall build" that will be "free and open to all the nations of the earth." With the thought of the San Francisco conference in mind, the British leader pointed out that nations must live in peace and justice with one another and "there must be always always the necessary force to restrain aggression."

Bad Luck for Hun Generals

German generals have not much luck when they come up against Field Marshal Montgomery's men. Their luck has been bad Montgomery's men. Their luck has been bad indeed in a sort of legend. And so now he is wanting a photograph of Von Kesselring whom Hitler took from Italy to stem the Allied advance on the west front. Rommel and Rundstedt have passed out of circulation, the former dead and the latter is reported in high disfavor with a much discredited man named Hitler, who it is stated, tore Rundstedt's insignia off and degraded him some time ago to the rank of a private soldier.

Now a framed portrait of Kesselring is on the way to Montgomery from the Daily Express, for whom the British Field Marshal had written,

"My opponents whose pictures are in my caravan have all departed, i.e. Rommel and Sunstedt. The surest way to dispose of them seems to be to hang their portrait in my caravan. Could you by any chance send me a framed photograph of Kesselring? Obviously he must go the same way!

—Yours sincerely—B. L. Montgomery, Field Marshal."

So the picture is being sent. It is noted that Montgomery did not seem to worry much when he left Rundstedt's name wrongly spelled in his letter.

"I'm No Invalid"

(Overseas Daily Mail)

Officials at a recent Investiture in Buckingham Palace suggested that one badly wounded soldier should use a wheel-chair. "No thanks," he replied. "Are you trying to make a — invalid out of me!"

Yet Lance-Corporal Frank Greatrex, of Birmingham, the man who "refused to be invalided," is totally blind.

And he has lost his left leg, his right leg is shattered, and a shoulder and hand are deformed.

He received these wounds in the gallant action that won for him the Military Medal he went to the palace to receive.

Now this great-hearted young man described as the cheeriest patient St. Dunstan's Hospital has ever had, is talking hopefully of swimming again.

What Hitler Could Will

(Detroit Free Press)

Berlin reports said recently the Nazi leaders were in possession of Hitler's will. It might well read:

"I bequeath to you, my fellow conspirators, the punishment of the damned.

"I leave to the human race more agony of soul, misery of mind and torture of body than any other man that ever lived.

"But out of the horror that my existence on earth has made possible I leave to mankind the lesson that must be learned before there will be peace on earth."

PREPARATION

Could things be different? None can say.
What is, is all we know.
Closed is the book of yesterday.
Unguessed to what we go.

To men is neither clear,
Nor can we tell beyond today
What change is drawing near.

Nor time, nor pain, nor stinging grief
Play favorites with men.
Life may be long, but days are brief,
Tears follow smiles again.

How face this ebb and flow of care
Save this: always a plan
For disappointment and prepare
With faith in God and man.

Marines on the March Ease Monotony With Impromptu Music, Wisecracks

This article by Ernie Pyle was written just a few days before he was killed by a sniper. The correspondent was killed in action on le Shima Wednesday.

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa — (by Navy radio) — My company of Marines started moving just after dawn. We moved about a mile and a half, then dig in and stay in one place for several days. Then we move on, digging out the few hidden Japs in that area.

We were in no danger on the march, and so most of the Marines weren't so lost all the helmets. Some wore green, twill caps, some baseball caps, some even wore civilian felt hats they had found in Japanese homes.

For some reason soldiers the world over, from top to end, hoard headgear. I've seen soldiers in Italy wearing black silk opera hats. And over here I've seen Marines in combat uniform wearing Panama hats.

I've always belonged going along with an infantry company on the move, even some of the horrible moves such as we had in Normandy and France. But the move we made that morning here on Okinawa was really a honey.

It was early morning and the air was good. The temperature was perfect. The country was pretty. We all felt fine and confident that at least nothing very bad is ahead of you. There is no weight on your spirit. Some of the boys were even smoking cigars.

* * *

There are always funny sights in a column of soldiers moving along. Our Marine platoon had commandeered a dozen local horses to carry heavy things. Each of the platoons had tied the pack onto his horse with a different sort of rope. Some brightly colored yards of cash Japanese women bear on their backs.

And here came this soldier, tall and unshaven, leading a sorrel horse with a big bonnet of black silk, three feet wide, tied across its chest and another similar bonnet on its head. It was a funny standing out on both sides.

The troops carry the oddest things when they move. One Marine had a Jap photo album in his hand. Another had a wicker basket. Another had a lacquered serving tray. They all pick up Okinawa phonograph records, strapped onto a horse.

Lots of them wore Japanese insignia or pieces of uniform. Later air-raids came out that any Marine caught wearing Jap clothing would be put on trial before a court. And that was to keep Marines from shooting each other by mistake.

* * *

There were frequent holdups ahead of us and we would stop and sit down every hundred yards or so, the column commenting on the slow progress said:

"Somebody must take off like a ruptured duck, and other times we just creep along."

The word was passed down the line, "Keep your eyes open for snipers, keep your eyes open for planes keep your eyes open for Celeste Holm."

We were walking almost on each other's heels, a solid double line of Marines. My friend, Bird Dog Clayton, was behind me. He and I, the column like this would be a Jap pilot's delight.

Another said, "If a Jap pilot came over the hill, we'd all go down like bowling pins." But no Japs came.

* * *

At one of our halts the word passed back that we could sit down, but not to take off our packs. From down the line came music, a French harp and ukulele, playing "Deep in the Heart of Texas." When it was finished the Marines in front of the musicians applauded, and our little concert went on for five or ten minutes out there in the Okinawa countryside.

The harmonicist was Pfc. William Hall, a professional musician from Los Round Route 15, about 15 miles south of Houston, Tex. He is only 18, but a veteran with one wound.

Hall is a reservist and has played music all over the world. He is so beautiful he can hardly talk. But he can play a harmonica.

Playing with him was an officer—Capt. Jack Shapiro (Lieut. Comdr. Mirimar Blvd.) Los Angeles. Rosa, Calif. Shapiro is a composer. His published credit on a sort of ukelele common to Okinawa. It has three strings and the head is always made of tightly stretched snakeskin. He gave you the willies just to look at one.

Hall and he started on again the way ahead was clear and we went through the valley. Then the road turned dust and after about a mile we were there, all passing.

Von Rundstedt Reduced to Private Soldier

Stockholm, April 24 — (AP) — The German radio broadcast a report Monday from a "special source in Berlin" that Hitler has demoted Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, threw them in his face and reduced him to the rank of a private soldier in a rage at the American capture of the Remagen bridge intact.

The Swedish newspaper said panic existed in Germany because of both the catastrophic war situation and the "nervous breakdown" of the story said the Fuehrer's condition was many high generals present officials in Berlin who had been ordered to report to the nearest redoubts area in the south to change their minds and disappear in a northeastern direction.

According to this report, the seat of the German High Command has been moved to Salzburg. Among persons who reportedly have arrived have recently left Berlin for Salzburg are Foreign Minister Ribbentrop and Dr. Hans Lammers, chief Free Chief.

Travellers arriving at the port of Malmo declared that S.S. troops of machine-guns and tanks were concentrated in Hamburg two days ago, killing 30 and wounding many others. Many of the most insistent German port had been without gas for a week. Coffee, tea and tobacco, and the inhabitants had to obtain water from bomb craters.

British Advancing Ten Miles a Day In Central Burma

Calcutta, April 24 — (CP)—British and Indian infantry and armoured units — thrusting southward through central Burma at an average of 10 miles a day, have captured the city of Pyinmana, on the Rangoon-Mandalay railway, 150 miles from Rangoon, Allied headquarters announced today.

ACUTE INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM

It is still necessary to stipulate that the name rheumatism applies to an ailment had no specific meaning. Our younger physicians frown when if you like, until you or the doctor can find out the cause of the disease. It is exactly if not quite as stupid and misleading as the old "cold" explanation. Like the history infection, allergic manifestations or inadequate diet, rheumatic stenosis, vitamin bronchitis etc. when you find the cause, you usually Practically anxious parents ask for advice about a child's rheumatic fever. Now, rheumatic fever is an inflammatory rheumatism and acute infectious arthritis. Not because of any restraint imposed by medical ethics but simply because I dare not encourage and cannot condone neglect of a child or youth with such a serious illness. I cannot give such advice. It there is complication of illness that demands and should have the constant care of the physician. It is this point inflammation. Upon the medical management of the patient with the disease of the tissues will the fire has surely gone out and the patient has been saved. Neglect of the heart, depends perhaps the life of the child or young adult or the young patient.

As I have acknowledged in previous talks, in most instances is infection with any of the various forms of streptococcus and the infection is usually in the respiratory tract. Inadequately treated rheumatic fever and its grave complications is responsible for most damage to heart lining, valvular leakage) must be reckoned among the possible causes of heart pain for the ignorance and untouchable attitude of many people, health authorities and the majority of private physicians in the battle to control the spread of respiratory infection every time they assume or are given responsibility. Now it seems is "just a cold."

Tonsilitis has occurred so frequently before the development of rheumatic fever (acute inflammation of one and then another joint) that some good physicians have regarded it as the chaus of rheumatic fever. This observation probably accounts for the guidance, lately ascribed, for the atrocious tonsilectomy craze that has been perpetrated on so many children by doctors of recognized standing.

Rheumatic fever, acute infections (that is, of bacterial causation) arthritis, inflammatory rheumatism is painful while the joint or joints are affected and short-lived, but what makes it so serious an illness is the present danger of chaus that some of the bacteria (Streptococci) may lodge upon the lining of the heart and cause an infection there (endocarditis), and if the endocarditis happens to involve the heart lining that composes part of a heart valve it is not unlikely to damage the valve, repair of it does not, so that the valve no longer closes completely, and that permits some backflow of blood through the valve at each heart beat—valvular leakage.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Beef Tea

Have reared both of my children on beef tea. Always had great faith in it. But my friend tells me it has little value. Please settle this dispute for us.

Answer—Your friend is right. Beef tea (or, for that matter, beef soup, beef extract) has indigestible food value, acts rather as a mild stimulant, and may cause serious increasing appetite for real food.

Unpatriotic

Daughter has gotten into the habit of eating rubber. She chews it and swallows it. Please give plenty of rubber she gets hold of.

(Mrs. H. F. P.)

Answer—The peculiar craving for such things is called pica. It is a habit without significance. Let her have some plain wheat to chew every day or may easily be growing, and it is much like rubber gum. Prevent her harm from the bits of rubber the child swallows.

CONSTITUTION BETWEEN FRIENDS

Who said: "What's the Constitution between friends?"

This bit of cynical pollitics, philosophy or whatever it is, was originated with Timothy J. Campbell, a Tammany politician who represented a New York district in the 58th Federal House of Representatives during the years 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906.

There are two different stories as to what the circumstances were that provoked the celebrated query. Campbell, a Democrat, served two (1903-1905), who spent sixty years in Congress, first as a Democrat, then as a Republican, and finally as a Democrat, it was uttered about Theodore Roosevelt, Republican, called on President Cleveland and asked him to sign a bill that he had passed through Congress. The President explained that he could not do so because he felt the bill was unconstitutional. "But what's the Constitution between friends?" asked Campbell.

Charles Willis Thompson, however, said the incident occurred on the floor of the House during Cleveland's second administration, when the Democrats were split into several factions. The year was probably about 1895, according to Thompson, who remembered that the incident involved, in an unusually bitter way, the encounter of Tammany Democrats with a roar of laughter throughout the chamber restored everybody to good humor.

British and American Groups Shaken by Sight of Horrors At Buchenwald Prison Camp

London, April 26 —(CP)— Profoundly shaken by the horrors they had seen at the German slave camp of Buchenwald prison camp, 10 members of an all-party group left London yesterday to prepare a report for submission to the House of Commons behind the Iron Curtain exhibits.

Returning Sunday night from the hell-camp, they disclosed that several of them had wept and one had fainted at the scenes of brutality. One brought back for exhibition to the House a long strip of human skin bearing a tattooed prison number and which he said had been cut from the back of a living Buchenwald prisoner by his SS. killer.

Mrs. Mavis Tate, the only woman in the delegation, said: "Never have I seen so much suffering."

The delegation's report is expected to be issued Thursday, and will include testimony of atrocities at the Oranienburg (Auschwitz) Nazi prison camp in Upper Silesia.

S. S. Silverman, a member of the group, said one of Buchenwald's slaves who once had been imprisoned in Czechoslovakia said 3,500,000 persons were killed at Oswiecim between October, 1942, and January, 1945.

Silverman said he received his report from Benedict Kautsky, son of Karl Kautsky, former leader of the Austrian Socialists, and that Kautsky told him 90 per cent of the Oswiecim victims were Jews, the others Poles. Kautsky told Silverman, did Guards gassed the Jews and shot the Poles in the back.

Beyond Imagination.

Buchenwald, Germany, April 26.—(AP)— Eight United States Congressmen agreed today after inspecting the horrors of Buchenwald prison camp that the evidence of mass atrocities committed there exceed the wildest flights of imagination.

"This is the most horrible thing that I have ever seen," declared Rep. Carter Manasco (Dem., Ala.) after he and his colleagues had been shown around the camp, where emaciated bodies of the slaves' victims are still stacked in a cordwood, where men were lying on bunks like cides of beef until they died, and where bodies by the hundreds were burned in furnaces.

Barbarism at Its Worst.

"This is barbarism at its worst," said Rep. Gordon Canfield (Rep., N.J.). He declared the evidence bore out everything that had been said or written about Nazi brutality.

The congressmen, who were in Britain on various missions, were invited to come here by Gen. Eisenhower so they could see with first-hand evidence of the atrocities committed in Buchenwald.

Behind one building the congressmen saw a great heap of wasted human bodies, which the Nazis had left piled up one atop the other like so many logs. Nearby was a truck piled high with 60 more bodies, each bearing a tattooed prison number.

In the adjacent courtyard was a pile of ashes and bits of bone—remains of the dead who had been burned in the 12-furnace crematorium where blackened skulls still could be seen.

Below the furnaces the congressmen were shown a room from which the prisoners said none of their number ever had emerged alive. Along the walls were hooks like those in a butcher shop, and prisoners said human bodies—including some that still had life—were hung there until the furnaces were ready.

Monkey Radio's Words.

London, April 26—(CP)—Murder range found in Germany will help the Western Allies to understand Russia's demand for trial of Fascist war criminals, the Moscow radio, quoting the Soviet newspaper Pravda, said Monday.

"Allied troops are moving through Germany today," said the broadcast. "They are not only seeing German landscapes and clean little town houses. They also see concentration camps.

"British prom with just indignation writes on the atrocities which were committed by the Hitlerites in the concentration camp in Buchenwald. What is Buchenwald? It is Maida St. but in miniature.

"These are the same gallows, the same twisted and mutilated persons, the same furnaces in which the unhappy victims of the Fascist hangmen were burned. We have long since supposed the true faith of our enemy. Our allies had not seen what we had seen.

"Now this they too have seen, now that they share what we know, they will understand us better, will understand why we so stedfastly demand trial of the Fascist hangmen, on whose conscientious depends lions of torturing Soviet people.

If you are one of 30,000,000 people throughout the world who are of Scottish ancestry you can now get information about your forebears through the new Scots Ancestry Research Council.

The council, set up on North St. David Street, Edinburgh, will be self-sustaining, however. Five shillings and a few clues are necessary to start with for a third-or-fourth-generation shot at the dairs into the romance of his origins.

Police Blotter

Air police continue to keep strict night vigil over city streets, especially on Saturday nights, a number of young men and a woman were apprehended on charges of violations to the Liquor Control Act. The majority will face charges of illegal possession of intoxicants, after being found in possession of large items of bottles of liquor. The cases will be aired today.

Mrs. Milton Whiting, 62A Bridge St. W., complained to police that music thieves had entered her apartment in some unknown manner and stole her camera and binoculars.

Thieves removed a spotlight from a parked motor car owned by a man by the name of McCutcheon. The vehicle had been parked at the rear of a service station near the intersection of Bridge and Coleman Sts., Mr. McCutcheon complained to police.

George Gatcum, 30 St. Charles St., informed police over the week-end he had found a green-colored boat floating down the Moira River. Mr. Gatcum secured the craft and reported his findings to police.

Whether they had use for them or not doesn't exactly enter into the question, but two pair of rubber shoes were stolen from a parked motor car owned by Mr. R. Hamilton, R.R. No. 3 Trenton. The children's shoes had been purchased in the city and placed in Mr. Hamilton's car while other shopping was being completed. Sneak thieves did the rest.

Sabbath Observance Theme of Address At W.C.T.U. Meeting

The April meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Friday in the TALMA Hall, Mrs. Dennis, president, presiding. Reports were given by the secretary, Mrs. Taylor, and Miss Hayman, treasurer. Mrs. Cole gave a report of the District Convention held in Peterboro. Mrs. Hall, who was unable to be present, sent a letter of greeting from her sick-bed.

Mrs. Brunt, Power Mission; Mrs. Farnsworth, Temperance in Sunday Schools; Mrs. Hall, Evangelistic and Social Relationship; Mrs. Baker, Press; Mrs. Dennis, Literature and Day Schools. In the absence of the superintendent of Sabbath Observance, Mrs. Farnsworth gave an address on that subject. She stated that the Sabbath is the crux of civilization. Today we are in danger of losing the Sabbath, symbolized by the encroachment of entertainment. Parties in the name of patriotism, on a day when so many standards are being lowered, let us have a Christian observance of the day, Jesus said, "The Sabbath was made for man." It was instituted for moral and spiritual good. Long before the Christian era it was kept holy. The Sabbath is a necessity, as the Bible has said written its need in the nature of things. It is stated that the one employer is being engaged for the sake of his employees. The Sabbath is to us how to spends the Sabbath.

The worship service was based on the sketch, "Sabbath Observance," the hero chapter of the New Testament Records. It is a tribute to the late President Roosevelt. Bishop Renaldet Hall, Jr., is among the immortals.

"Woman too, has been among the heroes of faith, and the United States has had many of these to be blessed. The Republic had its Washington, its Lincoln and its Roosevelt, but it also has its Frances Willard. Before Jesus' resurrection came on the scene this gifted, consecrated woman was pioneering in those fields which were new for a large world. He set out to organize the Christian women of the world to a crusade for God and home and every land. She has been called "The Unrowned Queen of the World." Her nation recognized her, and made among its great ones of all time by giving her a place in the Hall of Fame in Washington for only woman so honored.

Before Miss Willard's earthly decended in February 1898 she had the joy of seeing many of her ideals in operation. Prohibition was in the past are watching to see how all is adjusting themselves to the completion of their unfinished task. It has been said "As goes women, so goes the world."

Women's Telltale Voices

Voices May be a Beautiful Speaking voice

By HELEN POLLEYN

WOMEN ARE judged by appearance that expresses taste or lack of it. Beauty need not be rich, is simple, smart and ideal; they are better dressed than men go in for silly or speedy duds, do not make up their faces, frequently make themselves comfortable.

Women are also judged by their voices that betray the sort of woman talking to a stranger over the telephone. The cancelling of an appointment, the cancelling of a bridge or a date. These betray the drawling voices belong to slow-going women, fast voices; part girls. The hesmers and hahers are the kind who never can make up their minds, or they are side-steppers.

Whining Yates.

Some of the week sisters among us have whining voices which do not command respect. One visualizes them wheedling the old man, complaining about trifles, doing the clinging vine to the limit.

A brave, courageous woman has a voice that tells she does not shout or mumble, drone or run her words together, face speaks well to the world. Friendliness is different from the chatterer who is like the babbling brook, goes on forever and never says anything worth while.

Suppose that you give a little attention to your culture; if you have time to spare, make it read more musical and attractive.

Women who have high voices high and use too much volume are comparable to the screaming parrot in St. Boyd think that every woman in the world knows what they know about. They are ill-mannered, and who don't know any better. Outspoken women do not lift their voices; they wouldn't lift their voices; they wouldn't lift their hands to smack someone. Their voices are low, full of respect themselves, and have respect for others.

If you want to test your voice say the vowels, one after the other, A, E, I, O, U, and you will have a good mark. If you mumble them, never mind, get to the foot of the charm class.

Keeping the Forehead in Form

Among the good-looks failings that come along in middle age is the corrugated forehead—horrid little ruffled tracks streaking from one temple to the other. They're especially hateful at the present time when the upswept hairdo is raging like a house afire. In other days, with other fashions, women wore bangs or pulled down their tresses to contain foreheads that did not qualify. Not now. Foreheads are naked and unashamed.

A brow as smooth as velvet is a source of considerable satisfaction. It tells a story, too. Frown lines are indefinable who are easily irritated—who pull their eyebrows together and create deep furrows. It is no comfort to be told that forehead defects are self-inflicted. But, there the victims are, looking in the mirror, wishing to themselves they had more forethought, plied the massage cream, and forced away the crease as they became deeply entrenched.

Crow lines are caused by the habit of lifting the eyebrows. There's no reason, now, that one should do it. One can surprise with words; one's remarks do not have to be illustrated with facial acrobatics.

The woman who dramatizes herself, who must give strong emphasis to everything she has to say, is likely to go in for facial gesturing which do no good to tissues that have lost tone with advancing birthdays.

Squinting, rather than the wear and tear of years, is responsible for crow's feet. Think of that when summer is really here and the sun is glaring; put on dark glasses at the beach.

Women who need glasses and won't wear them, pay the penalty. Squinting at print does not improve the lids partially close, creating a crepe-like formation at the outstanding flesh. The eyes tend to burrow in; not only the skin but also the underlying fibres are affected by these crease. You can't have them blotted out with a few treatments at the beautyterium.

Keep the forehead smooth from and forehead crumbles are on the way. If so, take Time by the cowlick and make it stand still.

After the nightly face washing, rinsing and drying, give your face of heavy massage cream. Stroke lightly into the eyes and brow, using flattened fingers and starting well below the lids; you use a rotary movement of the fingers on the cheeks, be careful not to force the flesh out of place.

Place the fingers of both hands one on each side of the forehead, in the centre of the forehead. While the fingers of one hand go up, the fingers of the other hand go down, all the same time. Work both hands from one side of the forehead to the other.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Are You Choosing a Don Juan or a "Faithful Johnny" as a Husband?

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Are all husbands unfaithful to their wives and are they disobedient? Why working in a Government department and, as a secretary in my position, so many men seem to be interested in me. I am not a flirt, but I do like to have a good time and enjoy some quite high class acquaintances at 25 a sitting.

There are certain high signs and signals that may help a girl decide which of these two types she will consider for a husband—the Don Juan or the Faithful Johnny.

The Don Juan who likes meetings gives evidence of loving home like surroundings. He likes to drive the car or having a little garden in the summer, and, in short, likes all the home angles of life. He is interested in the little children, he keeps playing on the street and will stop and romp with them. He likes kids, handling around, keeping how to walk? If he loves children that's really something to bank on.

If he has a roving eye and allegedly in love with you, his flattering and yet can never reach the limpid state of being in very privy gay he sees anywhere, in the movies or on the bus, he will not, in the instance act. It's safe to believe that that kind of a man has, at least, the makings of a Don Juan.

If he is a Don Juan, no matter how charming and intelligent he is with, not to mention the fact that he is not the type that will be forever straying after some other woman, he is not for you. Marriage, my dear, is a good deal like buying a pig in a poke.

Fashion Flashes

TERRIES A NEW LOOK to prints. The terry cloth design and an air of importance marks many print dresses. Here's a worthy handling of the beautiful designs and color combinations. Black and white printed silk crepe is used for the high-necked frock which is turned into an impressive costume by the fitted tunic coat with a flaring hem and high, puffed shoulders.

Big news for summer is the revival of the silk coat. . . Silk shear, taffeta and satin are all used for coats that are good for night as well as for day.

Cool and roomy cottons are ready for torrid town days. A charming frock is of rose, gray and white striped cotton, made with deep, rounded, collarless neckline, long set sleeves with flounced cuff, and a wide straw belt.

No need to go in for fussy hats if you don't like 'em. There are plenty of charming hats with modest crowns, fairly wide brims, beautifully trimmed with front-placed bows of plain or striped ribbon or bias fabric—hats that are nice with suit, coat or frock.

New fashions appear in color clothes, such as headed bags for like afternoon wear. A book-like number, in white with black and red, is made entirely of black bugle beads in a diamond design.

Coming back into the fashion scenes is the color-on-black print, which is more meant an improvement in the days when it was the little frock, made with short-sleeved dolman top and front-to-floor, hip-draped skirt, is of black crepe with groups of little clags in bright blue, pink and yellow.

Council Holds Lengthy Session Discussing Sewer Connections Outside City and Gas Pumps

Divisions Called on Two Questions by Members of the Council

Discussion on the several questions that were brought before the City Council at their regular session on Monday evening kept the members in session until 12.45 a.m. and produced a notice of motion from Alderman Allin "that members be allowed to speak to a question only the number of times allowed in the by-law covering the rules of council". It was first introduced as a motion but being unable to get the suspension of the rules for its introduction, the Alderman with his seconder, Ald. Woodley allowed the motion to stand as a Notice of Motion. It will not require a percentage of members to vote for the introduction but will stand as a straight motion and can be carried or rejected by a majority of the members.

Gas Pump Report.

The first discussion came on a report of the City Engineer with respect to the number of gasoline pumps in the city and the fact, that a pump was allowed to be erected at a dry beverage plant in the city without the consent of council. Chief William Lynch appeared before the council and professed, that he had not seen a copy of the by-law restricting the erection of gas pumps until the afternoon of the council meeting. He stated that he had operated under the Fire Marshal Act respecting the pumps stating, that the pump had been placed according to his inspection. Reference was made respecting certain pumps, that were not now in use and Ald. Clapp stated that the Chief should be instructed to have these tanks filled as laid out under the regulations.

Ald. Thompson—"Is the dry beverage plant pump now in?"

Chief Lynch—"Yes, according to regulations under the Oil Controller and me as deputy fire marshal."

Ald. Thompson—"If we allow this one to be used before consent of council is obtained this council is going to be confronted with many more requests".

Ald. Allin—"We should follow the by-law".

Chief Lynch—"You have a by-law prohibiting the erection of pumps without consent of council and yet the Oil Controller allows them to be erected if they measure up to regulations".

SANK YAMATO

Lieut. (J.G.) William E. Delaney of Detroit, Mich., U.S. navy carrier pilot, who bombed and sank the Jap super battleship Yamato. Delaney zoomed down and at 1,400-feet, unhurled four 500-lb. bombs which scored direct hits on the huge Jap warship. As he pulled out of his glide at 1,200-feet, the terrific blast from the Yamato set his plane afire forcing him to bail out into the water. From his raft in the water Delaney watched the futile effort of the Japs to save the 40,000-ton battleship.

Fireman Hired.

After a recommendation was read hiring a fireman for a four-month period during the summer holidays, Ald. Allin moved an amendment that the position be advertised by the Selective Service and the position given to a returned man if at all possible.

Ald. Woodley—"The man we have hired has had experience in A.R.P. work and there are four men who are at present on active service who must be placed when the war is over".

Ald. Clapp—"If we enforce this by-law some over 65 will have to be retired and this man who I hired now may get a permanent job and I am sure we have enough returned men to fill them".

Ald. Trudeau—"Our Chairman of Fire has gone carefully into this matter and brought in a recommendation and I think that we should stand behind his recommendation".

Ald. Thompson—"I am all for the returned man but we must have a man with some experience." The vote was taken and the amendment was lost by 8-7 vote and calling the Yeas and Nays the vote was recorded. Yeas: Mayor Follwell, Alds. Allin, Butler, Chamberlain, Clapp and Harvey. Nays—Aldermen Armstrong, Clarke, Follwell, Hyde, McDougall, Thompson, Trudeau, Wilbur and Woodley.

Report Received.

A report by a special committee on the extension of the sewer for residents outside the city was tabled and which read as follows—

April 19, 1945

His Worship Mayor Follwell and Members of the City Council
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen,

Re: Sewer Connection for Turner, Morris and Ashbury.

Your Special Committee beg to report that we are in favor of giving Mr. Turner sewer and water service by extending the main sewer and water main in an easterly direction on College Street from North Front Street intersection. The cost of tihs work is to be paid for by Mr. Turner.

Sewer and water service cannot be provided for Mrs. Morris (immediately north of the Turner property) until the main sewer and water main are extended northerly along the centre of the roadway from the North Front Street intersection.

We are also in favor of providing Mr. Ashbury with sewer service by extending the main sewer in an easterly direction on East College Street from the Hambly Street intersection. The cost of this work is to be paid for by Mr. Ashbury. This property is already being served with water according to information received from the Public Utilities Commission.

J. J. TRUDEAU,
C. R. CLAPP,
CHARLES A. MOTT.

Restricting By-Law.

Ald. Armstrong opened the discussion by declaring that the city had a by-law restricting the granting of any extensions of sewer and waterworks to residents outside the city, which was passed in 1942, yet permission has been granted by recommendation to three residents and the by-law has not been amended and yet the report is willing to give it to two and not to three and I don't think that is fair".

Ald. Trudeau—"I think the report is O.K. and a well conceived plan and if the one party wants water she will have to wait until the sewer is placed passed her property.

Ald. Clapp—"It takes a two-thirds vote to have a sewer laid and if the one party receives water and sewer by crossing private property, she probably will block the extension of the sewer up the road, when other residents above her want the extension".

Ald. Thompson—"I am of that opinion".

Mayor in Disagreement.

Mayor Follwell—"I don't agree with the members. If the resident on the corner is going to get water and sewer and will allow the woman to tap that main across his property I think that is all right and that if an agreement is given to bear part of the cost if the sewer is extended that agreement would be binding on any person owning that property".

Ald. Butler disagreed with that reasoning saying that the person buying her property would not be bound by an agreement made with the present owner.

Ald. Chamberlain—"If we live up to our by-law we will not extend the system for anyone outside the city".

Ald. Follwell—"The sewer has been there for thirty years and if we give an extension for one we should give it to the other. Many of the Aldermen thought that the woman should wait until the sewer is extended further up the street and come in direct on the sewer. The question went to a vote and the Yeas and Nays beingN called on the adoption of the report were recorded Yeas—Aldermen Allin, Butler, Chamberlain, Clapp, Clarke, Hyde, McDougall, Thompson, Trudeau, and Woodley; Nays—Mayor Follwell, Aldermen Armstrong, Follwell, Harvey and Wilbur.

To Welcome V.C. Winner.

If and when Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, V.C., comes to the city arrangements for his welcome and reception will be left in the hands of the Reception Committee appointed from the Council, the Service Clubs and other organizations in the city. The members felt that some recognition should be given to the recipient of the first Canadian V.C. award of the Second Great War but the council was in the dark as to when he would arrive or whether he would be in the city at all. The whole scheme was left in abeyance until it was known whether he intends coming to Belleville or not.

It was authorized to straighten the lots on Ponton Street, purchased by Messrs Irwin and Easton, so that the houses may be placed in line with the street and the city to assume the cost of straightening the cellars already dug by the parties and the remainder of Lot 11 be divided into three fifty-foot lots with frontage on Ponton Street. A request from the Public Library Board with respect to repairing the building on Pinnacle Street was read also the report of the City Engineer and which was referred to the next committee meeting.

Report Received.

April 23, 1945

Alderman J. J. Trudeau,
Chairman of Public Works,
City Council,
Belleville, Ont.
Dear Sir,—

Re: Corby Public Library.

As requested, I made an inspection of the stone work referred to in the west (front) wall of the Corby Public Library building today, in company with the Caretaker, Mr. Kent.

Approximately 40' above ground level there is a row of heavy cut stones around the building which are tied into the stone walls to give further support and strength to the stone work. These cut stones measure approximately 12" high and 42" long and they appear to be from 18" to 24" deep in the wall. They protrude about 2 1-2" out from the face of the main walls, some of them placed with the grain of the stone running vertically and others with the grain running horizontally. About 15' from the southwest corner of the building, in the front wall, the face of one of these stones has broken off, leaving the remaining part of this particular stone flush with the stone wall. Another of the stones in the front wall located about 7' south from the northwest corner has split open along the vertical grain line, leaving a crack 1 1-2" wide at the top. I would recommend this section of this particular stone be pried off with a crow-bar before it falls off, probably causing some damage.

All the remaining stones appear to be quit sound and in a reasonably good condition, considering their age.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES A. MOTT,
City Engineer.

A letter from the Parks Board requesting that nothing be done to Zwick's Island and also that the island be not disposed of, was ordered filed. Ald. Chamberlain explaining there was nothing before the Council with respect to disposing of Zwick's Island. George Deline asked for an extension of the sewer for his property on Dundas Street East, and a committee of Aldermen Trudeau, Clapp, City Engineer and O. H. Scott was appointed to investigate the request and report back to Council. An application for a sign for the West End Motors was received and referred to the City Engineer for a report. The resolution of the Retail Merchants' Association, "that parking meters be not placed in this city" was referred back to the committee of which Ald. Butler is the chairman. It will be discussed in committee at the next meeting and decision reached.

Letter Praises Council.

A letter was received from Capt. E. Knudsen respecting the condition of the harbor and what could be done to make it an attractive place for the touring yachtsmen going up and down the Bay and speaks for itself. Ald. Chamberlain stated the letter would be incorporated in a brief to be presented to the Federal government.

The letter follows:

270 Charles Street
Belleville, Ont
April 20, 1945

His Worship, the Mayor and Members of the Council,
City Hall,
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen—

I know that your council is getting all kinds of complaints and criticism in your work for our City, but I do think that there are very few who give you any credit for the work you are doing.

You are spending a lot of your own time to run our City's business, late hours at the meetings and away from home, all to the benefit of the citizens.

Now that the winter is over, and I am glad to say that you were able to cope with the snow situation most splendidly, you kept the City streets practically clear of snow, I don't think there was any street you couldn't comfortably drive through in a car or truck.

Due to my observations, I have come to the conclusion that we today have the best managed City of any time since I have come to Belleville.

Now, may I suggest that the City is open for a lot of improvement, and if these improvements are carried out with the future in view, we can eventually have a beautiful City. Improvements such as follows—

Beautifying the east side of the Moira River in conjunction with the new esplanade, such as a boardwalk along the river. All people like to walk in the evening along the waterfront.

We have a harbor that is open for great improvement. As it is now it is only a dump. During the summer yachts come up our beautiful Bay of Quinte, pass our City and go on to somewhere else, instead of stopping, as they know it is no place for yachts. There are no docks to tie up to, and no place to go for recreation at night when they go ashore.

If a proper retaining wall and dock could be built along the east side of the harbor, as well as the Victoria Park side, with Victoria Park raised above high water level so as not to be damaged by floods, the harbor cleaned and dredged out to proper depth so that yachts of eight foot draft or more could enter without damaging themselves, with proper pavilions built on the Victoria Park side, it would be something of beauty to attract tourists. After all, when the tourists arrive in, they leave a lot of money behind them when they go, and they will come again.

The Victoria Park establishment should be under proper supervision and management, (with politics left out). Just remember that we want to see the tourists coming back after they have had an enjoyable visit at Belleville.

Now, all these improvements are not based on tourists entirely. They are based also on making our young people yacht-minded, for believe me yachting is a clean sport, and gives them lots of fresh air in their lungs. Also it keeps their interest, instead of hanging around billiard parlors and street corners in their time off.

You probably have all this made up in your own committee meetings, and if your ideas are the same as mine they are all right, and I thank you for it.

Now, the commercial end of the harbor, the east side of the Government Dock. I think it is the business of the Federal government to build a proper dock and retaining walls, and also to do a lot of dredging so as to bring ships in with cargoes. This will lessen the transportation expenses on our merchandise.

I also would recommend that our Government Dock, not be used as a coal dock. It is not a pretty sight at any time with all the oil tanks as a background, added to the coal piles.

Again, I wish to thank the Mayor, and his Council for the splendid work they have done, and I wish them every success in the future.

Respectfully yours,
E. KNUDSEN.

Deputy Fire Marshal's Report.

A copy of the Deputy Fire Marshal's report to the Fire Marshal for Ontario of a meeting held with the Market and City Property Committee in Belleville respecting the site for a new fire hall was received by the Chairman of the Committee, Ald. Charles L. Hyde and handed out for publication. Although the meeting took place in February, the Council did not receive the report until April 10, the day after their last regular meeting. The report follows—

Report to the Fire Marshal on the Meeting with the Belleville Market and Property Committee, Belleville, Ontario.

1.—In accordance with instructions I attended a meeting of the Market and City Property Committee of the Belleville City Council in the Council Chambers of the Belleville City Hall at 3.30 pm., February 21, 1945, for the purpose of discussing a suitable site for a new fire station to house the Belleville Brigade.

The meeting was under the chairmanship of Mr. Charles L. Hyde and in addition to the members of the Market and City Property Committee, two members at large of the Council were present. The general requirements for fire station location were discussed at some length and then a visit was made of all available sites believed to be suitable. Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Vance was present at all discussions and also visited the suggested sites representing Fire Chief William Lynch who at the present time is confined to his home by illness.

2.—Certain considerations are involved in choosing a suitable location for a fire station. In the first instance its location should be such that the distance of travel to the various sections of the city should be in accordance with the following:

(a) not more than three-quarters of a mile to the greater portion of the mercantile and manufacturing district;

(b) not more than one and one-half miles to all closely-built residential districts of the municipality;

(c) not over three miles to any scattered residential areas.

Secondly the ground on which the fire station is located must be large enough to not only provide ample room for a station to house the existing apparatus maintained, but also to permit a moderate degree of expansion. One of the most common errors in fire station design and choice of location has been that proper consideration has not been given to future requirements of the municipality. Any extension of services rendered by the Brigade or additional apparatus to a moderate degree should not necessitate additions to a building properly designed and of ample size if these factors have been taken into consideration in the original plans. In addition there should be sufficient room on the property to have a drill yard and drill tower directly connected with the fire station. The importance of sufficient space for a drill yard and drill tower was stressed because of the very direct bearing of drill practice on the efficiency of the members of the fire brigade.

The location of the station should be such that there are clear avenues to all districts and sections of the municipality.

Another factor which is of great importance is that the fire department building should not be exposed by the proximity of any hazardous occupancies or be endangered by conflagration.

3.—After discussions as outlined above, three available locations were visited and it is pointed out that none of the available locations in down-town Belleville can be regarded as first class sites for Fire Department Headquarters.

City Hall and Market Square:

On each side of the City Hall are streets leading to Pinnacle Street from Front Street and at the rear of the City Hall Building is a market square used for market purposes. There have been two suggestions presented in the hope of utilizing the existing civic building in connection with the Fire Hall. The first of these is that the Fire Department Headquarters be located in the rear of the building, but the width of the building does not allow sufficient depth for existing apparatus to be housed within this structure.

Even if there was ample room within the structure itself, if located at this point would necessitate a turn of apparatus onto a street only forty-five feet in width with a further turn being necessary onto Front Street which is also No. 2 Highway and traffic congestion on this street of the city on market days is severe.

The second suggestion in connection with the extension of the City Hall to include the fire station is that the street north of the City Hall be blocked off with the exception of the north sidewalk and a building be erected level with the City Hall on this site. Not only is there insufficient room to erect a fire station with all necessary facilities for proper maintenance and administration but no drill yard or drill tower could be erected on this location. It was felt by some members of the Committee that the latter proposal would meet with most vigorous opposition by citizens owning property on the street which would be practically blocked off. In addition the location in the City Hall of the Fire Department could quite conceivably restrict any future expansion of city offices should such expansion be necessary.

The J. T. Warren Property, Front Street:

The amount of land available on this site is sufficient to provide for a building of proper size to house apparatus of the brigade and also to provide an adequately-sized drill yard and drill tower. There are, however, at present two stone buildings which would have to be removed as no alterations to these buildings would make them suitable as Fire Department Headquarters. As this site is almost directly opposite the old abandoned Fire Hall which was one block south of the City Hall on Front Street, fire department experience was that in responding out of the hall in this location considerable interference was encountered by heavy traffic conditions on the main street which as mentioned above is the main highway through Belleville. There is a very large section of the City of Belleville to the west of the Moira River an apparatus from a fire station on the Warren property would of necessity have to travel one block and a half of the main street before a turn could be made onto a street provided with a bridge leading to the western section of the city. Another point in connection with this location is that although at the present time the site is located near the oil storage depots and in close proximity to high value district, the future growth of the City of Belleville would be in a direction away from a station located here.

Doyle's Terrace and the Hutchison Property:

The location of this suggested site is not far from the present fire hall and there is more than ample room on this property for the erection of an adequate-sized fire station, the necessary drill yard and drill tower, etc., as well as any expansion that might be necessary in the years to come.

A check was made of the number of fire calls responded to by the Belleville Fire Department in 1944 and it was found that 42 per cent of the 307 calls or runs made by the Department were in the section of the city west of the Moira River. A hall located in this site would present no difficulty to apparatus in reaching the west section of the city by a very short turn on Front Street before reaching the Upper Bridge. This location is likewise suitable for at least 25 per cent of the total number of fires, which occur in the area which is bounded by the river and Victoria Street. For any alarm of fire occurring south of Victoria Street nd east of Pinnacle Street, Church Street is a very excellent avenue of travel to this area. With a fire station located on this property, no travel in the congested business district would be necessary other than responses to alarms of fire occurring on Front Street.

If this site is finally decided upon, it will be necessary to remove a flower bed located on Front Street so as to enable the apparatus to readily turn onto Front Street from Pinnacle Street. On this property there is also located the Old Doyle's Terrace which houses a number of families but the condition of this structure is such that its removal is recommended before a fire station would be erected on this site.

4.—After giving due consideration to all of the foregoing, I am therefore of the opinion that Doyle's Terrace and the Hutchison property is the best available location for the erection of the proposed new fire station for the Belleville Fire Brigade.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

L. C. ANDERSON
Fire Prevention Engineer.

Many Enquiries Made.

Under the head of enquiries Ald. Thompson asked if any report had been received on the snow plow equipment that had been ordered.

Ald. Trudeau—"Nothing has been purchased yet although the purchase forms are being put in shape for action".

Ald. Armstrong—"What method is being followed to welcome the returned boys home?"

Mayor Follwell—"I am not being advised when they will return and the scheme first set up is not working out satisfactorily.

Ald. Chamberlain—"How did the foundations get dug on the Easton property on Ponton Street when the Council is only ratifying the sale of the lot tonight? Ald. Hyde was censured some time ago about renting a property before the Council passed on it yet the same thing has occurred in this instance."

Mayor Follwell—"I can't explain it".

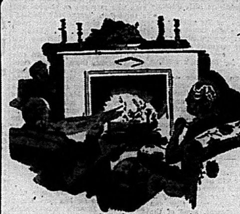
Ald. Butler—"I think an offer-to-purchase agreement should be made out by the City Solicitor with a small amount paid down and then the Council could pass on it and if accepted then the buyer could go to work."

Ald. Woodley—"Who gave authority for the full page advertisement with respect to the Eighth Victory Loan?"

Mayor Follwell—"This matter was brought to the council and approved without dissension".

Ald. Allin wanted to know when the flasher at Bleecker Avenue and Pine Streets would be in operation and Ald. Thompson stated "in the near future".

The same Alderman wanted to know what time the flashers were turned on in the downtown area and Mayor Follwell stated the matter would be taken up with the Police Commission. Ald. Allin also asked Ald. Trudeau about the Stop Sign at the corner of Great St. James Street and Church Street.



Ald. Follwell wanted to know if any action had been taken to curb speeding on the city streets and the Mayor promised action on this request.

Several by-laws were passed transferring certain properties before the Council adjourned after extending the time twice during the evening.

ROOKIE PITCHES A TWO-HITTER

(By The Canadian Press)

A right-handed rookie pitcher, Roy Coleman, took the International League spotlight last night by pitching Baltimore Orioles to a 2-0 victory over Buffalo Bisons, allowing two hits.

The rookie from Louisville, who got in one game for Baltimore late in season and lost it, struck out five and gave up many walks, besides getting a single and knocking in a run for the 1944 pennant-winners.

In the afternoon, Baltimore outslugged Syracuse 9-7. The Royals had to snapper five successive stage a ninth-inning rally to win. Five of the Royal's 21 hits were bunched with an error in the big last five-run inning.

Club Owners Ready to Name A Commissioner

BY HAROLD HARRISON

Cleveland, O., April 24 —(AP)— Owners of the Major Leagues' 16 baseball teams were to shut themselves in a hotel room today and, if reports of them have their way, they'll stay there until they select a successor to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis as high commissioner of the sport.

As the time for the meeting approaches there were almost as many persons pertinent to baseball speculating as there were magnates at the conference.

Procedure for the day's sessions was this:

A four-man committee — Don Barzog of St. Louis Browns, Alva Bradley of Cleveland Indians, Phil Wrigley of Chicago Cubs and Sam Breadon of St. Louis Cardinals— which has been considering a long list of possible choices was to meet first.

Two hours later the committee was to join the full group from the American and National Leagues and if it votes from a possible 16 can be mustered for one man, the commissioner will be chosen.

Although one of the baseball executives polled they should stay in session from time to time until they reach an agreement, some of the lobby experts considered it significant that most of the owners already have their definite reservations to leave Cleveland tonight.

Sports Roundup

BY HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, April 24 —(AP)— Baseball has its problem of what to do about returning service men, but the guys who were frozen on the farm or on war jobs and then find it possible to play part of the season are giving the club owners a real headache . . . Naturally, managers don't want to drop a fairly good player to make room for a man who has been in the army and a three-man "temporarily inactive" list doesn't give them much room for experimenting . . . There's a precedent, but how to increase the list . . . Meanwhile the three "4-A" circuits have their own rule which permits the carry eight-ex-service men who aren't counted on the player limit and remain until 16 days after they play their first game . . . The Majors don't have to worry about salary limits, of course, but also can try out eight players, but the number who succeed these men the most have to count them as soon as they go on the payroll . . . And who ever heard of a ball player who didn't want to be on the payroll?

Sharks and Shells.

The White Sox' five-game winning streak so far has fans talking about the Brown's nine-straight record at the start of last season . . . But back in 1924 the St. Louis Browns won 20 straight to start the Union Association season.

And 1902 the New York Highlanders did so well early in the season that Ernest Barnard, later American League President, called them "the fastest team ever organized." They promptly proved it by losing games so fast that by June 20 they were in last place and had a new manager.

RACING DATES SET BY ASSOC.

Greater Co-operation Between Anglers, Commercial Fishermen Urged by Minister of Department

District Anglers and Hunters Hear Interesting Address by Hon. G. H. Dunbar

Urging a fuller understanding and co-operation between sports-men, anglers and the commercial fishermen, Hon. George H. Dunbar, Minister of Game and Fisheries for the Province of Ontario, spoke to upwards of 60 members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association in a filmed address at the C.N.E. M.C.A. It was the first time that Hon. Mr. Dunbar had met the local body of anglers and hunters, since the inception of the local club some eleven years ago, President J. E. Shortt related as he introduced the speaker.

"A better understanding and fuller co-operation is desired between the anglers and commercial fishermen in order that we in Ontario may preserve the wild life of this province for its greatest influence, I refer to the tourist industry after the war," stated Hon. Mr. Dunbar as he congratulated the local club upon attaining over 500 members.

196 Clubs in Ontario.

"There are 181 anglers' clubs in Ontario while over 300,000 of our residents take a direct interest in hunting and fishing for pleasure. And that does not include 100,000 American anglers and hunters who paid licences in this province in 1944," declared the speaker.

"The wild life of this province belongs to the people of Ontario and that is why I rejected a one dollar fishing licence fee that was recently suggested at Queen's Park. If the fishers would take their fish in Ontario fishing and hunting with them there would be less talk of the delinquency problem we are confronted with. The department is not necessarily and primarily interested in the prosecutions of minor violations of the Fish and Game Acts, but we do wish to increase the game life of this province to meet the increased tourist industry, that is assured after the war," explained Mr. Dunbar.

Receipts Nearly Doubled.

Speaking of the receipts of his department for 1944 the Minister revealed that revenue from the Game and Fishery Department in 1944 was $1,300,000, almost double of the previous year. "And just think of it, $600,000 of that figure came from non-resident fishing and hunting licences. That's how big the tourist trade was for our department last year," stated the speaker.

"In Northern Ontario today there are 1,500 tourist outfitters with equipment valued at over $100,000. With increased trade after the war you can plainly see the value of employment in this industry alone. If we can send 150,000 American hunters satisfied with our wild life I know of no greater advertising medium and daily every one will benefit either directly or indirectly with increased tourist trade," explained Mr. Dunbar. He also added that his department felt it could plant upwards of 4,000 returned soldiers in the gainful employment of fur trapping through out Ontario following a tourist season.

8,000 Trappers.

"I can tell you tonight we have 8,000 licensed trappers in Ontario today and last season they did $4,-200,000 worth of fur business. And this did not include three million dollars of bulk business transacted by fur farms besides. So you can see, that a seven million industry in Ontario's fur business can easily be increased and here again will be employment through the department in the interest of the fur bearing trade," concluded Hon. Mr. Dunbar.

Returning to the fishing department Mr. Dunbar revealed there are 100,000 brown named lakes in Ontario many of which are unpopulated and scores not even named. "Some of them in Northern Ontario have never had an angler's line cast into them," stated the speaker as he related personal experiences of only last summer in boating his subject. "That's in Northern Ontario, but I can tell you frankly tonight I am satisfied within a few minutes of one of the finest tourist-attracting districts in Canada and it's in this particular area in which you gentlemen reside and it is up to you members of this club to see your section gets its share of this future tourist business. Why I was dressed a gathering of the Detroit Sports Afield Association in 1939 recently and they had little idea of conception of the game and fishery potentialities within their grasp in Ontario. We simply can't miss that's business," urged the speaker.

1,000 Commercial Fishermen.

Returning to his subject of anglers and commercial fishermen, Hon. Mr. Dunbar revealed there are over 1,000 commercial fishermen in business in this province of Ontario. "In Ontario we operate 27 fish hatcheries and last year produced 800,000,000 fry and fingerlings and another year with the war coming to a successful close, we hope to open more hatcheries for the benefit of commercial fishermen, as well as anglers. A mutual understanding between both of these parties would eventually be for the benefit of Ontario as a whole," concluded Mr. Dunbar.

Mr. James de Stephurn M.P.P. for Prince Edward and Lennox counties, thanked the speaker and also urged a closer co-operation between the commercial fishermen and the anglers. "We have a good fishing as any part of Ontario. There is no doubt the tourist industry will be our biggest financial revenue after the war, let's not miss the opportunity," added Mr. Stephurn. Mr. Spence Rollins, M.P.P. for East Hastings was also present and spoke.

Several interesting moving pictures in technicolor and with sound effects, depicted the anglers present as pictures of salmon fishing, fly fishing for the elusive black bass, trout fishing and animal pictures and one of "Wild Life in Northern Ontario" rounded out a perfect evening of entertainment.

The Season Way.

Wife — Whjd do you want it for, dear?

Man — That fellow Smith across the road has just telephoned to say if I can lend him a cornscrew.

Wife — Well, why do you want your coat for? Surely there's no need for you to go out. You can send Mary with it.

Man (turning upon her more in sorrow than anger)—My dear, your last remark sums up the whole reason why women cannot lead armies, control nations, or take any thing but a subordinate part in the affairs of the world.

Cup Statistics.

In the 83 years of competition for the Stanley Cup, that was originally donated by Lord Stanley in 1893 primarily as a challenge trophy, Toronto clubs have won the coveted old mug exactly six times. Strangely enough five out of the when the Toronto won the National Hockey League championship.

The first time it was taken by a Toronto aggregate was back in 1914 Hockey Association championship. As the Toronto Arenas they repeated in 1918, which gave them two Stanley Cups in World War No. 1. Then after lapsing for 26 years on the Toronto Maple Leafs have won the old beloved trophy twice, in 1942 and again this year. So aside from war years Toronto hockey teams have won the Stanley Cup just twice — the Toronto St. Pats of 1922 and the Maple Leafs twenty years later—1942.

Of the 38 years the Stanley Cup has been competed for it has remained in Montreal over one-half of the time it has been in existence—26 times since 1893. As a matter of fact from 1924 to 1930 (inclusive) the cup remained and was defended in Montreal. Ottawa is second with nine winners. The first American city to take the honors was Seattle when their "Metropolitans" of the Pacific Coast League won the Stanley Cup in 1917. Of course the roster of the "Mets" was made up of Canadian players. Since the Toronto Maple Leafs were organized some 28 years ago, however, the Queen City team has taken the Stanley Cup three times in 1932 Detroit Red Wings also captured the cup a trio of times, but otherwise the Stanley Cup has gone to the only the Red Wings, Les Canadiens and the Leafs have had that honor, as it looks as though Foster Hewitt will lead the Leafs to Ontario—but good. Quebec City, Vancouver and Victoria are other Canadian cities in which the time-honored trophy has rested.

Remember When . . .

Charlie Gardiner, then with the Winnipeg club of the American Hockey Association, was signed by the H.E.L. Chicago Black Hawks a few years ago yesterday. Gardiner, who became a stonewall goalie for the Hawks and one of the game's all-time net-minders, died in June of 1934, two months after helping Chicago win its first Stanley Cup series, Toronto's Frank McCool minded the net for Paul Ussery for the first time in big league hockey this year and now on a Stanley Cup winner.

Asking for Trouble.

Seems it was bad enough to advertise Ivan Rasputin, the beardless Russian wrestler, appear here for the first time since May 1939 in whiskers shorn off, but when Promoter Frank Tumpane named Nanjo Singh as a semi-finalist for the same show this week Tommy either forgot himself or purposely tossed an insult into the Mad Hindoo's lap. With Rasputin batting Tear Drops Singh also in the local sports palace anything up to and including mayhem may be looked for tomorrow night. The principal question is — on which side will the fans take a stand?

Diamond Diggings.

Apparently the local softball bug has fed our "second winter" has passed and it's ball weather from now on. Tonight at the City Hall President Eddie Schrieder is called the gals' softball mogul to Belleville. Other reports here for the Mountain View "Bombettes" are back in the field in round out a four-teamed group . . . The others include Deacons, Alepnis and Universal Moulding and then of course Bill VanTassel will report on the proposed Junior girls' loop.

That on Wednesday night Percy Joe Sexsmith will confer with those interested in men's softball to elect officers for the Belleville Mens' Softball League for the coming season . . . Providing Skipper Sexsmith can obtain a sponsor for the local junior softballers the league should have little worries . . . Anne and SLOO, "Marines" are back in the fold, Sexsmith reports with the No. 8 Repair Depot, a new entry . . . With proposed hook-up of the Pair Dominion under this innovation will have some exciting times in store for the baseball followers here. The meeting will be called for eight in the Bridge building premises . . . W.T. "Jimmy" McCoy, president of the Canoe Valley Baseball League, reports he has been granted to Newfoundland . . . He'll be succeeded as Moose Jaw by F/O. Bellis of Yorkands . . . "Thor" Reynolds had his Brown's junior ball aspirants out to practice at the Alemite Field last week in Toronto following which Barbers shaved off his pet beard. Now for the first time since he set foot on the shores of the World's season continent, Reynolds will appear in a hoist beardless and that in itself should be sufficient inducement to the majority of wrestling fans. Reynolds insists, "Tear" Morgan, the former United States Marine Sgt. will be the main bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. Then for good measure Edmund Kaminski, the 265-pound Georgian grappler, tangles with Nanjo Singh. Tom Collins and Jack Wentworth pry off the night's 1st.

Of course, the higher ranking spades would have been bid first even if both suits were of the same length. Only if the hearts were longer would that suit have been bid before spades.

The two spades response by north was a game-forcing-to-game signal. Not one of the four suits in the pair is undesirable. And neither partner has support for a middle game. Hence the final bid of three no-trump.

Many players refuse to bid no-trump with a singleton in any suit. They prefer rebidding a suit that is not singleton. Or assisting a suit without adequate support. Or showing preference without support.

They thus lie about their hands. And occasionally these lies do not hurt them. But they do not count the greater number of cases that are ruined by such tactics.

Some players are hard to convince.

MANY KEY MEN ON SIDELINES THRU INJURIES

Cronin, Miller, Foxx and Garbark Will be Absent for Some Time

By JACK HAND
(AP Sport Writer)

Baseball's iodine list assumed serious proportions today with each key men as Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, Joe Medwick of the Giants, Jimmy Foxx of the Braves, Eddie Miller of the Reds and Hershel Martin and Mike Garbark of the Yankees on the sidelines.

Loss of Cronin, perhaps for the season and surely for two months, upset Boston's infield plans. When the skipper breaks his thumb Thursday he was playing third base and setting managerial Del Baker mad, replaced Nick Polly and Jack Tobin at the position in recent league games. Medwick was unable to start the season in left field for the New York Yankees, and Manager Johnny Mize can't use Pitchoman because of a back injury. Cronny Wyatt had a doctor work on his diseased arm recently and tried to play but had to give up after a brief workout.

Foxx, counted in Freddy Fitzsimmons' plans as a first baseman-catcher, was able to play in a few of the exhibition games but could not cash across the nose and he was out of the weekend series in Washington.

October Mike Garbark of the Yanks has been out a week because of an ear infection, giving Herb Crompton, Jimmy Wasdell a chance to break into the lineup.

Boston's batting order was knocked for a loop when third baseman Tom Nelson, shortstop Whitey Wietelmann and second jockey Bobby Lewis and Eddie Joost were injured.

OTTAWA GLEBES BEAT MONCTON

Moncton, N.B., April 24.—(CP)—Ottawa Glebes defeated Moncton Hubs, 46-45 here last night in the opening game of the Dominion junior basketball finals. Second game of the total-point series will be played here tonight.

Ottawa played a smooth offensive game, especially in the second half, and both teams kept up a hectic pace throughout.

Hubs held a 23-20 lead at the half and the score remained in the final half, with the lead in doubt until the final seconds of play.

Forward Roy Sadler with eleven points led the Ottawans for scoring, while Claude and Fox with 13 points each topped the Hubs.

Vancouver Lauries Beat Union Jacks

Vancouver, April 24 —(CP)— Vancouver Lauries last night came from behind an 18-14 halftime deficit to eke out a 36-34 victory over Raymond Union Jacks, Alberta senior men's basketball champions, to take a 30-0 lead in the best-of-five series for the Western Canada championship.

Playing before more than 1,000 fans, the Jacks took command of play in the first quarter, outscoring the Lauries 7-3 as they bottled up the Vancouver defence.

However, they slackened a little in the second quarter and, although outscored 8-6, held an 18-13 lead at the half-time interval.

Playing without the services of one of their stars, Sandy Robertson, Lauries found they shooting eye in the third minute and went into the final quarter with a 28-27 lead. Robertson a University of British Columbia student, remained at home to study for examinations today.

Lineups:

Raymond — Turner 7, Michelson 10, Rolfson, Bourne 6, R. Walker, Dunlop, Malder 11, J. R. Walker, Hill, Evans, Stone. Total 34.

Vancouver — Anderson 12, Freeman 1, Kermode 3, Lawn 3, McGee 4, Pomfret, Stevenson, Swift, Sykes 8, Ellis 5. Total 36.

Officials: A. Leach, K. Milton.

Some Wartime Controls Will Be Continued

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) — The end of hostilities in Europe will bring relaxation of some wartime controls but no abandonment, it is continued, J. G. Godsoe, Munitions Department co-ordinator of controls, said last night. In an address prepared for delivery before the Toronto Board of Trade Club, Mr. Godsoe said he anticipated an easing of restrictions on steel and other metals and the use of electric power. Coal, lumber and tires probably would continue in short supply while consumption control would continue with some relaxation.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

BY FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) — Vic Heyliger, the Chicago Black Hawk who turned to coaching during the past season, predicts the American colleges and universities are sooner or later going to provide a great deal of American-born material for the National Hockey League.

Vic has been coaching the University of Michigan puck team and told Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson that when hockey really becomes established in the American colleges there promises to be an upswing in the number of U.S.-born players who enter the big-time. Heyliger says that U. of M. already has made plans to build a huge rink and many other schools are planning similar steps.

Michigan is one of the universities that pioneered college hockey back in 1924. For the future, Vic foresees an era when 500 colleges and universities will play the game.

Who knows what the vast sport resources of U.S. colleges will produce in hockey as they have done in baseball, track and football?

MRS. ROOSEVELT IN SECLUSION

Gene and Forgotten:

Tossing the red centre line out of hockey is one action that the CIARA officials took that will undoubtedly meet with general approval.

That red streak decorating the centre of the ice served but a single purpose. It slowed the game up (so that the older pros wouldn't look as slow as they really were). Now it has gone and with it the penalty shot line.

Reduction of the space between the two blue lines brings favorable comment from Hal (Edmonton Bulletin) Dean. The new position of the blue lines will give more room for manoeuvering behind the line and increase the chances of a breakaway.

Things and Stuff:

Sault stars — pee wee and intermediate teams from Sault Ste Marie on the Canadian side of the border won two international titles recently.

Pertinent poser — why is it that little Lauri Joe Gagnon of Montreal was not allowed to turn professional while boxing in Canada, but go the rod of the Canadian army overseas to leave amateur ranks?

The late president's widow, making Hyde Park her principal residence, is receiving no callers, her secretary said yesterday. She will be busy for some time arranging her household.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Pods thinking just walking along and we came to some little kid sitting on his front steps with a big bag of peanuts, Pods saying, G, that's the biggest bag of peanuts I ever saw for such a little kid.

And we stopped and started to watch him eating them, me saying, Hey, dont you think you're kind of little for such a big bag of peanuts and the kid said, Oh, dont worry about that, they were just free. I eat them fast, I bet I'm the fastest peanut eater ever born, he said. Aw go on, do you want to say you're the champeen of the world? Pods asks and the little kid said, Sure I am, I'll race anybody any time.

Giving me a idea, and I winked a secret wink at Pods, saying, Well I bet bet you we can eat them faster than you can, so what's you think of that? and Pods winked me a secret wink back, saying, I should say we can, we're 2 of the most famous peanut eaters you never heard of, we've been.

I dont believe it, the little kid said, and I said, Okay, I tell you what I do, we'll have a peanut eating race with you right now.

We'll even give you a head start, Pods said, We'll leave you eat 5 peanuts first and then I bet you we can catch up to you and even get ahead of you, so what's you say? he said, and I said, What's you bet we are you willing to try it?

Sure I am, and what's more I dont even want any handycap, the little kid said.

Sounding like good news, and I said, Okay, so you mean you want us to sit down alongside of you and start? and he said, Sure, I'll sit right here and wait for you while you go and get your peanuts.

Being the end of the good news, and we kept on walking, me saying, Anyways, it was a good idea, and Pods saying, Sure, but it would of been better if it had worked.

Which it would.

FUGITIVE ON A DUKE RANCH

STEPHEN PAYNE

CHAPTER 1

The girl was a flash of color as she crossed the lobby of the office building to the elevators. The click of her heels, the lift of her determined little chin, the sparkle in her blue eyes all proclaimed to the man lounging at the cigar counter that Miss Nancy Eleanor Smith was more than perturbed. She was claimed that she was rebellious and very angry.

As the elevator door clanged behind her, the elevator swept the lobby with sharp eyes hidden behind dark glasses. Discerning petticoat pink-and-blue click nor, blue-coated cop, he unobtrusively walked to the second elevator, which deposited him at the twelfth floor in time for him to catch another glimpse of the girl as she entered Suite 1214.

In his carefully tailored gray suit, a neat brief case in his gloved left hand, his individual with dark glasses might have been bond salesman, insurance solicitor or business representative. Nothing so respectable as these, however, he was known to the Philadelphia police as Smoothie Dick Pickpocket—and confidence man, though the was also an educated, polished crook so clever that although he was often suspected, never for incriminating had ever yet been found in his person or among his possessions.

To his chagrin, the crook found the door through which Nancy Eleanor had vanished closed and locked. From the corridor he could listen at the keyhole he could hear only an indistinct murmur of voices. This was decidedly annoying. However, discreet shadowing of both Nancy Eleanor and her uncle might yet reward Smoothie Dick with all he wished to know. Returning to the ground floor of the big building, he loitered there as might a business man awaiting an acquaintance.

Meanwhile in the office John William Smith, his gray hair rumpled, his vest strewn with cigar ashes, was remonstrating with his seventeen-year-old niece Nancy Eleanor. "I tell you that you don't get all het up. Maybe it ain't so bad as it seems."

"Uncle Bill, can't you realize how unbearable this situation has become?"

Nancy Eleanor's sweet voice, distressed though it was, that unsteadily, nevertheless held a note of determination which the uncle had never heard on previous similar occasions. Somehow she was a bit of a madcap and at times difficult to manage, he had begun to fear she would some day do something desperate and very foolish. Therefore plain old John William Smith, bewildered, unhappy and perplexed by Nancy's acutely ambitious and unnecessarily foolish disappointment, extracted a promise from Nancy that she would unburden herself to him before she "blew the lid off."

In a summer suit of bright, rich silk, artistically cut and cleverly fitted to her slender figure, the girl sat now on the corner of her uncle's desk. The heightened color of her oval face under a wealth of brown-gold hair, smartly curled and draped, added to her beauty. Perhaps the diamond ring on her right hand and her jeweled wrist watch also emphasized her loveliness and charm.

John William Smith, proud to be able to give Nancy, whom he loved as a daughter, many expensive "gewgaws," was quite sure of this. But Jane Mrs. Pauline Smythe-Huntington-Smythe (please spell with a y and e, thus: "Smythe,") objected.

Nancy Eleanor, I completely despair of her being able to do anything with your uncle," Mrs. Smythe had often told her stepdaughter. "Still I can be thankful and so can you, Nancy Eleanor —that you came under my care at a time when you were young enough for me to bring you up properly."

This however was not entirely true. Nancy, or Nancy Eleanor as life had been spent in the far West, and the deep impress of those years could not be eradicated. In spite of Mrs. Smythe's effort to make her superficial and sophisticated, the girl steadfastly remained her natural, sweet self.

Oh, I have great ambitions for you, my little daughter," the girl's stepmother would exclaim. "Great ambitions for your two little sisters as well."

But both Nancy and John William Smith had discovered that Mrs. Smythe's "ambitions" were to see Nancy wedded to some one prominent in the Social Register. The two younger Smith girls, twelve-year-old Elizabeth and fourteen-year-old Jane, Mrs. Smythe seemed content to forget and ignore. After she had put them away in a boarding school the matrix or qualifications of which she had lightly disregarded, she was only one of the many things which frustrated Nancy and her uncle.

On this particular morning a "showdown" as Jane and Uncle John William called it, was at hand. Holding a match to his cigar, Nancy sputtering through a smoke screen at his lovely niece, he growled, "Now she wants you to marry that confounded Hudson Alexander?"

"Yes" and immediately. Uncle Bill Fd as soon be thrown at an old vulture with the gout."

"Old vulture? Gout? Nan, you're not thinking of other matrimonial prospects' Pauline has introduced?

Nancy retorted with spirit, "Can you blame her? Fifty, handsome Bostonian who snored louder when he was asleep than when he was awake and ate like a horse after a long sleep."

"Uh-huh," said John William Smith. "But he was a bluebood and top dog in the society free-for-all often, enough to overlook what was that about that snoring?"

"No, I do not. Because I'm not financier. Was he somebody! Didn't even have to say 'Open Sesame' to enter the most exclusive clubs, the homes of the ultra—ultra—"

"Ultra damn parasites!" snorted Nancy's uncle. "We—I—I, somehow overlooked you as a member of your group of methods, you little witch —you managed to discourage both Jane and Elizabeth and whoever Bostonian. I ain't a doubt either that you could send this allpowerful fortune hunter about his business with your customary—"

"Uncle Bill,—this time Pauline has gone so far she's holding a threat over me. Oh, we had a real hot scene. She reminded me that in addition to being the stepmother of Henry Smith's three daughters, she is also our legal guardian, "the exact words," she said, "Unless I consent to my plans, Nancy Eleanor, I can take the law into my sisters very uncomfortable."

"I should do it, too."

John William's lips clamped shut. His teeth bit through his cigar. Presently, it also was spewed out. "Hudson Alexander's to blame for this. He's trying to make my self woman around his finger. But Pauline won't be my nieces' guardian much longer. Not the court decides as it should the suit I've started against her that creating court decision is the reason Mrs. Smythe and Alexander are in such a yank to hook you, Nan."

Nancy sprang from the desk. She clenched her two gay little fists twisting it with nervous fingers. "Uncle Bill, the only time I can remember when I really could be myself was when I was a little girl out in the West with you and Daddy, when you were both making money. Oh—Then the day my father married Pauline I've been—"

Abruptly Smith hurled his cigar at a far corner of the room. "Nan, you're right—in all your basic sentiment 'bout this matchmaking scheme, but I'm forgetting something even more important!"

"What, Uncle Bill? What can be so important to a young girl as the right love affair?"

Still scowling, Uncle John William, albeit a bit cynically since he was himself a confirmed bachelor. "You're right at that. A bad unhappy match with your life is just the dearest kid in the world tied to—"

"Uncle Bill! Does that mean you will help me?"

Smith swept the slender young figure up in his arms and kissed the girl cheek. "You know it! You and me'll stand together till the freezes over. But about that other matter, Nancy Eleanor, I'm serious—"

"Why, I hadn't thought of that at all."

"Well, I've been thinking of it," he said grimly. "The man seated in the corner of the lobby, dark, elected a fresh cigar from a half-filled box and was lighting it when before he grumbled, "Every time I think of that confounded Hudson Alexander I—that 'shoot 'im on a gunny, only-longeared ass!"

Nancy, her blue eyes widening as she gazed at her blunt old uncle's red, grim face, said, "I don't please him! But Pauline—"

Thinks the sun rises and sets in him. He's convinced that this financing his 'theatrical production' will be the great triumph. Her name'll be in lights as the sponsor. Right, Nan?"

"I knew it. Though ever since our last row Pauline won't even talk to me over the phone."

"There was a notice in last night's paper that Hudson's to open the Gaiety Theatre," Nancy Eleanor reminded.

"And where's he going to get the money? I'll give you one guess, Nan." Smith swore under his breath. "Dominoes of girls under age — thank heaven you'll be eighteen in one more month, Nan! —have been known to use funds handed Smith a yellow envelope. "For Wm. F. Walker, this address, collect. You'll pay for it!"

"Sure. Here you are, son. And don't forget to duck the big Pat-ger Wash. Wyoming. That's the steward returned to unknown. Let's see what the 2 clean are."

A-lingle with suppressed excitement Nancy read:

"Wm. F. Walker, Secretary, 1216 Block Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.:

Herewith accommodations for Marcia Louise Farnsworth. Stage Dagger Wash to Jamtown, leaves Dagger Wash eight forty morning except Sunday. Met at Jamtown by F. Slash. Advise collect if this arrangement inconvenient wire time of arrival.

Dad Thomas Farnwell

—Slash, Jamtown, Wyo."

Nancy Eleanor's eyes held puzzled lines between her eyebrows. Her uncle blurted, "What the Hell? Accommodations for your chum Nan? Not for you?"

"Some mistake. Uncle Bill, I told Marcia the name I'd use. That's where she got mixed, I must see her."

"Yes, yes! Right away. I'll be getting your railroad ticket and Pullman reservation as well as plenty of time. Meet me there! one hour, Nan, honey. Hmm? We've got to think up some workable scheme to keep Pauline from finding out and what to—longs to you kids. But leave that to me."

Seeing how radiant, happy, relieved and expectant Nancy Eleanor looked, J. W. paused in line her before they left the office, and she kissed him. "I mean it, honey, whispering, "You old dear! You darling old brick!"

In the lobby of the Block Building, Smoothie Dick imperceptibly stiffened his attention as John Williams Smith and his pretty niece stepped out of an elevator. Outside the building

Smoothie alone could not follow them both, as elected to tail Nancy who entered a telephone booth in the Farnsworth Store, exiting into an adjoining booth, Smoothie caught Nancy's brief conversation: "I must talk to you. Anything with you, Marcia. Meet me at the 5&5 Bank as soon as you can."

"Marcia', repeated the crook with name. Among the swells I know of only one Marcia Farnsworth. Real high-up, the Farnsworths. Place on the Riviera before the war."

Still imperceptively. Smoothie devoted himself to shadowing a dame without the dame realizing it. In all this he was quite likely to remain outside while Nancy entered the safety deposit vault. His wait finally brought reward.

Po north and northwest of Bologna on a steadily broadening front against only slight resistance. In one sector, a German counter-attack was repulsed and 300 prisoners taken.

Along the Lagurian coast to the west, 8th Army troops advanced 2,000 yards toward La Spezia, capturing several towns, and there were indications that enemy forces in this area also were about to go into full withdrawal.

The possibility that the enemy might launch anti-aircraft rocket guns around the Po crossings was indicated in official announcements that 32 Allied planes were lost yesterday.

Anxious Relatives Await Word From Their Loved Ones

The wheels of the army grind exceedingly slow, at least as it seems to several city residents who have loved ones, overseas, who are held as prisoners of war, and others released and at present in Britain awaiting return home.

Outstanding Canadian prisoner of war, of course, is Lieut. Colonel Charles Cecil Merritt, V.C., who was released from the concentration camp last week and at present is somewhere in England.

Another long awaiting arrival home, or at least word of it is Mrs. Merritt, the former Grace Rose of this city and her two husky sons Peter and Cecil.

Her gallant husband cabled on Sunday evening that all was well and he would get in touch with her within the next two days. Today an anxious wife and mother is awaiting what she hopes will be the final word heralding the long looked for reunion that will break five years of separation.

Mrs. J. L. Langdon, 11 Leighton Street is another anxious mother whose son, Captain Alan Pettit, is a prisoner of war in Germany. Captain Perrit is at present 26 years of age and has been stationed in Stalag 7A near Munich upon which victorious American armies

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, April 24 —(CP)— Two Junkers 88s and a Focke-Wulf 190 were left riddled with bullets and burning and many more were damaged when a Mosquito pilot, Flying Lieut. R. A. Kipp, D.S.O., D.F.C. of 1292 Nicosia St., Kamloops, B.C., attacked an airfield at Achmer in Upper Bavaria.

Kipp strafed dares to light up the field and permit low-level attacks on aircraft. He had made five runs and was on his way home before the first fire came up.

Later on the same flight the 26-year-old squadron leader stopped a military train and attacked military road transport.

FO. Andy Birchnall of Stamford Centre, Ont., adjutant of the R.C.A.F.'s Wolf Squadron for the last year, is heading home. His repatriation papers came through while he was serving at a Belgian airfield.

Birchnall is one of the most widely-known members of the R.C.A.F. overseas. He was elected warrant officer at Canadian Bomber Group headquarters, R.C.A.F. overseas headquarters in London and a Personnel Reception Depot before he joined the Wolves.

FO. J. R. Murray of London, Ont., and CSM Snowden, A.M.J. Toronto navigator, and FO. J. H. Hyde, mid-upper gunner from Springford, Ont., crew members of the oldest operational Halifax in the R.A.F. Bomber Command, have been "screened" on completion of their first operational tours.

Their last trip was the 122nd mission for "Friday the Thirteenth" and their own 36th operation. They have been over 36 major German targets.

War supplies freighted by air to within gunshot range of the fighting lines played a big part in liberation of Mandalay and much of the job was done by Canadians in R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. transport squadrons.

In the 10 days preceding the recapture of the old Burma capital, R.C.A.F. squadrons commanded by Wing-Cmdr. T. P. Harnett of Moncton, N.B., and Wing-Cmdr. Ralph Gordon of Bobcaygeon, Ont., carried hundreds of tons of food and fighting material to the city's outskirts.

Nearly 400 airmen in R.C.A.F. Dakota squadrons and many more flying with R.A.F. units could watch the day-to-day progress of the Mandalay fighting as they flew above the city on supply-dropping missions.

Madoc and District

Madoc — The April meeting of Madoc branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ray Ferguson on Wednesday with the president, Mrs. George Hill in charge of the meeting. Moon, convener of war work, reported that cigarettes had been sent to all the Madoc boys at Easter. Mrs. Tanner, Mrs. Hollis and Mrs. Ken Hicks were appointed as the nominating committee to bring a slate of officers for the year 1945-46 at the May meeting. Two vocal numbers by Misses Aileen Tanner and Phylis Tanner were very much enjoyed. A poem was read by Mrs. W. Hollis and Master Billie Tunnelly gave two vocal numbers. The members then were entertained in the recreation room when Mr. Taylor showed slides on the Madoc talc industry. He also showed colored slides on interesting places in Ontario. A vote of appreciation was tendered Mr. Taylor. The lunch was assisted by Mrs. W. Parks, Mrs. Ken Nicol, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. R. Bailey, Mrs. R. Reynolds and Mrs. Tanner.

Next time you see a sailor, remember...

1st ... That no victories can be won by Canadians and our allies overseas unless they keep getting supplies.

Making sure that those supplies are delivered is the Navy's job. And you can bet it will be done without fail.

It will be done by sweating stokers down where torpedoes crash ... by men standing watch, exposed to freezing spray ... and by gun crews that keep on firing while the deck buckles and blisters from the heat of flames below.

Even though the seas close over sinking sterns and turn red with the blood of brave men—it will be done!

2nd ... That someone must provide the supplies which the Navy will convoy.

And that's something you must help do — by buying Victory Bonds.

How will your purchases measure up in terms of unselfish performance of duty?

Will you buy only as many Victory Bonds as you can conveniently afford—or all you possibly can?

REDS SLICE LAST ESCAPE LINE FROM BERLIN
BRITISH LAUNCH ALL-OUT ATTACK ON BREMEN

Tommies Battling Two Miles From Centre of the City

U.S. 3rd Army Makes 28-Mile Gains in Alpine Footholds

Paris, April — 25 —(AP)— The rampaging U. S. 3rd Army charged to the Danube and within 22 miles of Berchtesgaden today in 36-mile gains rolling up the Alpine foothills at the edge of the final German redoubt.

In the northern redoubt, the British 2nd Army stormed Bremen, tightened the siege of Hamburg and bombed troop trains pulling into Denmark.

First Canadian Army forces have cleared the north Holland coast line as far east as the mouth of the Ems estuary, an Allied communique said.

An American - Russian junction in the centre of the front was expected hourly. Patrols had not been made already, as many correspondents at Allied Supreme Headquarters believe.

The U. S. 7th Army, crossing the Danube plain, was down through or was last reported 46 miles from Munich.

Regaining Under Siege.

The 3rd Army had place to Regensburg from positions a mile north and two miles west of the Danube. The 11th Armored Division drove four miles into Regen, 33 miles from the Austrian frontier and 68 miles from the Austrian bastion of Linz.

At Regen, the spearheads were 40 miles from Berchtesgaden, 30 miles from the Russians in the heart of Austria, at Klenberg, 90 miles east of Hitler's personal retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Headquarters did not pinpoint the 3rd position 22 miles from that village.

The all-out assault on Bremen was launched one minute before midnight last night, with at least two or 1A-Gen. Dempsey's divisions hurdled against the battle-defended city from the east and south on either side of the Weser river.

At dawn's light the Tommies were battling in the outskirts of Bremen, two miles from the centre of the city, a pre-war population of which was 342,112.

Third-Day Artillery Assault.

British Bombers had battered the great ship-building centre and Field Marshal Montgomery's artillery had pounded enemy positions within the city limits for two days before the attack.

Germans inside the city had ignored a surrender ultimatum.

At the western end of the line U. S. 9th Army and Canadian First Army troops moved shoulder-to-shoulder along the Alpine foothills that shield Munich.

The French, at Althausen, north of Lake Constance, were 26 miles from Austria's western tip. Thus the 3rd French Army was within 26 squares from the east as the French prepared to fall into Austria from their positions.

A combined assault by 7th and French 1st Army, with 4 corps totaled 10m, city of 30,000 and an important communications centre on the Danube.

Capture 13 Generals

American and French armies captured 13 least 12 German generals yesterday.

A supreme headquarters statement said: "The German army has ceased to exist as an integrated fighting force." The Army group headquarters said that in two significant instances, German officers "promptly split up and ran away on their own, it is every man for himself."

In the eastern portion of Leipzig between the Russians and Gen. Bradley's troops, many Germans are voluntarily surrendering to Americans — 1,500 at one place alone.

On all fronts Monday, headquarters said, Allied gains were limited by raising the total for April alone to 1,284,000 and since D-Day to 3,364,-000. Since D-Day 1,000 of Allied which no army could long stand, and that's more than half the late. The Russians were exacting enormous toll on the other eastern front and in Berlin; the Allies who crossed the Po in Italy had seized more than 60,000 captives in their freshoffensive.

TUESDAY'S TOTAL FOR VICTORY LOAN IS $77,269,800

Ottawa, April 25. (CP)—Total subscriptions to the Seventh War Victory Loan rolled up to $142,851,-700 today with a quota of $75,000,-000 Tuesday, second day of the three-week campaign for a minimum objective of $1,250,000,000.

The National War Finance Committee statement noted that today's total was a little below the seventh loan's second-day mark of $77,269,-800 while the cumulative figure lagged behind the previous campaign's total of $146,330,190.

HITLER'S CHALET, BERCHTESGADEN, HEAVILY BOMBED

Attack Carried Out By Two Separate Forces of Heavy Lancasters

London, April 25 — (AP)—R.A.F. Bomber Command today bombed Hitler's chalet at Berchtesgaden in a possible attempt on the Fuehrer's life.

Both the chalet and heavily-guarded installations on the grounds of the mountain retreat were bombed.

Storm Troopers barracks and Hitler's Alpine refuge at the top of Kehlstein Mountain five miles away from the chalet also were among the targets.

Two Separate Forces

The attacks were carried out by two separate forces of heavy Lancasters with 12,000-pound earthquake bombs and assorted types of explosives.

Simultaneously more than 1,050 United States heavy bombers flying from Britain hammered one of the Fuehrer's private rail lines only 10 miles from Berchtesgaden, and the great Skoda armaments works at Pilsen, Czechoslovakia.

Both R.A.F. and United States fighters escorted the Lancasters in the attacks. The first announcement from the Air Ministry reported two bombers missing.

There was no official suggestion that the attack was planned specifically to catch Hitler in his fortress home. But—unofficially it was pointed out that there is a broad-hint possibility."

The German broadcasts have twisted Hitler is staying in Berlin in a martyr's role but, as usual, such reports are discounted in Allied quarters as propaganda.

The R.A.F. attack on Berchtesgaden bombs indicated six chiefs sought to destroy the underground installations at Berchtesgaden.

American 3rd Army troops are 82 miles northwest of Berchtesgaden, and 7th Army troops in northern Italy, and hit targets along the Brenner Pass line.

In addition the bombers hit three other rail targets in a 36-mile radius of Berchtesgaden, Hitler's headquarters.

The attack on the Skoda plant came two hours after slave workers had been warned by an Allied broadcast against sabotaging the plant and to flee to safety in the countryside. Skoda is one of Europe's richest targets at Hallein, 10 miles northeast of Berchtesgaden, Salzburg, 15 miles north, Berchtesgaden and Traunstein, 26 miles northwest, and 4500,000 Germans at large.

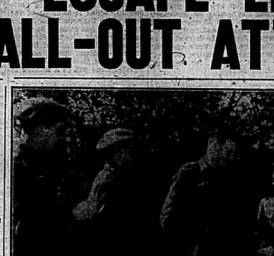
Few Realized How Infantile Paralysis Had Ravaged the Body of Roosevelt

By DOUGLAS CORNELL

Washington, April 26 — (AP) — Few persons, even in Washington, realized how infantile paralysis had ravaged the body of President Roosevelt.

They knew that he was crippled, but the extent to which he was crippled, or how deep they saw in the newsreels and newspapers, and always showed him standing firmly beside the lectern or seated behind a desk, or speaking from the platform that hid the lower body.

They didn't know the stark courage and physical effort it took for Mr. Roosevelt to get around. His legs were withered and useless. When he wore braces, he could walk only by shifting his weight and letting one leg, then the other, swing forward.



He pulled himself up a ramp onto his special train with the help of handrails. He hoisted himself with his hands from wheelchair to automobile, from automobile to bed, carried.

For a long while Mr. Roosevelt was extremely sensitive about his crippled condition. He never said anything publicly, but to a small group he once talked angrily about the newsreel cameramen, so his handcontrolled car.

In the last year or two he had mellowed about his infirmity. He permitted himself to be wheeled unaided to platforms at political rallies.

His love of the outdoors, particularly of the sea, probably was strengthened by the fact that he was pinned indoors so much.

While he got his greatest pleasure from sea trips and deep-sea fishing, he liked picnics. He sometimes there always was a Fourth of July picnic besides a small, swimming lake at Mrs. Roosevelt's cottage on the family estate.

Canadian Minesweeper Guysborough Torpedoed In Atlantic, 53 Missing

Ottawa, April 25 (CP)—Loss by sub-chaser and towing the vessel to torpedoing in the North Atlantic of a port and the second was for towing Canadian minesweeper Guysborough with five officers and 48 men missing was announced today by Navy Minister Abbott.

There were 37 survivors, eight of whom suffered injuries.

Time and location of the U-boat attack were not given but a Royal Navy rescue ship took the survivors to a British port, which might indicate the ship went down nearer Britain than Canada.

Stories from survivors indicated the ship did not sink immediately and that at least two men got a chance to destroy the U-boats periscope before it left the scene.

Torpedo damage included the swamping of the ship's whaler and boiling of her launch and most of the losses were suffered in a grim 15-hour struggle with a rough, icy sea during which time of one was taken on flimsy Carley-floats. Only six of 53 men who were crowded around one float lived through the ice and exposure, a combination of the rescue ship arrived.

Oasis Taken Off Dead.

In the crowded floats they took turns trying to lower the skin and coats were removed from the dead to give protection to the living. While exposure accounted for the larger number of deaths, many were killed by a combination of injuries and exposure.

Lieut. Benjamin C. R. Russell of Halifax, commanding officer of the sweeper since her commissioning in 1942, was in charge. His wife was the fourth Canadian sweeper and 32nd Canadian warship lost in this war.

At eight o'clock in the morning an aircraft was sighted but it failed to see the survivors. It was afternoon before a British plane arrived, first taking on board the men in the water. Then it circled the lashed together and later the survivors in a fifth. More than an hour they could not climb up the scramble nets and had to be hauled on board by lines.

The Guysborough, built in Vancouver, was of the Bangor class steam-powered with displacement of about 700 tons and equipped both for minesweeping and anti-submarine duties.

She was twice officially cited by the United States government for rescue work and the commanding officer the crew of a disabled U. S. navy

TASK OF BUILDING A WORLD PEACE WILL BEGIN TODAY

Foreign Ministers of Three Great Powers Ready for Momentous Meeting

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(CP Staff Writer)

San Francisco, April 26 — (CP)— Representatives of all nations gathered here anew the task of building an organization to prevent war.

That the task is difficult was pointed up by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who told Canadian correspondents yesterday that he and his fellow parliamentary delegates are determined to concentrate on the main problem — the creation of the organization — and do nothing to distract attention from it by raising premature issues on particular issues.

Mr. King is more urgent than 36 years ago is pointed up by Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister of Britain who heads the United Kingdom delegation. At a press conference he stressed the power of modern weapons, long-range planes and rockets and the capacity for carrying destruction to areas hitherto considered secure.

Eden In Paris

Foreign Secretary Eden reached San Francisco by plane at 1:15 a.m. P.D.T. (4:15 a.m. E.D.T.) after a trans-continental flight from Washington.

He declined to comment on the Russo-Polish situation, saying: "I do not think I should say anything on that. Both the Russian and Polish delegations are being brought up." Eden then left Paris and arrive we have to scratch together the best we can and do our utmost in order to hold the enemy at bay.

Gottfried Krueger, "he who flies flags will be blown in the capital, which is fighting for its life."

The battle-scarred city within the city threw in repeated counter-attacks spearheaded by the storm-troops. The Russians announced that Gerlin had been driven from the eastern part of the city.

Stone Jungles Roaring

The 1st white Russian Army captured more than nine miles southward west of Berlin to Ketzin, 14 miles due west of the capital, all but encircling the city, the German communique said.

Besides Near.

Complete isolation of the capital was near. The German defenders, young and old, fought stubbornly, and the city, once one of the world's greatest, was being reduced to a heap of blasted masonry and ashes.

The 1st White Russian Army, driving from the north, and the 1st Ukrainian Army, advancing from the south, joined forces yesterday in southeastern Berlin, cutting off forces of Germans to the southeast.

The Schlesischer (Silesian) railway station and all districts north and east of it were captured. This brought the Russians within a mile of the centre of the city and the Reichstag.

Wheeling around the city to the north and northwest, Marshal Gregory Zhukov's First White Russian Army cut the Berlin-Hamburg railway and swept on to within 2 1/2 miles of the Berlin-Hannover railway. Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army continued thrusting around the city to the southwest and reached a point four miles east of Potsdam.

For Real Excitement and Thrills Give Crew Murmansk Runs

Troops Reach Elbe On 22-Mile Front N.E. of Dresden

Russians Hold Half of Berlin And Near Unter Den Linden

London, April 26 —(CP)— The German High Command today said Soviet troops had reached the Elbe river on a 22-mile front northeast of Dresden, and all but completed encirclement of Berlin, telling the last escape rail line to the west.

Moscow announced Monday that Russians had reached the Elbe northwest of Dresden. At last reports, Americans stood on the Mulde river, east of Leipzig, and 70 miles from the Elbe there.

The broadcast German communique said Russians reached the Elbe between Riesa, 25 miles northwest of Dresden, and Torgau, another 22 miles further northwest.

Half of Berlin was held by Soviet besting down German barricades of stone and iron, knocking huge gaps in walls and fighting Nazis who popped out of archways behind Russian lines. Berlin was described as a wreckage of stone jungles roaring with battle.

The 1st white Russian Army captured more than nine miles southward west of Berlin to Ketzin, 14 miles due west of the capital, all but encircling the city, the German communique said.

GERMAN FORCES REELING TOWARD ITALY'S BORDER

Allies Across Po River in Pursuit of Disorganized Enemy

Rome, April 26 — (AP) — Both the British 8th and Fifth 5th Armies sent troops across the Po River today in pursuit of disorganized German forces reeling back toward Italy's northern border.

The crack 10th American Mountain Division won the first Allied bridgehead beyond a barrier stream Monday morning in the face of what a communique called a "remarkably fierce" concentration of enemy fire.

Units of the 8th Army also spanned the stream to the east later.

Exactly where the Allied forces won the crossings was not disclosed as the planned command clamped on a security blackout.

It was known, however, that the U.S. 10th Division, having forged 36 miles in two days, crossed the Po at a point where it is about 300 yards wide with gradually sloping banks. The German, protected by earthworks, fought back hard to lead into the Allied assault boats, but the engineers quickly bridgehead.

In the Po Valley northwest of Bologna, other 5th Army elements mopped up extensive German units encircled in the Lake Comacchio, which overran Modena.

Streaming along the long, twisting battle line, from Ferrara on the right flank to the west of La Spezia on the Ligurian coast, Allied troops were reported moving swiftly ahead through shattered enemy defenses. Ferrara fell yesterday to the 5th Army and the British 8th Army.

Up to noon yesterday, 40,000 prisoners were taken.

Walter Aseltine Has Scrap Book Of Thirty Volumes

Undoubtedly there are many scrap book enthusiasts in Belleville and district, but it certainly there are not many who have the patience, perseverance and thoroughness of Mr. Walter Aseltine, Dufferin Street, who since the beginning of the war has pasted literally reams of clippings regarding the war situation. Today, after almost six years of clipping and pasting, Mr. Aseltine's scrap books total 30 volumes and still the end does not appear in sight. And he is determined to keep on until the "day's end that he may have a complete record of the war's progress for easy reference.

Covers Every Phase

Covering almost every phase of the war's progress, Mr. Aseltine's 30 volumes of scrap books run along three different lines. Each paragraph, first, and possibly most interesting is his miscellaneous collection which is almost anything and everything concerning the war which may be found.-Autobiographies of famous world leaders, descriptions of modern methods of warfare, digests summaries and other items of interest are also to be found in Aseltine's section. The War Today—
Fine Working War Partnership Auspicious Sign for Security

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Surely there could be no more auspicious sign for security than the San Francisco Security Conference than the partnership of the mighty armies of the Big Three in the second year of war on the battlefields of a broken Germany.

There we have a working partnership of the United States, Britain and Russia which the security conference hopes to duplicate in the peace. It is just possible that peace depends certainly on the unbroken unity of the Big Three—Britain, Russia, and the United States. So long as they stand together there will be a rainbow in the sky.

And there's another good sign in today's report from the European theatre. Two hours before Axtis radio Berlin announced that Hermann Goeds armament factory at Salzgitter, Germany, employing 30,000 workers — many of whom are slaves of the Nazis—is the key to the safety of the countryside. That, of course, was a tip to the German military to prepare for an assault.

Allies' Bonanza Code

There's a ceaseless war on the Russian code of the Allies, at a moment when the whole world is shuddering over the new drive which the Nazis against not only enemy people but their own. Every code provides further useful timber for the building of a peace structure on the foundation of the United Nations.

While the peace-makers gather the battle in the heart of Berlin is raging. It is the war, of course, of Russians and the Germans are at close grips and fighting with a fury which civilization has never known in the last great engagements of "the last war."

The Germans have been launching the continuous counter-attacks, and their officers are reported to be shooting down any of their men who attempt to desert. No one knows what's happening to the civilian population which has been caught in the death-out.

Berlin Corridor Disturbed.

The bloody battle make the dissolution of the so-called Berlin corridor a great defence task, running north and south on both sides of the Oder River. The Germans have been withdrawing troops from the corridor battle-front and sending them to the Oder front, which runs to the south and to the north. Berlin is just beyond the Oder. Setting the Russians south of Berlin have been pulled back so that Alpine defences, while those to the north of the capital are being strengthened with numbers of the words Denmark by train.

Reports of the strength of the army which will defend the Fuehrer on the mountain crag are high in his divisions. Normally this would represent about 1,200,000 men, but it's doubtful if the German division in the south—one of which have the Nazis have left to fight it out with the Russians—and in the mountain redoubt—numbers more than 8,000 each. So 100 divisions might mean 800,000 men.

Fast Net Long Delayed.

Whatever may be the grand total of the Nazi defenders in the Alps, it is generally agreed that he has established quite a force to make a fight. We shouldn't figure on an easy passage to victory. Even in the event, the test won't long be delayed, for powerful Allied forces are now in Italy and are massing also from several directions. While the Germans have been fighting Russians and Czechoslovakia, the U.S. Air Force and the Royal Air Force are drawing near the Fuehrer's hide-out from the north-west.

Indications are that there also will be a great air armada assembled in Denmark. Many of the Nazi planes have been sent to Finland and not having engaged in any devastating fighting as have the Nazis in the south, will be in better shape for a final stand. So it looks as if the Nazis fair to produce some tough fighting.

On Russian North Coast

Sioux lay at anchor in Kola Inlet on Russia's north coast, waiting for the convoy to come through through the ice-fogs from Murmansk, when she was told she had a new assignment. German armed invaders were stealing the little Russian coal mining town of Pechenga, about forty miles off North Cape. The Russian Admiralty had decided to rescue the besieged fishing town and sent the three-ton cruiser fleet at twenty minutes' notice, and went along as anti-aircraft guardship.

Although it was a calm, cloudless day the mountains on the Arctic canyons was immobilized by planes and the Germans had more than 100 miles away. Sioux got off her share of the people, as her first lieutenant, Donald Dow, Prince of Toronto, took a crew in the ship's motorboat, towing the whaler behind. They evacuated about 75 of the inhabitants in the two.

Toward the end of last May Sioux joined the Channel invasion forces along with her sister ships of the 26th Flotilla, and for the next 24 days there wasn't much rest. It was a continual round of sub hunting, escorting, patrolling, and bombarding in the English Channel.

Slurrying of Tirpitz

On July 1 Sioux was ordered north again, and shortly afterward she took part in the hunting and harrying of the Tirpitz and the force led by Admiral Sir Henry Moore, Commander-in-Chief of the British home fleet.

One of her officers, Lieut. H.R.T. Lawrence of Brockville, Ont., won the Distinguished Service Cross when the cruiser H.M.C.S. Oakville destroyed an enemy sub in the Caribbean. He and P.O. Arthur Powell of Timmins, Ont., both were decorated in that action.

Other officers include Lieut. E. R. James, Kingston, Ont.

Among the dead were CPO Gordon Clarke, Sarnia, Ont.; PO. Jack Murray, Grimsby, Ont.; AB. Leonard Grouhy, Geraldton, Ont.; Oder Wesly Mills, Ont.; Sgnm. George Wilson, Hamilton, Ont.

In the Emden-Bremen-Berlin triangle 48 locomotives and 360 freight and passenger cars also were destroyed or damaged.

Four German ships including one of 2,000 tons were sunk or damaged overnight as attacks continued on enemy shipping along the North Sea and Baltic coasts.

A jet plane was hide fixion and a railway target in southern Germany was bombed.

For the British-based bombers, the attack on Pilsen involved a round trip of approximately 1,200 miles.

Shortly before 9 a.m., while the bombers were roaring across central Germany, the Allied-controlled Algiers radio flashed a warning to the Skoda slave workers to take cover.

The broadcast said the warning was issued on orders of Gen. Eisenhower in an effort to spare the lives of slave laborers and other civilians.

Bata Employees Hope to Better Past Loan Record

In anticipation of bettering their record of the Seventh Victory Loan when approximately $119,000 was subscribed, company employees of the Bata Shoe Company at Batawa held their Eighth Victory Loan campaign mass meeting Monday at noon.

Mr. Rowland prior to the meeting by the new Trenton Air Force Band under the direction of Pt. Lt. Nielsen, entertained with a fine recital for the appearance of stage-down's star performer, Bill Harvey, and his accompanying team of Dorothy Lean and Jack Lawrence and Ben Silverton with his violin.

Guest speaker for the program was Flying Officer Frank Rowsell of Orillia, who recently returned from overseas following completion of his tour of operations. He took his listeners on a typical bombing raid over a "hot" German target. He was an air reflency plant which he stated rallied the Japanese and ringed anti-aircraft defences.

He told of seeing the Lancaster ahead of his craft going up in a terrific blast of fire and smoke as the result of a direct hit by flak. It was loaded with 12,000 pounds of bombs. Fortunately his plane was seriously hurt by flak during his run over the target, he said.

In conclusion he pointed out that the war was not yet over; that there was still fighting was hard ahead of Canadians against the Japanese and urged civilians on the home front to match the sacrifices of the boys overseas. "They are willing to give their lives," he said. "You will get your money back."

Employees were also addressed by Mr. Thomas Bata, who complimented them on their previous Victory Loan records. Dave McDonald acted as chairman for the meeting.

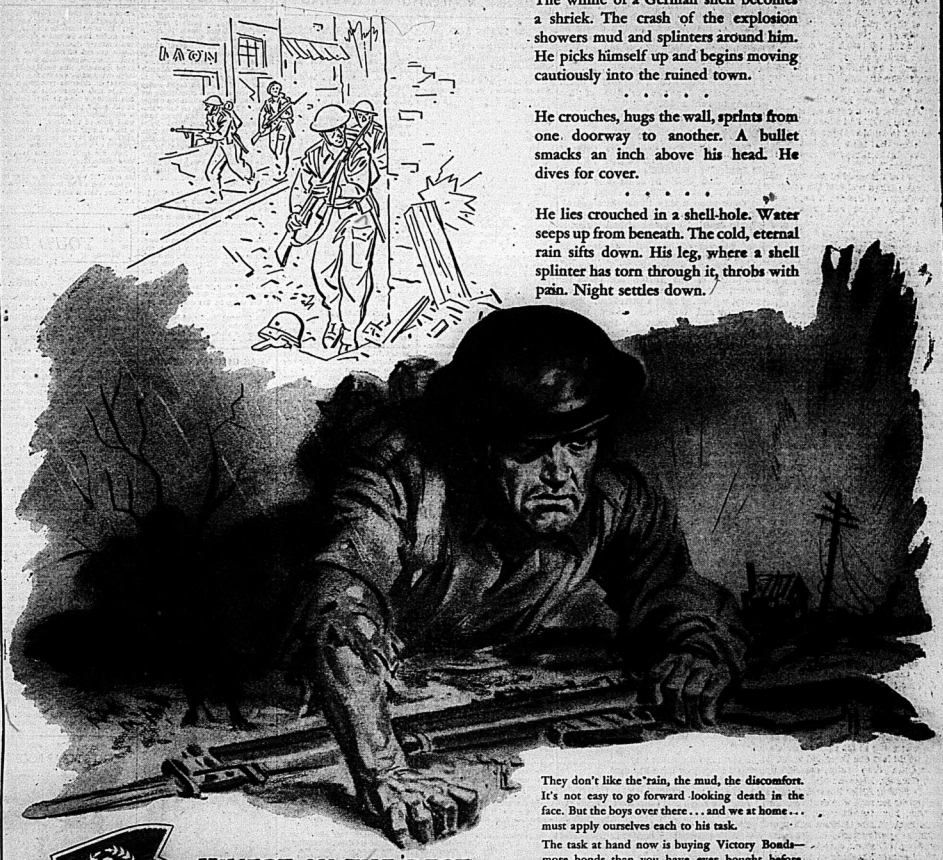
each to his task

The crash and rumble of artillery shakes the earth. Bombers roar overhead. Machine guns chatter. He squats beside a ditch waiting for the order to advance. His nerves are tense and jumpy.



The whine of a German shell becomes a shriek. The crash of the explosion showers mud and splinters around him. He picks himself up and begins moving cautiously into the ruined town.

. . . . .

He crouches, hugs the wall, sprints from one doorway to another. A bullet smacks an inch above his head. He dives for cover.

He lies crouched in a shell-hole. Water seeps up from beneath. The cold, eternal rain sifts down. His leg, where a shell splinter has torn through it, throbs with pain. Night settles down.

They don't like the rain, the mud, the discomfort. It's not easy to go forward looking death in the face. But the boys over there . . . and we at home . . . must apply ourselves each to his task.

The task at hand now is buying Victory Bonds—more bonds than you have ever bought before.

San Francisco in World's Eye

There is opening in San Francisco on the Pacific coast a conference which bears the greatest possibilities for the world. In the words of Deputy Minister Attlee of Great Britain to a newspaper conference "we do not come here as perfectionists but as grim realists" as he declared that Britain was determined to gain security. Mr. Attlee referred to the power of modern war weapons and said that "every delegate at this conference should bear in mind the power of modern weapons. Anyone who has lived as we have lived under bombs, flying bombs and rockets would find here and a powerful instinct for security."

Delegates have come bearing the great problems of the world in their relation to the maintenance of peace and the nations which have passed through the ordeals of modern war for five and a half years know that a formula for security must be found that the world may progress in harmony without recourse to war.

The other day Prime Minister Churchill referred to the need of a world organization which "must be built" and which the world is determined to build that peace may last and he advised that for this object "we must be always the necessary force to restrain aggression."

The prayers of the world of free men will be that these parleys will find the formula for the creation of such a body with power to assure peace and remove the possibility of war.

Flight of Hun Bigwigs

Fleeing is the word most often used of late in reference to the Nazi gang. Places of danger and surrounding cities are no spots for men of evil whose deeds have shocked the world. For those of their class who have been the enemy of everything that stands for justice and right this is a time of terror and confusion when everything is tottering where Hitler said what Germany was going to do with the world would last for a thousand years. Berlin, the capital, is all but completed. There is no real Nazi power and authority there and much of the city is in the hands of the Russians.

The men of Hitler's crowd have in the short space of a few years been responsible for the degeneration of the people of Germany to a degree that no student of crime and criminals and no psychologist could have foretold, because what they did to terrorize the word was done on a mass scale.

But now these men—some were noted to be destroyed by underground resistance in overrun countries before this—are themselves doomed for a massive destruction and obliteration. Like wild demons, as they are, they have fled before the wrath of honest men and the darkest corners could not dim enough to prevent their detection for the search in pursuit of them into their lairs wherever they may be will be relentless.

The Nazi period in the history of Germany has been the most degraded page in the whole history of the world because of the mass spirit of criminality that developed under the teachings and practices of Hitler and his associates.

Berlin's Dream Erased

Berlin, which Hitler chose to be the capital of the world-in-chains which he declared he was going to set upon a foundation that would last one thousand years, is blasted and in deep ruins, deserted by Goebbels, Goering, Himmler and the rest, no doubt including Hitler himself, for it is not a safe place for men who contrived war because war has turned with a terrific vengeance upon things German and upon the criminal government of Nazidom. This company of men, deep in sin, have found their crimes knocking at their door and the earth giving way beneath their feet. These men of blood and crime who could plot and see millions die and who would wipe out civilization, because it represented the ideal, had become the motive spirit of the tragic drama of all time as it relates to plots which have failed and toppled over on the inventors' heads.

This will be one of the great lessons of history, serving as a warning to nations to take a deep interest in their governments and not do what Germany did, allow a cutthroat gang of leaders like the Nazis to dictate first to Germany and then to the world. Germany first became the associate of Hitler's tyranny and the world holds her guilty for not resisting the manifest designs of Hitler, whereby she became the partner of his machinations. German indifference to the kind of government Germany has together with the military spirit which has been born into the German flesh and blood and outlook on life by ages of aggression has made the anvil on which Hitler fashioned the thunderbolts of his mad career, the curse of which slaves. This plot has been costly to the manhood and womanhood of the world and to the resources of the nations and of nature's riches to have allowed Germany as the fiercest aggressor of her, to be made the agency of tyranny.

By ordinary rules Germany would be knocked out of the war by now though by the rule of Hitler destruction must be complete. Now German forces hold but about one sixth of the 180,000 odd square miles of Germany with the Allies on the East and West and practically controlling 150,000 square miles. Soon, very soon, the United Nations will hold all of Germany. This is what has had to be done with Germany to remove her as an obstacle of progress and as a menace to peace.

Over the vast expanse of Germany there lowers as a grim and ghastly reminder of the price that Germany must pay for her aggression, the now ghost city of Berlin, with Hitler's greedy eye saw as the centre of the world and which dream he tried to realize by war upon mankind which has made it a city of destruction—not a world capital.

The scheme of Hitler did not work and the moral order of the world is again demonstrated by the collapse of the enemy's gigantic plot.

Hitler—and the Parrot

The appeal to the Italian sense of humor has always been strong. "Viva Voci di Londra," as the BBC's service to Italy is called. Just lately in de-bunking Count Grandi, it told the following story:

"Once upon a time there was a parrot. This parrot belonged to a man who was sick to death of Nazism and had taught it to say: 'Down with Hitler!' But one day the man was warned that the Gestapo had heard of it and were looking for him and his parrot. In a great fright he went to the priest of his village and asked for advice. And the priest said to him: 'Don't worry, my son. I have a parrot too. Bring your parrot and take it from me and be afraid.' The very next day the Gestapo came—an officer and twelve Black Guards. The officer planted himself in front of the bird and ordered it to say 'Heil Hitler!' But the parrot frowned at him and did not answer. 'Come on, my pretty. Down with Hitler, 'the officer shouted again. But the parrot said not a word. Then the officer, more and more riled, two, then four, then six, then all together, they stood round the parrot and bellowed as loudly as they could: 'Come on, my pretty: down with Hitler!' And the parrot, lifting its feathers, made a pirouette, and at last serenely answered: 'The Lord be praised.'"

The cloying sweet legend of the sentimental German of the fairy tales no longer exists for us. Our fighting men have looked the beast in the eye, and have not quailed. If today we lend an ear to this nauseating tale of pity and sympathy for a crushed and beaten but inhuman enemy, then we shall dishonor the memory of those who sacrificed themselves that we might live once more in peace. We shall be unworthy of their sacrifice, we shall be totally unfit to look into the faces of the children they have left behind."—(Montreal Star.

By ERNIE PYLE

OKINAWA (by Navy Radio) — Few TV. Americans have met the soldiers in their native state—that is, before capture. But I have. As a result of the few boys of my company captured them quicker than a wink.

It was mid-forenoon and we had just reached our first bivouac area after a march of an hour and a half. The boys threw off their packs, sat down on the ground, and took off their helmets to mop their perspiring foreheads.

We were in a small grassy spot at the fork of a hill. Most of these hillsides have caves and have honeycombed ones more in them. They are a rich field for souvenir hunters. And all marines are souvenir hunters.

So immediately two of our boys, instead of resting, started up their trails, looking for caves and souvenirs. They had gone about 50 yards when one of them yelled—

"There's a Jap soldier under this bush."

We didn't get too excited for most of us figured he meant a dead Jap. But there on four of the boys got up and went up the hill. A few moments later somebody yelled again—

"Hey, here's another one. They are alive and they've got rifles."

So the boys went at them in earnest. The Japs were lying under two bushes. They had their hands up and their guns and were pretending to be asleep.

The marines surrounded the bushes and, with arms pointing, they ordered the Japs out. But the Japs were too scared to move. They just lay there, blinking.

Two Captured Japs So Frightened Of Americans They Could Not Move

EDITOR'S NOTE:—In addition to the story which appears here today we will print others which we have just received from Ernie on Okinawa. We believed we would have to wait for them. As a great reporter, a great newspaperman and a great person, he would have wanted his stories to go through, despite his tragic death.

The average Jap soldier would have come out shooting. But, the condition was a case of a different stripe. They were so petrified the marines had to go into the bushes, lift them by the shoulders and throw them out in the open.

My contribution to the capture consisted of standing on one side and looking as mean as I could.

One Jap was passed, and about 30 years old. The other was just a kid of 16 or 17, but good-sized for his age. He had on the rank of superior private and the insignia of a sergeant. They were real Japanese from Japan, not the Okinawa home guard troops.

The kids face turned a sickly white. His hands shook. His muscles in the corporal's jaw were twitching. The kid was so paralyzed he couldn't even understand the sign language.

We don't know why those two Japs didn't fight. They had good rifles and ammunition and hand grenades. They could have stood behind their bushes and hurled grenades into our tightly packed group and got themselves two dozen marines.

The marines took their arms. One marine tried to direct the corporal in handbook Japanese, but the fellow couldn't understand.

The scared kid just stood there, sweating like an ox. I guess he thought he was dead. Finally we sent them back to the regiment.

The two marines who flushed those Japs were Corp. Jack Gregg of Silver Grove, Ky., across the river from Cincinnati and Pfc. Lawrence Bennett of Port Huron, Michigan.

Okinawa was the first bite for Bennett and this was the first Jap soldier he'd ever seen. He is 30 years old, married and has a baby girl. Each home he sees a fresh grave.

Gregg, the corporal, had a metal photo holder like a cigarette case. In it were photos which we took of three Japanese movie stars. They were good looking, and everybody had to have a look.

Gregg had been through one Pacific blitz, but this was first Jap he ever took alive. As an old hand at scrimmage hunting he made sure to get the Japs' rifle.

That rifle was the envy of everybody. Later when we were sitting around, discussing the capture, the other boys tried to buy it from him out of it. Pop Taylor, the black-bearded old marine from Jackson, Utah, offered Gregg $100 for the rifle.

The answer was no. Then Taylor offered four quarts of whiskey. The answer was still no. Then he offered eight quarts. Gregg weakened a little. He said he would you get eight quarts of whiskey all right for it, he decided. So Gregge kept the rifle.

He then set out on my first two Japs. And I hope my future Japs will be as tame as these two. But I doubt it.

Letter From Florida

Lake Worth and A Baseball Game

By G. E. DESCHENE

Lake Worth, Florida.—I am delighted to see Belleville is again becoming baseball conscious. The city league will be a splendid thing for wholesome sport. Many a budding young man as well as furnish an added interest to members of the fair sex. I must tell Morley Duff and the Jane brothers I met them recently but I will pause to say a word about Lake Worth.

Lake Worth is only about 10,000 jobs about 3,000 winter tourists, but has several distinctive features.

(1)—It is nearest to the Atlantic Ocean of any mainland city in Florida. You are no doubt aware that along the east coast there are a number of cities which are double cities. That is a city on the mainland and a city on the beach, such as Palm Beach and West Palm Beach and Daytona and Daytona Beach, Miami and Miami Beach. These cities are separated by the Intaland waterway which runs with the ocean beach all the way from Jacksonville in the north to Miami in the south, a distance of about 400 miles.

This inland waterway is called by different names in various places. Just here it is called Lake Worth, and the city bears the same name. The reason the city is nearest the ocean is because the beach between Lake Worth and the ocean is very, very narrow, no room for a city like the other two. There is no building there at all except the hotels, bathing pavilions, refreshment lookers, restaurants and pool.

(2) The city is nearer the Gulf Stream than any other city because of the bulge in the coast line right here.

(3) Because No. 1 and No. 2 have resulted in the conclusion after visiting nearly all parts of Florida and now I've months here, that Lake

SECONAL FATALITIES

Seconal is one of the barbiturates. All barbiturates are sedative and hypnotic. Other barbiturates are variously called barbital, phenobarbital, amytal, nembutal, luminal, pentobarbital, phanodorm, dial, medinal, noctal, seconal, sumital, ipral, etc. So far twenty years of experience with the barbiturates in general practice my medical colleagues has never seen any of the pathological effects which sensational newspaperism ascribe to chronic poisoning by the habitual use of these drugs. But he recognizes a minor danger in which

Deaths under their influence are dis-oriented and if they get up at night they cannot navigate properly. They are apt to stumble and fall. In the past two years there come across a broken arm (Colles's fracture), a bad scalp wound, broken ribs, all of which happened in this way. Such can be obviated by a night light under the bed. It make all patients taking barbital more careful if they have to get up at night, and I make them sit down and keep one hand firmly on the edge of the bed.

In several fatalities from the use of barbiturates in the past few years the question of deliberate suicide or murder has been raised sometimes not always unjustified.

It is conceivable that a person could dose an enemy with one or two ordinary doses of such a drug and get out of the way at night and in a confused state take some more medicine, this time getting a large overdose of sedative, such as tablets or capsules remaining.

It is also conceivable that any one having access to the victim might easily persuade a person in a semi-stuporous state from one dose of the drug, to swallow a much larger dose under the suggestion that it is what the doctor ordered or what the victim needs.

Now my good colleague believes the barbiturates prevent much dreaming. Thirty years ago, he says, we cried "if we only had a drug to replace this awful morphine". Now we have such a drug, the barbiturates.

Worth had the best climate in Florida and that means a lot, for after all it is climate that counts for. The cool breeze always playing off the ocean is very tonic and in the sweltering wind, southeast all along the east coast, when the mercury is cooler in hot weather and the Gulf Stream keeps the cold weather off, of course, stores—one can walk if desired to the beach in from 5 to 10 minutes from uptown in 15 minutes from the railway station and other points, homes bordering on the lake.

The lake itself is eleven feet do not amount to much but Palm Beach only eight miles away has beach and ocean. The bathing pavilions in New York are all represented there. It was rumo to Palm Beach every 15 minutes all day for eleven cents fare.

But more about the baseball. A spring league operates along the east coast from Palm Beach south to Miami. Each city in the league West Palm Beach had each last one game when I saw them and they played off the week end. Jack Beacon's team became Jack Beacon's Cubs when Manager Jack's team came greatly heralded as the strongest aggregation and said no man was batting under .400 and that Jack Beacon will quit as a team as batting team. The game opened. Jack's Cubs batted in a succession of each batter as he came to the plate and called his batting average. Such as .400; .400; .400; .600; .500; 625; .500; .750. As Arsenic Wild Bill Lee, who "pitched that ball," Obligo me ladies and gentlemen by Gerald Griffin, and Ken Colling would open his eyes at that. And what baseball in New York are all represented there. I was rune to Palm Beach every 15 minutes all day for eleven cents fare.

BROWN STUDY

"Brown study" is synonymous with "a state of reverie," "deep contemplation," "abstraction," "absent-mindedness," "abstract meditation," or "idle and purposeless musing."

In this phrase "brown" has the old sense of "sombre" or "gloomy." It is the same meaning in which colors and shades are employed to designate a sombre or dull state of feeling; as blue devils, blue-stocking, blue-stocking, blue sister, yellow stockings, blue stocking, white feather, yellow streak, brown study, dark despair, etc.

Nonsense sense nonsense !

Although "brown study is undoubtedly of literary antiquity, the earliest known regard of its use occurs in the following quotation from Chaucer's Detection of the Use of Dice, etc., published in 1532.

"Lack of company will soon lead a man to know himself."

In "Euphues, or the Anatomy of Wit" (1579) John Lyly wrote, "of all sorts of men, scholars are most given to some brown study."

One authority suggests that "brown study" may be a perversion of Old French, "brun estudie," "best" and referring to the head bowed down as in deep thought. Another says that "brown" is used figuratively to denote "gloom," meaning "thoughtful," was in all probability derived from "dull," "brunt," "embrowned," "darkened," "obscured."

"To brown" is an old American slang verb meaning "to cheat." "Brown" is evidently connected with the phrase "to do a thing up brown," as in the cooking of roasting meat until it is well done or thoroughly.

The theory that "brown study" is merely a corruption of "drown study" has little to be said in its favor.

Slightly bewildered as they are "taxied" in a U. S. jeep, natives of Okinawa are moved to a refugee camp Marine Corps amphibious invasion craft, these away from the gunfire on the Ryukyu stronghold.

Yanks Threaten Eastern Flank On Okinawa Is.

Guam, April 26 —(AP)— U. S. 7th Division infantrymen, holding high ground near the village of Ishin, today threatened the eastern flank of the seventy-hundred Japanese defence wall on southern Okinawa.

Capture of the elevation was the first marked change in the fiery front since the beginning of the all-out attack last Thursday, when three divisions of the 24th Army Corps gained up to 800 yards.

Since then the fighting has been a slow, bloody job of digging the Japanese from caves, blockhouses and pill-boxes in their mountain, honeycombing defence belt which extends four miles south to the capital city of Naha.

Marines of the 3rd Amphibious Corps, who overran the northern three-fourths of Okinawa, with little opposition, landed yesterday on three islands between Ishigaki, Hesana and Kouri, virtually completing the American "mopping" of islets around Okinawa. Only on Yagachi was any opposition encountered. This was feeble and quickly dissipated.

BISHOP EXPRESSES CONCERN

Montreal, April 26 —(CP)— Bishop John Filton told the opening session of the 86th Annual meeting of the Montreal Diocesan Synod of England, yesterday that increased state control and a tendency to evade the law were looked upon with increasing concern.

ROBBERY POSSIBLE MOTIVE IN MURDER OF WOMAN

Prince Rupert, B.C., April 26.— (CP)—Possibility that robbery may have been the motive for the mysterious beating last weekend of Mrs. Kitty Moon, 50, has arisen with the arrest of police to find a diamond ring.

professor and veteran of Stalingrad as he cupped a squeaking field radio to his ear in a frontline command post filled with listening American soldiers.

Finally he managed to make contact with one Russian officer who spoke his approximate language from American lines. Immediately thereafter, contact failed.

Maj. Jdanov joined more than 75 British, United States and French correspondents in dashes about frontline areas, trying to run down reports of rumors that a junction was imminent.

Canadians Seal Off Spijk Pocket On Ems Estuary

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 26 — (CP Cable)—The Canadian operation sealing off the Spijk pocket along the south shore of the Ems Estuary continued overnight, with Canadian troops reaching Oudeschip at the pocket's eastern extremity, within half a mile of the North Sea coast, and Nieuwe-Schans on the Netherlands-German frontier.

(Today's communique from Allied Supreme Headquarters in Paris said Gen. Crerar's men had cleared the entire North Sea coastline of Holland as far east as the Ems Estuary.)

When the coastline north of Oudeschip is reached, the Germans will be contained in a strip three miles deep and 14 miles long. This is the last pocket of enemy resistance in all north Holland.

Across the Ems west of Oldenburg, the 4th Canadian Armored Division deepened its Rastan Canal bridgehead when a Western Canada armored reconnaissance regiment advanced 600 yards. Infantry of the division, working eastward along the canal bank, broadened the bridgehead by 1,600 yards in fighting which entailed brisk house-clearing operations.

Lamach Thrust Eastward

In the meantime, just east of the Ems river and 15 miles west of the 4th's bridgehead, the Polish 1st Armored Division consolidated west and south of Leer and launched a thrust eastward.

There was no undue resistance in the Polish sector but the Germans facing the Canadians continued to put up a stubborn fight.

In western Holland, south of the Zuider Zee, the Grebbe line was the scene of patrolling. Search for enemy pockets was proceeding in the woods west of Apeldoorn. —Pilots were investigating civilian reports that armed bands of Germans were moving through the neighborhood foraging.

A total of 868 sorties have been flown in support of the 1st Canadian Army in the last two days. Airmen claim 36 aircraft destroyed, 56 damaged — mostly aground — 53 railcars destroyed, 114 damaged; 30 motorcycles destroyed, 54 damaged; three rail cuts; two 1,000-ton ships damaged; 10 small ships destroyed, one damaged; untold horse-drawn transport and barges wrecked.

Despite the Canadian gains in freeing the North Sea coast line and the Frisian Peninsula, the task of liberating "Fortress Holland—containing Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Utrecht and The Hague — remained.

Drives 200 Miles Trying to Make Junction with U.S.

By HAL BOYLE

With the U. S. 1st Army on the Mulde River, April 26 —(AP)— Marshal Stalin's lone representative with the American forces on the Western Front drove 200 miles in a jeep yesterday trying to make a junction with Marshal Ivan S. Koney's forces moving toward a link-up with the U. S. 1st Army.

When the long ride was over—we rode through territory held by three divisions—the chief declared that Maj. Michael G. Jdanov had to console his aching back was the memory of a pleasant chat with a group of liberated Russian workers and a brief voice contact by radio with an unknown Soviet lieutenant careening toward the American lines.

FRANKFORD

22 Confirmed At Trinity Ch. By Bishop Lyons

Frankford — Trinity Church was crowded on Sunday afternoon, April 22nd, when Bishop Lyons, Lord Bishop of Ontario, conferred the rite of confirmation on twenty-two candidates from the parishes of Frankford and Stirling. The service opened with the destination of the Honor Roll by the Bishop, after which the candidates preceded the choir in procession to the singing of Onward Christian Soldiers.

The Bishop was assisted during the service by Rev. O.C. Brazill, Rector of Stirling and Frankford and Mr. Fred Houchin, Lay Reader of Stirling.

In a quiet but very forceful address, the Bishop called on all present to think and act as faithful Christians during these times that are ahead both as a nation and people.

During the offertory the choir sang the anthem, "Saviour, now the day is Ending" by Bert P. Cooper, the soloists being Miss Marjorie Reesor and Mr. Stan Fletcher. After the blessing, the choir sang the special war time vesper, "Be We Leave Thy House, O Father". A very beautiful service was brought to a close with the singing in recessional of the hymn, "Soldiers of Christ, Arise."

Christ Church and St. George's Guilds Hold Afternoon Tea

Christ Church Guild and St. George's Guild sponsored an afternoon and shower of toilet articles for overseas boxes on Tues. afternoon in the Christ Church Parish Hall, which despite the rainy weather, was a pleasing success. The admission to the affair consisted of toilet articles. During the tea, a number of women from the two guilds packed the boxes to be sent.

The guests were received by Mrs. B. J. Theobald, President of the Christ Church Guild, and were invited to the tea room by Mrs. H. Dowsett.

On the occasion the hall was arranged with flags and a profusion of spring flowers. The tea table was spread with a white cloth, centred with a silver bowl of sweet peas in dainty pastel hues and flanked by tall white tapers in silver candelabra.

Pouring the tea were Mrs. G. G. Wright, Mrs. H. Amos, Mrs. William Collyer, President of St. George's Guild and Mrs. E. Pitt. Acting as servitors were Mrs. L. Hall, Mrs. E Smith, Mrs. Arthur Simpson, Mrs. W. McFee and Mrs. W. Beare. Replenishing the table were Mrs. S. Lemmiss, Mrs. B. Button, Mrs. W. Adams and Mrs. J. Noakes.

Assisting in the packing of the boxes were Mrs. A. Dack, Mrs. F. Yome, Mrs. E. Sherry, Mrs. C. Ling, Mrs. B. Mills and Mrs. W. Ashton.

Treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. W. Kempston.

Enough articles were received during the afternoon to fill forty-six boxes.

Couple Honored By Presentation

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Tufts, Holloway, was the scene of a happy gathering recently when friends and neighbors assembled to honor their son, Elmer, and his bride who were married this month. Mrs. Tufts is the former Miss Hazel Detlor, of Stirling. An address, signed on behalf of the community by Morden Brough, Gordon Ray and Laurison Ketcheson, was read by Mrs. Percy Ray. An occasional chair with matching hassock was presented to the newlyweds by Gordon Ray and Laurison Ketcheson. Mr. Cecil Ketcheson acted as chairman.

FASHION FLASHES

Growing shorter all the time is the topper with one house concentrating on a brief topper that is but twenty-five inches in length. Seaming marks the collarless neckline and the front, and there are half-moon slit pockets.

Fabric favorite for town or country summer wear is shantung, real or rayon. A limelight green bolero jacket is worn over a charming dress that has a navy blue rayon shantung skirt and a surplice, sleeveless bodice of Roman stripe ribbon that ties in a long-end sash at the side.

Very interesting detail marks this season's cottons. A grand daytime dress in violet chambray has a curved inset of white cotton fabric at the front of the molded bodice and also edging the full skirt hem. Deep violet chambray pipes the Chinese neckline and front slit.

Current conditions of restricted yardage makes the simple, "basic frock," of increasing importance. With the aid of clever accessories, it is possible to give a new, fresh look to such dresses; this of course calls for careful planning and buying. The basic dress should be of good quality and workmanship, and so should the accessories.

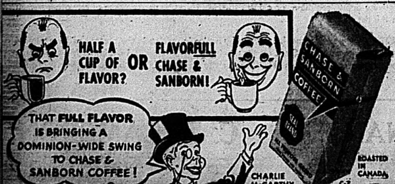
Nice choice for a recent bride was a daytime dress of white silk jersey with embroidery of tiny white sequins and gold beading on the shoulders and full cap sleeves. With it an oyster white coat with a petal collar of off-white fox.

Keep cool in summer while busy about the house. A grand house dress, is a sunback model in white pique printed with big clusters of field flowers. White eyelet ruffling trims the square neckline and the big square pockets. With a matching bolero, it's grand for marketing.

U.P.E. WOMEN'S CLUB

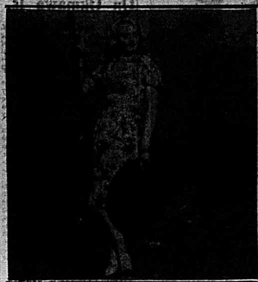
A sunshiny afternoon—a profusion of Spring flowers and a good attendance all helped to make most enjoyable — the April meeting of the Prince Edward Belleville Women's Club, held at the Y.M.C.A.

The hostesses were Mrs. W. Thomas, Mrs. Osborne, Mrs. Ackerman and Mrs. W. Barber.



Thanks for flowers sent, were received.

Community songs were led by Mrs. C. Ackerman and Mrs. Osborne. A thoughtful reading by Mrs. Thomas entitled "For Others", a humorous one by Mrs. Palmer and a timely one entitled "Moving Time" by Mrs. Ackerman were all enjoyed.



A contest "What articles one would take when moving", was conducted with Mrs. Wannamaker winning the prize. Birthday greetings were extended to Mrs. Arbuckle, and "Happy Birthday to You" sung.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses with Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Osborne pouring tea.

Exercises Are Beneficial For Stiff Knee Joints

Leslie Brooks enjoys walking in the country.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Knees, usually, aren't anything to brag about. They're useful hinges and that's all you can say for them.

Our purpose today is to remind the good looks class that the movement of their knees has much to do with grace. If one is even slightly muscle bound, one is not likely to look as if one were floating through the air. No, one is likely to clump, and clumping is not pretty.

Stiff Knees

Girls who sit all day at desks or do typing know well enough that when they lift their bodies from their chairs at office closing time their knee joints are stiff and leg muscles seem to be bored with life. That won't do. Makes one feel old. Career girls must do more walking. Muscles were designed for activity; they must have it if they are to stay young and resilient.

Walking, while delightful exercise, often isn't enough to keep ones in form and, anyhow, who has time for much footing these busy days? We suggest that ten minutes be given to a simple exercise that will not only limber the muscles of thighs and calves, but which will tend to normalize them, filling out the skinnies, slenderizing the plumpies. Stand tall, chest lifted and, while standing on the same spot, go through the movements of sprinting. Run like everything! Kick up your heels!

Walking Correctly

When knee muscles are tight, there is an impulse to let them buckle or sag forward. That habit causes the chest to flatten, the back to take on the wrong curve. One defect in posture will send the whole body out of balance, wrecking pleasing outlines, depleting the muscles and small fibres.

When walking come down on the sole and heel, with toes pointing downward. If you walk so that anyone approaching can see the soles of your shoes, you are not walking right.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, April 25.—(CP)— Ask any westerner what is the tastiest native Canadian dish and the odds are he will smack his lips and reply "Winnipeg goldeye". Men especially like them for the table is really only a matter of heating them since, by the time they reach the kitchen, they are almost completely cooked.

"There is not a great deal you can do with goldeyes to vary their preparation", said Hazel Freeman, Fisheries Department dietitian. "You can toast them and then put a little lemon and butter on them, or you can simmer them for a short time and then serve them with lemon and butter".

When it comes to other fish Miss Freeman recommends her own particular recipe for cooking fish which she has found to be a general favorite in her Dominion-wide travels:

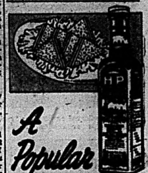
Stuffed or Planked Fish

A whole fish may be used or any desired fillets. Clean the fish or wipe the fillets with a damp cloth, wrung out in cold, salted water. Salt lightly and stuff.

Dressing—This recipe required two cups of soft bread crumbs, 1-2 can of tomato soup or 1-2 cup of cooked strained tomatoes, 1 1-2 tablespoons of melted butter or fat; 1-2 teaspoon of salt, if soup is used, or one teaspoon salt if cooked tomatoes are used; 1-2 tablespoon of onion juice and 1-4 teaspoon of poultry dressing.

Mix together and stuff whole fish, or place the stuffing between two pieces of fillets. If a plank is used pre-heat it for five minutes at 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Grease the plank or pan, place the stuffed fish on it, sprinkle with oil or melted fat, and bake in a 400 degree Fahrenheit oven until the fish is cooked. Usually from eight to ten minutes per inch thickness of fish is enough. This recipe serves six.

Tomatoes stuffed with oysters, or canned peas, and stuffed, par-boiled onions may be placed around the planked fish and baked with it. Or potato croquettes may be alternated with the stuffed tomatoes or stuffed onions. Buttered bread crumbs and grated cheese may be used to stuff the tomatoes or onions, too.



Royal Sandwich Spread

The recipe calls for two tablespoons butter, 1-2 can thick tomato soup and 1-4 pound mild Canadian cheese, grated.

Heat and stir until all the ingredients are blended. Remove from the heat and add one egg and beat until well blended. Return to the stove and cook until thick and smooth, stirring. Remove and add one cup of flaked canned salmon, removing the skin but using the oil, and three tablespoons of chopped stuffed olives. This makes about 1 1-2 cups of the spread. As the tomato gives color, any variety of canned salmon may be used in making the spread, not necessarily red salmon.

"You can leave out the butter and never notice it, and it's much more economical these rationed days", Miss Freeman said.

...abilitation officer will ...in too, and bring up his proposition indirectly. It's not the sort of thing that can be blurted right out. So he says: "What is America's biggest industry?"

The G.I., remembering his geography lessons, will probably answer readily: "agriculture."

"Right. And what is it on a farm which puts in the most work of cultivation, in hours of labor, volume of work, and results gained? Not horses, not mules, not tractors—but earthworms."

You see why the officer had to approach the subject delicately, and why even then he is liable to get horselaugh? Yet the officer is telling the literal truth. And after the soldier learns all the facts, he is likely to become enthusiastic about "harnessing earthworms," the newest postwar industry.

He will learn among other things, that a million dollars are not needed; $25 will do nicely for a start.

Actually, there is nothing new about the knowledge that earthworms are essential to agriculture. Aristotle, 2000 years ago called them "the intestines of the earth." Gilbert White, noted English naturalist of the seventeenth century, wrote: "Without earthworms, the earth would soon become cold, hard bound, sterile." Darwin wrote an entire book about the work and habits of earthworms. And, contemplating the green fields of England which thrive on the chemistry of these blind wigglers, he commented: "It may be doubted if there are any other animals which have played so important a part in the history of the world." Nathaniel S. Shaler, noted Harvard Geologist, aptly called the earth's thin layer of humus-bearing topsoil "the placenta of life" — and humus is virtually a copyrighted product of the earthworm.

What is new about earthworm culture is the idea of mass-producing them so that they can be "planted" where their admittedly "magic qualities" can make poor soil fertile and good soil prolific.

Most farmers realize that earthworms are "helpful." They attribute this to the fact that worms, by aerating the soil, make it more porous and absorbent. They seldom understand that this is only a minor function of earthworms. For, while they are making mechanical scratches in the surface of their fields with horsedrawn plow or tractor, below the surface millions of scientists are at work, converting organic and mineral raw materials into rich plant food.

Yes, as in so many "new" discoveries, only the idea is new. It all started when, as a combat runner in 1918, I was coming back from the front line and saw an ancient French peasant sweeping the earth beside a stone wall. I asked him why he was doing that. With my gestures, he replied:

"Le Bon Dieu knows how to make the good earth and he has given his secret to the earthworms. They work in great numbers, and it is the finest earth there is. I take it home for my choicest flowers."

Nearly 30 years later, hoping to make something grow in my semi-desert property in the San Fernando Valley at Roscoe, Cal. I turned a shoveful of earth at the base of a cactus plan. An earthworm came up with the dry-as-dust ground. It was pale, anemic, but still wiggling—still trying "to make the good earth."

That worm started me thinking—and acting. Today the sparse and puny home site at Roscoe has become a place of tropically-luxuriant flowers, shrubs and ornamentals, green lawns, berries, grapes, figs, plums, peaches, apricots and olives. And all because a few million earthworms helped me.

I quickly discovered that, instead of one overworked earthworm to a spadeful of soil, hundreds and thousands would grow and go to work if they liked the food and moisture conditions. So I started an "earthworm research farm" in a wooden box—and from it literally transplanted the garden spot which replaced the desert.

Of course, I could have ignored earthworms except as fish-bait, and waited. Nature might eventually have laid down topsoil at the standard rate of 1000 years to an inch.

And in a few thousand years Roscoe would have been ready for planting. But, preferring quicker action, I found it in earthworms. For, in the chemical and mechanical laboratory which is an earthworm's insides are combined all the processes of quick topsoil building.

The earthworm swallows great quantities of earth, with all that it contains in the way of minerals, vegetables remains, animal residue, bacteria and microscopic life. Like a powerful mill the worm's gizzard, bring grains of sand for millstones, grind and mix these materials. And abundant secretions are poured in to exert solvent and chemical actions. In its journey through the worm's long stomach, animal hormones are added. Finally, it is ejected inside the earth and on the surface in the form of familiar "worm castings."

A crumbly finely-conditioned topsoil is thus manufactured — richly endowed with all the elements of plant nutrition in water-soluble form—the form in which it is "edible to plants.

Some idea of the concentration of earth worms in soil containing sufficient nourishment for them to thrive may be gained from official statistics. "If your soil is suitable," says Prof. S. O. Heiberg, New York State College of Forestry, "there may be more than two-and-a-half million per acre, weighing 1400 pounds. That means more pounds of earthworms in your employment than all domestic animals put together." Another estimate placed the total weight of earthworms in the United States at more than ten times that of our present-day population.

Some idea of the production of fertile soil by two-and-a-half million earthworms to the acre may be gained from the fact that in England where concentrations range from 35,000 to 50,000 worms an acre, some ten tons of humus is estimated to be produced annually on each acre by earthworms.

Corroborative of my own experience of "desert into garden" are other experiment. One test, using boxes of soil containing earthworms compared with wormless boxes, showed the following percentages in favor of the former: Rye, 64 per cent; potatoes, 136 per cent vetch, 140 per cent; peas, 300 per cent; rape seed, 736 per cent.

A California experimenter planted three boxes of lawn grass. One contained good native soil and no earthworms; the second contained the same soil, with worms living and working in it; the third was of pure earthworm castings. After 60 days' growth, the grass was cut. The box with native soil and earthworms yielded 271 per cent more than the wormless earth, but the crop of the box containing the worm-cast soil was 463 per cent higher.

Granted that overwhelming evidence proves earthworms to be the farmer's best friends—how can the worm be "harnessed"? Such knowledge is the stock in trade of this newest of all industries. And it is simplicity itself. All that is needed is $6.00 to $25 in cash, a hammer, saw, nails, a few pieces of lumber and a few odd boxes. Earthworms or earthworm eggs, the latter worth $10 per 1000, planted in moist earth mixed with earthworm food, yield a rich harvest at regular 21-day intervals. The eggs, even the worms themselves, can be shipped parcel post to customers who need to enrich their soil with "squirming scientists."

An earthworm food consists of just about anything for which there is no other use—garbage, tea and coffee grounds, vegetable peelings, and manure.

On such things earthworms grow and multiply by the thousandfold. It is a fascinating and profitable business and hobby. True, you can't make a pet of an earthworm—for he is too busy making mankind rich!

Serious Disease Threatens Elm Trees

A virulent disease is threatening to destroy one of the most beautiful of Canada's ornamental trees, the elm, the Dominion Department of Agriculture has announced. Unless this infection, known as the Dutch elm disease, is promptly controlled it may do untold damage to elms of which the annual commercial value ranks fourth among Canadian hardwoods. Proposed control measures are to cut down all elms known to be infected.

Dutch elm disease was first observed in The Netherlands in 1919 and later did great destruction in Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Norway and England. It was first reported in the United States in 1930. To prevent its entrance to the Dominion, Canada has prohibited the importation of all kinds of elms and of elm logs for many years. As early as 1934, the Dominion Department of Agriculture issued a pamphlet describing the symptoms of the disease and calling on the public to report its presence. Not until last fall was Dutch elm disease discovered in Canada where it has infected elms in the region of Lake St. Peter, an expansion of the St. Lawrence, about 50 miles below Montreal. The Department says there may now be other centres of infection throughout Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces.

The disease is caused by a fungus usually distributed by its sticky spore adhering to certain kinds of elm bark beetles. Moving from tree to tree, these beetles spread the contagion from infected to healthy trees.

The only method of controlling the disease is to cut down the infected trees and burn their bark. Such an extreme and expensive method is justifiable where there is a reasonable hope of eliminating the disease entirely or at least of confining it to a small area.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture is collaborating with the Quebec Department of Lands and Forests and the Ontario Departments of Agriculture and Lands and Forests in an intensive drive to check this disease and, if possible, to eradicate it by destroying all infected trees.

To the extent that funds and staff are available, it is proposed to examine thoroughly all elms within the region of the present outbreak and in other susceptible areas in Eastern Canada where the elm is an important shade tree.

Spiritualists Find An Obliging Ghost

Crawley, England, April 25 (CP)—A noisy ghost apologized and promised never again to practise weirdness on the living after eight spiritualists (and mind you, this is their story) visited a haunted house near this Sussex town.

The eight believe that as a result of their jaunt they not only relieved fears of the living occupants of the house but freed the spirit of a person who committed suicide there "several hundred years ago."

A. Sanderson of Chichester, one of the eight Sussex spiritualists, said that for some time the house occupants, "who are most grateful for what we have been able to do," were terrified through furniture being moved and ghostly footsteps in the dead of night."

Sanderson and his fellows first heard of the trouble during a seance held some miles from the spot.

"A strange voice told the circle it was earthbound and wanted to be freed," he said. "Inquiries led us to believe the voice was responsible for the manifestations at the Crawley house."

The occupants agreed to the holding of a seance in the house, Sanderson said, and "about half an hour after we had turned out the lights I was conscious of the spirit's presence."

"My body tingled with vibrations and the other persons present experienced the same thing. There was, however, nothing frightening. Presently the vibrations faded and later the medium said the spirit had apologized for causing trouble to the people at the house but had done so only to attract attention of living contacts.

"It wanted to progress in other spheres and volunteered never to trouble the living again."

Spruce Budworm Being Combatted By Entomologists

Experts of the Dominion Entomological Parasite Laboratory here will bend their efforts with those of other Canadian entomologists in a war against the spruce budworm that has killed approximately 250 million cords of red spruce and balsam in Canada during the last 30 years.

Experiments will take place, or are taking place in the Laboratory here in an effort to discover a parasite which will combat the budworm that is proving a deadly menace to Canada's forests. Later, an official said today, two men will be sent to British Columbia to aid in the discovery of the needed parasite.

A new insect laboratory is being built at Sault Ste. Marie at a cost of $800,000 for the work of curbing the growth and devastation of forest insects. It will be one of the most modern in equipment and staffing in the world.

Not Foreign Insect.

The spruce budworm, entomologists say, is not a new thing nor a foreign insect. Since 1909 it has launched three major attacks on Canadian forests. The first hit forests in Eastern Canada from 1909 to 1919. The second came in 1924 and ended in 1931 and the third started in 1935 and reached its peak in 1944 and is still present.

The budworm injures balsam when the caterpillars feed upon the foliage. The adult insect is a small moth which appears in the first few days of July and during the following months lay their eggs on the needles of balsam and spruce.

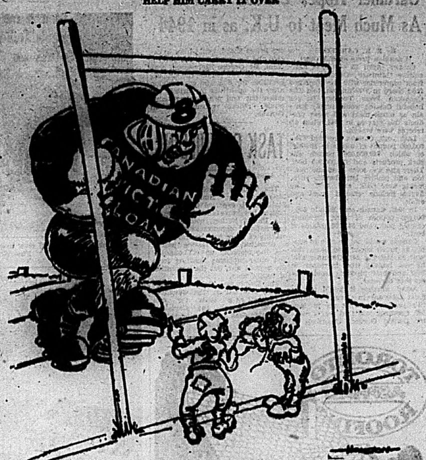
Hatch in Week.

The caterpillars hatch from in about a week and at once spin tiny silken cases in crevices on the twigs near the buds, under which they pass the winter. In the following Spring about the time the balsam buds are bursting, the caterpillars emerge from the cases and feed upon the new foliage. The feeding period lasts from three to five weeks after which the caterpillar changes to pupae within loose cocoons of silk spun in the foliage in which they have been feeding.

After ten days the moths appear from the pupae and lay eggs for the next generation.

Use of Chemicals.

One method for combatting the worm is the use of chemicals. Dusting forests with calcium arsenate from planes was used at one time but was not found to be effective. Another experiment was forest spraying with a mixture of D.D.T., a new insecticide. This was found effective but its only drawback was that it killed other insect life as well as the budworm.



Forest management is favored by entomologists as the answer to the problem. A type of management that calls for the removal of balsam as soon as it becomes of commercial sizes would make forests as a whole much less liable to attack.

An experimental area on which forest management aimed at preventing or minimizing spruce budworm damage has been set up on the Green River in northern New Brunswick.

An Urgent Message from

GEORGE DREW

JUNE 4th is Election Day for the members of our armed forces overseas from Ontario, as it is here at home. The arrangements which have been made provide ample time for the overseas vote to be taken. Special Returning Officers are already overseas.

Something more, however, must be done if our voters overseas are to know why an Ontario election was forced upon us at this time.

I appeal to each one of you who read this message to write NOW by airmail. Give our men and women overseas all the information you can and be sure to tell them the correct name of the Provincial Riding in which they are entitled to vote, and the name of the candidate. This is of the utmost importance because so many of them have never voted before and the difference between the names and boundaries of Provincial and Dominion Ridings make it doubly necessary that you be sure to give them the exact name of the Riding in which they are entitled to cast their ballot on June 4th.

If you are in doubt as to any details please call the Progressive Conservative Office in your locality and get the necessary information without delay.

Be sure to send this air mail today:

Gardiner Hopes Canada Will Sh As Much Meat to U.K. as in 1944

By R. W. CARRUTHERS
[Canadian Press Staff Writer]

Ottawa, April 26 —(CP)— Agriculture Minister Gardiner, back from conference with the combined food board in Washington, told The Canadian Press Tuesday he was hopeful Canada would supply Britain as much meat and meat products this year as in 1944, when all records were broken.

Last year, Canada provided 974,-000,000 pounds of meats to Britain, of which 762,000,000 pounds was pork products and 132,000,000 beef. There also was some lamb and mutton and poultry but the big shipments were pork and beef. The figure includes canned meat and offals.

In 1943, Canada sent Britain 608,-000,000 pounds of pork, including canned pork and 840,000 pounds of beef.

Canada would not be able to supply as much bacon and hams this year as last but Mr. Gardiner said he was hopeful the increases in beef and beef products would offset that decrease.

Asked whether it would require meat rationing in Canada to bring this year's shipments up to last, Mr. Gardiner said that was a matter for Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Prices Board, would have to decide and recommend to the government. Mr. Gordon likely would have to consider two points—the supplies available for domestic consumption after the quantities for Britain are taken out and whether rationing would reduce consumption in Canada.

TASK OF BUILDING

The Truman speech, as well as utterances by Miss Secretary Stettinius, is expected to stress the limited but important objectives of the United Nations conference of international organization, not the making of peace but the framing of a constitution for lasting peace; not the mopping up of Axovanced and other problems resulting from present war, but the prevention of future wars.

The Dumbarton Oaks draft proposals, accepted by the Canadian parliament as a basis for discussion on which the Canadian delegation has been instructed to proceed, aim "at the objective through two related approaches:

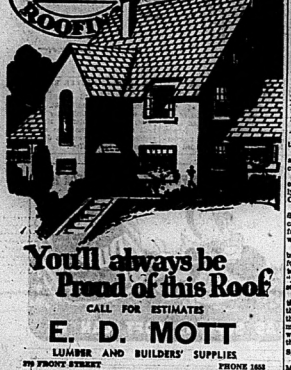
1. By creating arrangements for automatic appliion of force in cases of aggression.

2. By creating new and improved economic agencies to remove underlying war causes.

Calls For Brave Start.

On the eve of the meeting, State Secretary Stettinius last night called for a brave start toward fashioning "the enduring peace the world so hopes for."

His appeal, on a round-the-world broadcast, followed disclosure that four sponsoring powers have agreed to support specific proposals for "justice and international law" in settling disputes between nations.



Mr. Stettinius told the people of the world and representatives of the 46 nations assembled here that the "beginning we are going to make here at San Francisco" is onward "sure and just peace—peace that may last."

Specific Problems Out.

Earlier in the day Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Prime Minister Smuts of South Africa emphasized that the conference has nothing to do with the specific problems of the present war.

Mr. King told Canadian correspondents "there is a clear line of demarcation as between what concerns this conference and what will concern the peace conferences which will settle the immediate problems of the next five or 10 years."

Prime Minister Smuts said the controversial Polish question was "a side issue" and added that there was a temptation to magnify minor issues. The great objective of the conference was "to keep the great powers together."

Valiant Army Doctor Awarded George Cross

London, April 26 (CP) — Capt. J. R. O. Thompson of Claygate, Surrey, who made a lone effort to save a helpless patient in a bombed hospital ship has been awarded the George Cross posthumously, it has been announced.

The 38-year-old army doctor aboard the 2,700-ton hospital ship St. David organized rescue parties when the vessel was repeatedly hit by German bombs 20 miles at sea off Anzio. Then when the ship was about to sink, he returned aboard to a ward trying to save one patient trapped below.

"By his efforts," said the citation to his award, "the lives of all but one helpless case in this ward were saved, as well as those of many walking cases from the other wards.

"It is presumed that Captain Thompson went down with his ship."

Only a few weeks before his death, he wrote his wife: "I seem to be the soldier to whom nothing ever happens."

6 Billion Pounds British Outlay In Year Ended

London, April 26 — (CP)—Britain's expenditures in the fiscal year just ended exceeded £6,000,000,000 ($27,000,000,000) for the first time in her history, Sir John Anderson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, reported Tuesday.

This amount was £196,000,000 more than the budget estimate for the year, he said, and new estimates "may possibly have to be superseded before the year is out."

A significant thing, however, he said, was that the proportion met out of revenue was 36 per cent, higher than in any previous year.

Britain's expenditure on the armed services during the 5 1/3 years of war up to March 31 last was £27,-500,000,000 ($123,300,000,000), Sir John said.

Of this total £13,300,000,000 or roughly 49 per cent was met out of current revenue.

Britain's inland revenue for last year exceeded the estimated record figure of £2,000,000,000 by 20,000,-000.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said the rate of taxation on excess profits will not be reduced this year.

At the end of the war the internal debt of Great Britain will be more than 25 times as great as it was at the end of the Napoleonic wars and more than three times as great as at the end of the last war, the Chancellor said.

Warns Against Offer of Sanctuary To Nazi War Criminals

Washington, April 25 (AP) — A warning to neutral countries against offering sanctuary to perpetrators of German war atrocities came from the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday.

The committee approved for floor consideration a resolution making it United States policy to go into neutral countries, regardless of treaties, to pursue and capture enemy war criminals.

The resolution must be approved by both branches of Congress. It has not the force of law but serves merely as a Congressional expression to the United States government.

Nazi Radio Tells Of 'Hunting Commando' Armored Nazi Units

London, April 26 (CP) — Disintegration of some German forces into "hunting commando" armored units led by young officers who have received Hitler's highest decorations was announced Tuesday by the southern circuit of the German radio.

The broadcast declared each unit strikes "with lightning speed against advanced tank spearheads of British and Americans, often appearing within 24 hours on sectors 60 miles apart."

"Their characteristic mode of attack," the broadcast added, "is the assault on flanks of Anglo-American tank columns, where they inflict heavy losses on communications, and cut supplies."

Scots Find Life Takes Heavy Toll In Cardiac Trouble

Edinburgh, April 26 (CP) — The pace of modern life is proving too much for the Scots, says J. O. Kyd, registrar-general for Scotland.

Medical science is winning its fight against disease and infections which were a scourge to past generations, he said. Mentally and physically the Scottish people were healthier than at any previous time.

But while the number of deaths in Scotland during 1944 from infections and diseases was the smallest on record, deaths from heart trouble numbered 13,901—nearly twice as many as in 1927.

"These figures are an indication, I think, of the pace at which we are living nowadays," said Mr. Kyd.

"Every year I have taken note of the number of deaths from what are termed the principal causes, and the first one now always takes premier place.

"Nearly one-quarter of the deaths in Scotland are due to heart diseases and about one-seventh to cancer."

Reds Address Shells To Offices of Hitler, Goering and Goebbels

Moscow, April 26 (AP) — Russian artillerymen in Berlin, finding copies of a capital newspaper showing pictures of the offices of Hitler, Goering and Goebbels, "addressed" their shells to these locations, a front-line correspondent said on Tuesday.

Some were designated "Leipzigstrasse Nos. 3 to 7 for Minister of Aviation Goering," and then fired in boxes they would do somewhere near the mark.

Another was addressed "Wilhelmstrasse Nos. 8 to 9 for Minister Goebbels," and one of the biggest was sent marked "for the general staff, Koenigsplatz, No. 6."

Montgomery in 1915 Had Narrow Escape From Burial as 'Dead'

London, April 26 (CP — A young army officer named Bernard Montgomery was seriously wounded while leading a charge, sword in hand, in France in 1915, but after being certified dead was placed in a grave. But Britain's most colorful field marshal-to-be just as the grave was about to be filled, cracked a finger to prove he was alive.

This is one of the many human scoffs told in "Montgomery," a book to be published shortly by Lady Montgomery, his 86-year-old mother.

REDS LIBERATE 3,662 BRITONS

London, April 26 (Reuters)—Sir James Grigg, War Secretary, said in the House of Commons that 3,662 British Commonwealth prisoners of war have been liberated by the Russians, and of these 2,262 have sailed for home from Odessa.

"The number liberated from northwest Europe is about 20,000, of whom 20,000 have reached Britain, he said. He said 6,400 of these are from the Dominions.

Sir James added that the bulk of Allied prisoners are in Germany.

OTT IS EXCITED OVER PITCHING OFROOKIEHURLER

Throws Five-Hitter Against Phillies to Win His Second Start

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Everytime Mel Ott opens his locker it's a new record in the National League so you can't blame the 36-year-old New York Giants manager for being more excited today about a five-hitter thrown by a rookie pitcher than his first two home runs of the season.

Pitching was the big question mark in the Giants' hopes for a first division berth and the neat job done against the Phillies yesterday by a 20-year-old Andy (Swede) Hansen was encouraging to Ott.

Two years ago Hansen was pitching for a high school nine at Lake Worth, Fla. But now he ranks right behind Bill Voiselle and Van Mungo in the Giants' plans with two straigh victories to his credit.

Although the tall, loose-jointed blond stil has to be tested by the more powerful western clubs his 5-2 decision over the Phils tabbed him as one to watch.

Ott's two-round trippers, off Ken Raffensberger each with a man on, accounted for all but one of the New York scores and were the 490th and 491st of his 20-year career.

Although only two games were played of the six scheduled due to bad weather, the circuit clout was the story in each.

Elmer (Butch) Nieman, who seems to have acquired an exciting habit of hitting for all four in the ninth inning, broke up another game as the Boston Braves sank Brooklyn, 8-6.

Nieman's clout came with two on and one out in the last of the ninth after the Braves had scored once to cut the Brooks' margin to 6-5.

The entire American League slate was washed out where the only news was transfer of a June 13 home game with Washington to April 29 make a Sunday double-header.

Reporting somewhat late for spring training, McCabe has been engaged at commercial fishing lately in order to maintain physical fitness. Weighing 205 pounds and standing six foot, five and one-half inches, elongated Ralph won six and lost six games for an earned run average of 3.69 runs per game during the 1944 season with the Senators. Prior to playing with the Albany Club Ralph McCabe was with the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League.

ALLIES TO HOLD GERMAN OFFICERS, N.C.O.'S WHILE ANY GUERILLA WAR EXISTS

London, April 25. (CP)— Prime Minister Churchill disclosed in the House of Commons Tuesday that the Allies intend to keep all German commissioned and non-commissioned officers and known Nazis of lesser rank interned while any guerilla warfare exists in Germany.

Nearly one-third of the German prisoners in British camps have been classified as 'ardent Nazis", who are segregated as soon as discovered, War Secretary Grigg said. He said there are 196,000 German prisoners in Britain.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Lighter Vein.

An Aberdonian walked into a high-class restaurant, dined well, and, paying his cheque, pushed a penny toward the efficient waitress.

She looked at the picayune tip, registered dissatisfaction. "Even the champion miser of Aberdeen tips us tuppence when he eats here," she declared.

McCabe Leaves.

Sometime Friday Ralph (Highpockets) McCabe will entrain for Albany, N.Y., to commence spring training with the Albany "Senators" of the class "A" Eastern League. McCabe was with the Senators last year when they finished second in the league standing. Held-up by National Selective Service clearing into the United States, McCabe is three weeks behind in reporting, but may have time to get in some good workouts before the Eastern League opens on May 2nd. Armed with his N.S.S. release Ralph dropped in to say au revoir this a.m.

Last season McCabe appeared in 21 games with the Senators. He pitched 89 innings during which time 369 opposition batters faced him. They scored 46 runs and made 84 hits, the latter averaging but four hits per game pitched. The opposition clubs had an earned run average of 3.69 off Ralph's deliveries. He issued 39 bases on balls during the season of 1944 and struck out 47 in 21 games. At the end of the regular season his won and lost column were even at six each for a .500 pitching average.

McCabe started nine games to complete three and he finished five others as a relief hurler. Offensively Ralph's turn at bat wasn't exactly along the lines of Babe Ruth or Lou Boudreau, as he only made four hits all season, one being a double. He was credited with a brace of sacrifices and had two in the runs-batted-in column for a year's batting average of .118. However, he has been working as a commercial fisherman, hauling in ladened nets of fish and claims to be in fine physical condition. "I hope to better my .500 pitching mark this year. After all three of last year's Senators are with the Pirates now and that's really something to shoot at in 1945," comented McCabe before leaving.

Welcome Home, Pal.

'Tis said "coming events cast their shadows before them." If so, football, baseball and hockey are in for a revival in the Central Ontario zone. Why? Well, no less a personage than Cecil Perdue is back at the sports desk of the Peterborough Examiner today as sports editor, taking the place of the late Fred D. Craig. Cec. was with the Examiner for several years prior to going off to the wars, where he gained the rank of sergeant. Now back again as sports editor and columnist on the Examiner, "Welcome back fella." A keen observer of sports, Cec's witty comments will again delight the Peterborough fans hearts and no doubt the future will again see the revival of sports competition between Belleville and Peterborough.

However, since Cec left the Liftlock City nearly five years ago, senior football, baseball, O.H.A. hockey and other such top-ranking sports have vanquished from the sports realm of Peterborough. Who knows but the return of Mr. Perdue may also include the revival of senior team competitive sports along the shores of his beloved Otonabee River. The fact baseball is coming back in that city is one indication that sport follows Cec. And while on that particular subject something new in the annals of baseball is being mooted up and down the old Central Ontario area in the suggestion of a Central or Eastern Ontario Baseball Association to organise and govern its own destinies aside and apart from the Ontario Baseball Association. No doubt Cec Perdue would be one of the first to realise the value of such a powerful association for the sponsorship of baseball in Eastern Ontario to govern the game from the minor series right up the ladder.

Remember When.

Hold out Joe DiMaggio surrendered unconditionally to the late Col. Jacob Rupert, owner of the New York Yankees, two years ago today, signing a $25,000 contract when Rupert told him to "go ahead and sign it." Belligerent DiMaggio was almost as meek as he confessed he had not got a bonus either. Now he is in military hospital in Atlantic City after serving with the American army, in the South Pacific.

No Holds Barred.

Just what Ivan Rasputin will look like minus his Russian beard doubtless will add no end of interest to tonight's main bout between the "Beardless Muscovite" and Toar Morgan, who wrestled himself into local favor by winning over Nanjo Singh last week. Also of interest tonight will be the appearance of the said Singh in a semi-final spot. The turbulent Hindoo may resent Promoter Tunney's actions of placing him second fiddle to Morgan and Rasputin with the result it wouldn't be logical to predict just what may happen before the evenings curtain is finally rung down.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(CP Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 25 — (CP)—What is there about hockey "as she is played today," that develops boxing stars? Within two years, two rising junior puck stars have begun to notch a career in the squared circle —Winnipeg's Don Raleigh and Yves Nadon of Montreal.

Nadon, a goaltender in the Montreal junior league who played with Buffalo Bisons this past winter, took to the mitts seriously and has a fair ring record. Now Raleigh, a former Monarchs junior who is in the army made his debut as a boxer the other night at Fort Garry — and it was a successful one. Raleigh TKO'd his opponent in the second round of their bout.

Not Raleigh Really!

Generally believed to be the youngest player to break into pro ranks, Raleigh was only 17 when he made his debut with New York Rangers late in October, 1943. But Tony (Winnipeg Tribune) Allan points out that Blanchard (Duke) Keats was even more of a hockey prodigy.

Born in Montreal, Keats learned his hockey in North Bay and played in the old Cobalt Mining League when he was 14. Two years later he turned pro with Toronto Blue Shirts of the National Hockey Association. In 1915 — still with the Blue Shirts —Keats joined the army and thence started a controversy that rang similar to the Turk Broda and Bill Ezinicki affairs.

Keats joined the 228th Battalion which had an entry in the N.H.A., and the soldiers claimed him as their property . . . The loop ruled that he still belonged to the Blue Shirts. On the eve of the final game between the two teams, Keats was thrown into the guard house and it was only after every Toronto paper published the yarn that he was released in time to play against his soldier mates.

After the war he played amateur hockey in Edmonton and then landed with Boston Bruins and later Detroit Cougars. Later he was traded to Chihawks, played a season with Tulsa Oilers and wound up as coach of Edmonton Eskimos in the revived Western Canada Hockey League in 1932-33.

That is quite a career, and was fittingly climaxed when Frank Patrick said of him that he possesed more hockey grey matter than any man who ever played the game.

St. Boniface's Bruneteau:

The Manitoba city of St. Boniface is mighty proud of one of its hockey products, though the Detroit Red Wings finally dropped the Stanley Cup to Toronto after a hard-fought series. He is Eddie Bruneteau, brother of Modere, and former Quebec Aces' star.

Two of the three games that Detroit was able to win from Leafs in the final series, were done with the help of goals by the younger Bruneteau. He fired the equalizer in the fourth tilt that Wings won 5-3 and scored the winner in the sixth that went 1-0.

Ottawa Glebes won the Dominion junior basketball championship at Moncton last night by defeating Moncton Hubs 50-35 in the final game of their two-game total-point series. Glebes won the round 96-75.

Throwing up a stiff zone defence system of play which at times baffled their opponents, Glebes established an early lead in the game and were never headed although the Moncton juniors set a terrific pace in the dying minutes of the game. Erratic shooting foiled many dangerous Moncton sallies.

Officials of Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens last night asked the Canadian Hockey Association to establish the arena as the permanent home of annual Memorial Cup finals and it was proposed to create a Junior Hall of Fame in the rink, providing the Association granted permission.

Vancouver Lauries scored a one-sided 57-40 victory over Raymond Union Jacks to win the Western Canada senior men's basketball championship at Vancouver.

The win was the third straight for Vancouver in the scheduled best-of-five series. Lauries now meet St. Catharines, Ont., Merritton-Hayes, the Eastern Canadian champions, here early in May in the best-of-seven Dominion finals.

Lauries trounced Raymond, perennial titleholders, 72-42 in the 1st game of the western series here last Saturday night and eked out a 35-34 victory Monday night.

"C·C·M·'s are Good as Ever . . . and That's 'Plenty' Good"

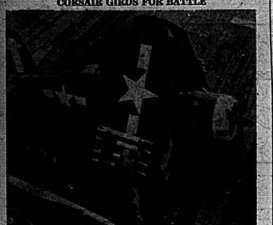
● For over 45 years C.C.M. designers and artisans have striven constantly to improve the well-known long life and easy riding qualities of C.C.M. Bicycles.

Then came the war and government restrictions on critical materials.

But C.C.M. bicycles were changed only temporarily in appearance—when chrome plating and colored enamels were off—C.C.M. standards of high quality steels and precise workmanship were never lowered.

That is why over 2,000 C.C.M. dealers across Canada have continued to say "C.C.M.'s are good as ever—and that's 'plenty' good."

So, if you need a bicycle, and can qualify as an essential user under the Voluntary Bicycle Rationing Plan operated by the manufacturers and bicycle dealers of Canada in co-operation with the "W.P.T.B." (Wartime Prices and Trade Board), buy a C.C.M. You may just as well enjoy C.C.M. quality, long life and easy riding comfort.



An early visit to a C.C.M. dealer will expedite the delivery of a bicycle to you this spring if your need is essential.

MEMORIAL CUP WON BY ST. MIKES OVER MOOSE JAW

Majors Score 7-2 Victory With Troopers Near the Breaking Point at End

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) — The city today toasted its second championship hockey team of the season as Toronto St. Michael's College Majors placed the Memorial Cup and Dominion junior hockey title beside the Stanley Cup won Sunday by Toronto Maple Leafs.

Swarming all over coach Roy Bentley's western Canada champion Moose Jaw Canucks, Majors last night recorded a clean-cut 7-3 victory in the fifth game of the best-of-seven final series to capture the trophy for the second time in 11 years. The 14th Ontario team to hold it since it was donated by the Ontario Hockey Association in 1919, Majors won the first game 8-5, dropped the second 8-3, then won the third and fourth 5-3 and 4-3.

Coach Joe Primeau's eastern representatives struck for two goals after a futile western flurry early in the first period. After that the issue was never in doubt. They added three more in the second before Bert Olmstead climaxed a two-minute power play with a goal in the last minute.

Clarence Marquess flicked a pass from Frank Dugan-Bill Ashbrook fast goalie Pat Boehmer for the second Moose Jaw goal shortly after the third period opened and Gus Mortson and Johnny McCormack added insurance tallies later in the session.

Turik Scores Two

Frank Turik, 19-year-old native of Trail, B.C., and veteran of last year Memorial Cup finalists, Reiter opened the scoring midway in the first period when he blasted his own rebound past goalie Bev Bentley, who added a second goal in the 3rd period.

Leo Gravelle, a three-goal producer for Majors, tallied on a major penalty shot late in the first period. The others, one on a solo effort 34 seconds after the face-off and the other on a passing play with McCormack, came in the 2nd period.

St. Mikes drew 12 of the 17 penalties handed out in the game while threatening to start a fight as tempers neared the exploding point in the third period.

Students at the college joined in celebration of the victory. Today they had a holiday.

Primeau said:

Coach Bentley said he was disappointed Canucks had failed to capitalize on more of their scoring opportunities.

HAPPY CHANDLER COMMISSIONER OF ALL BASEBALL

Senator From Kentucky Will Receive $50,000 a Year for Seven Years

By HAROLD HARRISON

Cleveland, O., April 26 — (AP) — The job of guiding organized baseball through the remainder of the war period and handling the myriad problems expected to pop up when its conflict ends has been placed on the shoulders of A. B. (Happy) Chandler, 46-year-old United States Senator from Kentucky.

Representatives of the 16 major league teams yesterday chose Chandler high commissioner of the game. His selection, announced as unanimous, ended a five-months search for a successor to Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who died last Nov. 25.

Announcement of Chandler's appointment was accompanied by word from the Senator, once a minor league player, that he would accept and would be "immediately available."

The job pays $50,000 a year and Chandler was signed for a seven-year term.

Chandler was one of the first to call attention to the many problems he may be called on to face within the next few months. He and a host of players return from military service to resume baseball next season.

In Washington, he expressed belief the game faces "another trying period" after the war and added, "We'll keep it as close world-wide as we can."

Chandler's appointment generally was considered a personal triumph for Larry MacPhail of the New York Yankees, one of the first to urge selection of the Kentuckian.

JORGE TORRES' HOMER HELPS TO BEAT LEAFS

Jersey City Has Now Won Five Straight Contests in Loop

By The Associated Press

Jorge Torres' home run and Jim Goodwin's relief pitching combined yesterday to give the undefeated Jersey City Little Giants their fifth straight win in the International League, a 3-1 triumph over Toronto.

The round-tripper came in the 7th inning with the starting pitcher Frank Rosso on base and wiped out a 1-0 Toronto advantage. Goodwin, a rookie southpaw, came to Rosso's rescue in the ninth when the Leafs loaded the sacks with one out.

Goodwin stopped the Leafs cold.

The defeat was a tough one for Alex Mustakas Martin, who went the route for the Leafs, yielding 7 hits.

Home runs by Mike Portney and Bill Sabe, accounting for five runs, helped Portney's best Sunday, 7-6 as Frank Miller chalked up his 2nd win of the season. Portney, also playing in his first game, connected for the circuit with one on in the second. Sabe blasted his with two on in the third.

The Montreal-Syracuse and Buffalo-Baltimore games were rained out.

They call them thrift stamps, and you can redeem them for sets of china, or lamps, or any number of a hundred things, she said.

Q. ma, you better be careful about giving your money to get things free, I said. Wait till you hear what happened to me today around 44 Mommy White's stationerny candy store. There's a lot of little bags in the window with candy in them, and there's a sign saying, Grab Bag, 25 Cents, a Prize Free in Every Bag, and the bags are filled with the same stuff you can pretty near see through but not quite, so I went in and bought one and the Leafs loaded the sacks with one out. Goodwin stopped the Leafs cold.

Smelts Running At Point Traverse

Point Traverse, April 26. —Many local commercial fishermen have recently harvested large numbers of smelts. The manner in which these small European food fish were caught was unusual. A heavy rain was falling in shorward, cast thousands of smelts upon the shore. Many of the fishermen, Affording themselves the opportunity, scooped up the fish as fast as the waves left them stranded upon the beach.

The smelt is increasing in great numbers in Lake Ontario, local fishermen state. The fishing industry is ready sale for all they can catch in their nets and fair prices are realized.

Wood Ducks

A beautiful pair of adult wood ducks are reported to be disporting about near the fishing colony. It is believed they are nesting near the lake. The wood duck, unlike another duck builds its nest in the hollow of some broken or decayed tree. The numbers are fast decreasing.

Commercial fishermen operating out of this colony, report that catches of herring taken from lake waters are fair, but lifts of white fish are very light. Many species of trout are also light. High winds and rough operations considerable last week.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 665
By SAM GORDON
The Times

Now, see here, Private Hargrove. To unblock in bridge does not mean to take your partner's head off," it means to get out of the way; to get rid of something that is obstructing traffic.

Close the road in this deal:

You are declarer in the south at a contract or three no-trump. The opening lead from west is the heart deck. Where do you go from there? Look out below.

You could make tricks. You see seven cinches; three top hearts, two top spades, a top diamond, and a top club. You must pick up two more. And that before opponents can defeat you.

The safest place to look for your two more tricks is in dummy's spades. You may have to give up a spade trick to do it. But that is all right. You will still have enough left.

But not so fast. The south spades are holding up the parade. They must be unblocked. How? Win first trick with heart queen and promptly lead heart ace and king. Sluff the south top spade thereon.

Now lead dummy spade jack and let west win that spade trick with his queen. He will, also take the three remaining heart tricks. But you see in after that to take re-maining aces and spades.

An finblocking play looks spectacular. But it is just a matter of paying strict attention to what you need. Keep your mind on your work. The talent to unblock is there in your sock.

When you attempt to establish a suit, you will need sufficient entries. By counting possible entries, you will be reminded of unblock.

When you have a choice between a finesse and an unblock, prefer the unblock. Because a finesse is only a 50-50 chance and an upblocking play is usually a cinch.

Nearly 10 Million Eggs on One Ship

In the almost unbroken stream of Canadian eggs to Britain during the war years one recent shipment of 100 carloads of eggs on one ship alone has constituted a record from a Canadian port, and was only 4,800 cases short of making a record for the world. In the, 100 carloads were 9,384,000 eggs, representing 66,000 cases or 782,000 dozen. Carloads from all the provinces were included in this shipment, and, in keeping with its size, it was given speedy transfer at the terminals. The unloading of the cars and the loading aboard ship took nearly 72 hours, gangs working night and day. The shipment was made by the Special Products Board to the British Ministry of Food.

The 1946 export contract between Canada and Britain calls for a minimum of 600,000 cases of eggs, winter and spring production to be shipped before May 15. So good has been egg production in Canada that this part of the contract has been filled two months ahead of schedule. It is expected that the winter and spring export may reach 900,000 to 1,000,000 cases.

Current deliveries for storage are also satisfactory. By March 31, 1946, one hundred thousand cases had been stored or were undergoing oil processing en route to storage, in addition to 15,000 cases of current fresh production having been oil processed for export. All shipments on arrival in Britain are examined and reported upon by a Canadian Government inspector or British Ministry of Food area egg officer and taken as a whole, the results are very creditable to Canada.

FUGITIVE ON A DUDE RANCH

CHAPTER 2

Nancy, hurrying out, met another girl, both young ladies manifesting much pleasure and great excitement. Arm in arm they made their way through the milling pedestrians, oblivious to being buffeted, unaware of the underworld gentleman directly behind them.

"Uncle was an old brick," Nancy was saying exultantly. "He agreed to help me. And I'm to leave tonight."

"Secretly? Mysteriously?" Marcia Louise Farnsworth said, gripping Nancy's arm, her eyes wide and round.

"Secretly, of course. But I'll leave a note to throw Pauline off the trail."

"Oh, Nancy! Will she be furious or will she be furious!"

"Let her rave. She's brought it all on herself. . . Marcia, what in the world did you wire that T Slash Ranch?"

"What's wrong? I wired, 'Reserve accommodations for one guest beginning Wednesday. Telegraph reply immediately to Wm. F. Waller.' Wasn't that the name we picked for your uncle to use in this—this escapade?"

"But their answer was funny, Marcia. Read it."

Nancy opened her handbag and took from it a telegram. She did not notice a small, tightly folded newspaper which fell from the bag. "Do you see what's wrong, Marcia? . . . 'The reservation's for you, Marcia Louise Farnsworth.'"

Marcia stopped so suddenly that Smoothie almost bumped into her. She meditated for a moment before she broke out, "Oh I get it, Nan. Dumb of me! I was so excited I did forget to write the name you told me and I signed my name!"

"Then you'd better send another wire and correct the mistake."

"Why bother, Nan? Nobody out there in the sagebrush ever heard of any Farnsworths. I'll get a grand thrill, thinking of you in Wyoming posing as Marcia Louise Farnsworth."

"But some trouble might—"

"Nonsense! No trouble can come from using my name. . . Have you any regrets about going away, Nancy, you adventurer?"

"Only one."

"Is it a new beau?"

"Not exactly a beaau. But it is a man."

"You must tell me all about him, Nancy Eleanor!"

Nancy's laugh rippled gaily. "You wouldn't be interested in a garage mechanic, Marcia. I'll probably forget him. Or will I?. . . . Marcia, I've another secret I'm bursting to tell you. I don't dare tell Uncle Bill for fear he'd stop me, but I'm going to try to keep Pauline from making use of what my two sisters and I inherited from our father. Stocks and bonds worth one hundred and fifty thousand dollars."

"O—o—oh! You're going to put them where Pauline—?"

"Can't get them!" flashed Nancy. "I hadn't fully made up my mind what to do until I looked in the safety deposit box to get my few small pieces of jewelry. Guess, Marcia! Those securities were no longer in the box. That decided me."

"Nan! Your stepmother had already taken them out?"

"She and I are the only ones who have keys, so what else could I think? However, if Pauline hasn't turned the securities over to Hudson Alexander, I'll find them at home. The best plan I can think of is to take with me what rightfully belongs to us three girls."

Smoothie Dick turned aside and stopped. He stood quite still, although his nerves were all atingle, his active mind racing. Presently he drew from his old coat pocket the tightly folded newspaper which Nancy had dropped, a copy of "The Dagger Wash Courier," published at Dagger Wash, Wyoming. Its small town and countryside gossip had no interest for a big city crook, but the advertisement of the T Slash Dude Ranch caught his eye and his attention focused on the very last paragraph of that advertisement:

"This entire ranch for sale. Including horses, cattle and equipment. For particularse address David Thomas Perriwell (Old Sol) Jimtown, Wyoming."

After attending to several duties and meeting Nancy at his office as agreed, John William Smith felt the need of a stimulant. Accordingly he repaired to his favorite "club," a saloon which had been a speakeasy in bygone days.

By turns he chuckled and scowled. Chuckled to think what a glorious adventure was to be Nancy's; scowled as he thought of all the hue and cry and fuss—"stink" he called it—which Mrs. Pauline Stevenson Huntington - Smythe would inevitably raise.

Nevertheless he'd see this runaway through as planned. Nancy's disappearance might perhaps bring Pauline to her senses and cause her to send that confounded smart, oily-tongued Hudson Alexander a-kiting.

"Why, hello, Bill? How are you?"

The voice at his shoulder brought John William sharply around to face a tall young man who was grinning at him with marked friendliness. The newcomer's brown suit was out of press and a bit shabby; so was the hat tilted back on a well-shaped head thatched with sandy hair, almost, yet not quite red.

"Well, if it ain't my young friend of Cappy's garage!" exclaimed J. W. with unassumed delight. "Sit down, Don. . . Waiter, bring Don Sturgis a cocktail. Any kind. Bring me another, too. . . You got my message, eh, Don?"

Donald Sturgis folded his slender six-foot body into a chair, a troubled look washing the grin from his ruddy face, which would freckle badly if exposed to sun and wind. "Yes, sir. You sent word that 'twas important I meet you here, but I had a dickens of a time persuading the boss to let me off in working hours. I can't afford to lose that garage job."

The cocktails had come and John William Smith drew a fat wallet from one hip pocket. "Just bring us a couple more and keep the change," he directed the waiter, and looked up to catch his guest's smoke-gray eyes riveted upon the billfold. John William put his money back in his hip pocket.

"Lose your job? Don, you seem to me like a human sort of duck. Yes, sir, loafing around Cappy's garage, one of my favorite foafing spots, I've decided you ain't like so many of these city birds who give a frozen-faced stare when you try to talk to 'em. I don't mind sayin' I cottoned to you the first time we met. . . Ever think of goin' west? Tryin' ranchin', minin', drillin' for oil or—?"

"Did I ever think of heading west, Bill! I'd give my right eye to get on a real cow ranch and learn the business. I'm in dead earnest, sir. But how'd I ever get out west? Who'd give a greenhorn a job after he did get there?"

"Young man, what I'm going to say is strictly between you and me and the gatepost. My niece is goin' to the T Slash dude ranch in Wyoming. I'd feel easier if I knew a bright young feller I can trust was on the job to look out for her, case—well, in case, any trouble'd pop up. You get me?"

"I'm catching on, Bill."

"Good! My niece ain't to know even that I'm acquainted with you. You get a job on this dude ranch. Tell 'em you'll do anything—even work for your board to get a start. I'll stake you to railroad fare and meals; pay something else besides."

"Am I dreaming or is opportunity smacking me in the face?" ejaculated the young man. "Still," his eyes clouding, "I sort of hate to quit this garage job."

"Humph! I'm offering you the chance of a lifetime."

When Don Sturgis offered no reply, J. W. Smith resumed, "There, by jingo, it's settled. . . I'll give you my office address, and once you get to the T Slash keep me posted. Do you know who I am?"

Don Sturgiss smiled. "Bill, I never heard your last name, to say nothing of your address."

"My office address is 1214 Block Building and I'm—" Smith paused and emptied his cocktail glass. "I'm William F. Waller. Bill Waller. A broker in a small way. Don."

"Yes, Mr. Waller. Your niece is —?"

John William Smith glanced around before bending toward his young friend. (Although Nancy had told him of her decision to let the name of the e xepected guest for the T Slash stand, J. W. didn't like the idea. Not at all.) "Ever hear of the Farnsworth?" he inquired.

"Farnsworth?" repeated Donald Sturgiss blankly. "No. Are they so important that even I should have heard of them?"

"Society," Smith cleared his throat. "And Marcia Louise Farnsworth's the society girl you're to look after, or as we'd say in Wyoming, 'ride herd on'."

"'Marcia Louise Farnsworth'," repeated Don Sturgis. "Okay, Bill, I'll do my best."

"Sure you will. You and me savvy each other, Don. Now I'll give you what cash you need."

At this moment Smoothie Dick entered. Having learned the haunts of John William Smith, Smoothie had had an idea where to look for him. Now he was in time to see five greenbacks pass from John William's hand to that of a ruddy-faced, youthful six-footer.

"There you are, Don Sturgis," said J. W. Smith. "Don't forget where you're to go to. The T Slash near Jimtown. Railroad point, Dagger Wash, Wyoming."

Smith's wallet disappeared into his hippocket, the five bills he had extracted into a side pocket of Don's shabby brown trousers. Thereupon the two men shook hands and went out together into the swirling stream of evening pedestrian traffic. When this flow of traffic jammed at a stop light and humanity piled up eight deep and twelve wide, Smoothie Dick squeezed into the crush. The trained fingers of his gloveless right hand slid into Donald Sturgis' trousers pocket, the motion swift and smooth as that of a snake's tongue.

"It'll be just as well if this guy never reaches that dude ranch in Wyoming," thought Smoothie as he deposited five folded greenbacks in his own pocket.

The transaction had taken a scant second, the red light still held, and Smoothie Dick transferred his attention and talents to the person of John William Smith.

* * *

Donald Sturgis, his chin up and his step that of a conquering hero, took his place in the line before a window marked "Tickets." As the line ahead thinned, he reached in his pocket to have ready the cash for his purchase. Bewildered dismay swept the glow of anticipation from his eyes and cheeks. Abruptly he put down his small brown valise ar l went through the motions of frisking himself.

Presently he picked up his bag mechanically and with slumped shoulders walked blindly out of the depot. Then at last unconsciously he spoke aloud his bitter thoughts. "If I had hold of that damned sneak thief I'd rip off his fingers one at a time. . . I could go to Old Bill—he's a good egg, one of the best I've ever met—and tell him. But he might think I was trying to put something over—work him for more dough.

"I won't hunt him up. I won't go back on him either. Men travel everywhere without money, hitchhiking or riding freights. Tighten up your belt, fella. Pull up your lower lip. You're traveling west anyhow and regardless!"

Soon after Donald Sturgis' departure, John William Smith entered the depot by another door. John William's face was red, his teeth clamped on the butt of a dead cigar, his hands balled into hard fists. With blood in his eye he was looking for Sturgis, who was perhaps not so honest as he appeared.

When J. W. failed to find the ruddy-faced young man with sandy hair that was almost red, he wiped his perspiring forehead, hurled his cigar into a nearby cuspidor and growled; "That cinches it! If he hadn't robbed me, he'd be here to catch this train. Changed his mind after he picked my pocket. Damn!. . . . I'm taking steps to fix him if by any chance he does show up out at the T Slash ranch."

The wrathful J.W. stamped to the telegraph office and wrote a message to "Sheriff's Office, Jimtown, Wyoming." He signed it Wm. F. Waller, 1214 Block Bldg., Philadelphia."

Over John William Smith's shoulder, Smoothie Dick read the telegram, the gist of which reminded Smoothie he must get rid of a certain hand-tooled wallet bearing the initials "J.W.S.," now resting gratifyingly in one of his own pockets.

Being a crafty individual who dearly loved to make trouble for innocent people, he strolled over to the newstand, purchased a small box of candy and then entered the gentlemen's washroom. Scarcely five minutes later he returned to the newstand and requested that his purchase be wrapped and stamped for mailing. On this he printed the address: "Mr. Donald Sturgis, T Slash Ranch, Jimtown, Wyoming," and dropped it into a mailbx.

If by any remote chance Sturgis should show up at the Perriwell dude ranch—something Smoothie Dick very much doubted—he would receive this package. If the sheriff of Jimtown should then arrest the young man on W. F. Waller's order, proof that Mr. Sturgis had indeed robbed John William (Waller) would not be lacking. To make that proof stronger, Smoothie, now "flush with dough," had left one ten-dollar bill in the "J.W. S." wallet.

When the enraged Mr. Smith had taken himself off, and when the five o'clock train had gone without Miss Nancy Eleanor Smith, Smoothie considered a line of action he should possibly have employed earlier. Immediately he took a cab to within four blocks of Mrs. Pauline S. Smythe's residence and shortly afterward was well pleased to see Mrs. Smythe's automobile drive away, with Mr. Hudson Alexander seated beside Mrs. Smythe.

Would that pretty little dame, Nancy, never come home? What a relief to the imperturbable crook when at last the slender, vivacious girl appeared alone. And how very convenient for Smoothie's purpose was Nancy's dismissal of Betty, the maid. Since Smoothie knew Miss Nancy Eleanor Smith desired to find certain securities taken from a safety deposit box by Mrs. Smythe, the girl naturally wished to be alone in the house. Three minutes later, however, the back door yielded to Smoothie's master pass key!

* * *

It was toward midnight when at last Smoothie Dick, his shadowing and "gumshoe work" completed, let himself into a dark and dingy room on the seventh floor of a disreputable building. He switched on a wan electric light, then turned his sharp eyes, no longer screened by the dark glasses, toward the bed in one corner.

Althought the occupant of the bed had not risen, his attitude was tense and wary. But when the light revealed Smoothie Dick he drew his right hand from beneath the covers and thrust back under his pillow the automatic pistol he had been holding. Whereupon Smoothie said, amused, "Not taking chances, Heavy? You should know my light step, the sound of my key in the lock."

Heavy sat up, a short, and stocky man with chest like a gorilla and a face to frighten children. "No more chances 'n I have to, Smoothie. . . How long I gotta lay low?"

"Well, even though he dicks are still looking for you, Heavy, we're travelling. Ever hear of Wyoming?"

"This Wyoming a godd town for our business? I never heard of it."

"It's one of these United States, brainless. Coyates, sagebrush, cattle, wind and wide-open country. That's Wyoming, where we're going."

"Wot t' hell? You gone screwy?"

"Me? No. But I'll be screwy if you don't throw in with me. . . We're going to follow a dame who's carrying no less than two hundred G's worth of stocks and bonds all of which can be turned for cash!"

"Huh?" gasped Heavy. "Why don't you lift the stuff right here?"

"Because," said Smoothie Dick, "I never take unnecessary chances. For one thing, I'm too well known in this city. Another reason the stuff'd prove too hot to handle here has to do with my dear pal, Hudson Alexander. So we're taking it on the lam for Seattle. Between her and there's Wyoming where we make a brief stop at a dude ranch to pick up the swag."

"How come the dame's packin' all that stuff?" grunted Heavy, turning over on his side in the unkempt bed. "Don't seem reasonable."

"Never mind that part, though I'll tell you this: she has no idea she's carrying fifty G's worth of securities that don't belong to her." Smoothie Dick winked his right eye, nodding wisely. "Alexander hadn't got hold of the stuff yet, so Miss Nancy Eleanor Smith found the whole pack of stocks and bonds in her stepmother's dresser. She took only what belonged to her and her sisters, but I managed to slip the rest into the same envelope before the girl closed her suitcase!"

USED FOR FIRE BOMBS

Toronto, April 26 — (CP)—Dealers here said the shortage of glossy paints and varnishes can be attributed to United States fire-bomb attacks on Japan. The bombs are taking 20,000 tons of linseed oil yearly that normally go into indoor paints and varnishes.

CHOPPING MILL BURNED

Huns Use Subways Reds Wage Battle Under Ground

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, April 26 (AP)—A fantastic battle surged through the subway beneath Berlin's rubble-strewn streets today as Russian forces fought to crush fanatical Nazi troops using the underground network to stage surprise raids on Soviet communications.

Eye-witness accounts sent by Russian correspondents said Red soldiers, rushing from station to station in subway cars, were constantly popping up at unexpected spots behind Red army troops fighting their way toward the centre of the city.

These and other reports of the struggle raging inside Berlin suggested the German might succeed in making a long defence of their capital.

A Red Star correspondent said: "The Germans have transferred from the street fighting to through the subways many fresh units. They crawl from the underground stations, bringing field pieces with them. The streets are quiet, but only for a time.

"We have to wipe them out or drive them back into the tunnels, otherwise they could spread over many blocks and seriously disorganize our communications."

Centre of Berlin "Inferno."

The Russian correspondent in Berlin described the centre of the capital as an "inferno."

While their guns are appearing in larger numbers in the streets down which the Russian tanks are driving, these advices said, German officers were reported moving down men in other places if they tried to retreat or give up.

Water, gas, electricity and food are giving out, telephone communications are shattered.

"The Hitlerites are launching continuous counter-attacks, but Soviet tankmen, artillerymen, infantry and special storm troops are fighting with unparalleled fury, knowing that victory is in sight," wrote Boris Agranov, correspondent for the newspaper Trud.

Turn Channel Islands Into Fortresses by Use of Slave Labor

London, April 26 — (CP Cable) — The Daily Sketch said today that Germans are turning the Channel Islands into fortresses by the use of slave labor.

A correspondent attributing his information to an "authoritative source" said foreign workers were building concrete emplacements 26 feet high and 24 feet thick to protect garrisons of now estimated at more than 30,000 troops occupying the islands.

He said isolated spots have been converted into concentration camps for foreign workers, and conditions there were described as typical of Nazi brutality; when workers died it was said their bodies were thrown into the sea.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, April 26. (AP)—The stock markets built swing extended record resistance today on a moderate increase in trading which caused a general retreat of fractions to around a point in the leaders.

The first advance in the list was regarded as natural in view of the market's steep rise since the closing days of March.

Most pivotal issue worked into lower ground after a somewhat sharp upswing. Selling was brought in a fair amount of support so that most declines held within fractional limits. Some Utilities and Specialties had small gains near the fourth hour.

36,000 "Fags" Sent to Armed Forces Overseas

A total of 36,000 cigarettes, which did not include 5,000 fags sent to the crew of the Corvette "Belleville" were sent to Belleville and district boys serving in all theatres of the war through the Army and Navy Veterans "fag fund", Secretary Art Galbraith announced today.

Monthly we send 3,000 cigarettes to the crew of the Corvette "Belleville" but this is aside from the regular shipments of smokes to district boys in the armed services. These boys need cigarettes and now that many of them are fighting inside of Germany where it is impossible to receive smokes, the need is even greater than before", stated Secretary Galbraith.

As has been the case since its inception scores of replies are received weekly by the Veterans' fag fund expressing thanks for smokes already received and also urging the continued flow of Canadian cigarettes overseas. During the past fortnight Secretary Galbraith has received over one hundred such replies from practically every theatre of war in the world, all being local in nature.

The list of Belleville and district boys sent individual shipments of three hundred cigarettes by the Army and Navy Veterans' "fag fund" this week included:—

RELEASE OF DOUKHOBOR HAS BEEN ORDERED

Ottawa, April 26. (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada in a judgment delivered Tuesday ordered the release from penitentiary of Fred Storgoff, a Doukhobor, who has been committed in Vancouver to three years at hard labor for parading nude in public with other Doukhobors in Stanley Park, B.C., last May.

Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret dissented in the judgment ordering the release of Storgoff which followed long drawn-out legal proceedings that were looked upon by some as a test case arising out of the jailing of Doukhobors for disrobing in public.

'FDR' Could Be Very Impish:- He Mentioned Rattlesnake Meat As Guests at Hyde Park Nibbled

(Editor's Note—This is one of a series of sit articles by a reporter who for six years covered the late President Roosevelt for The Associated Press.)

BY DOUGLAS CORNELL

Washington, April 25. (AP) — There were moments when Franklin D. Roosevelt was downright impish.

He loved a joke and roared lustily whether it was on himself or someone else.

When Crown Princess Martha of Norway was a guest one weekend at his home at Hyde Park, N.Y., he was shaking up a martini before dinner. A servant brought a tray of canapes, and for a moment all the conversation turned to snacks and unusual foods.

Mr. Roosevelt remarked that rattlesnake meat was tasty, and considerable quantities were exported from the United States, though most Americans never have tried it.

A few weeks later the Crown Princess was back at Hyde Park, and a tray of delicious-looking canapes was offered her and her ladies-in-waiting. Inwardly, Mr. Roosevelt watched them nibble.

"How do you like that rattlesnake?" he asked. "Good isn't it?"

They bolted out of the room and returned a bit later, looking a trifle green. And there he sat, chuckling and chortling.

Mr. Roosevelt chafed at being constantly under the watchful eyes of reporters and Secret Service men. In his fourth-term acceptance speech he told how he would like to get away from continuous publicity.

At least once he was able to shake off the Secret Service men who hover over each President. He gave the summer sky clearing after a heavy rain one afternoon at Hyde Park and ordered up his own blue Buick car.

Mr. Roosevelt made a bee-line for the remotest part of his 1,100 acres. The long, heavy Secret Service car—so big and powerful it was called the "Queen Mary"—logged down. The last its occupants saw of the President for a while was a delighted grin.

Dionnes Invited To U.S. War Loan Drive at Chicago

Morin Bay, April 25 (CP) — Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, said Tuesday he was considering an invitation for the Dionne girls and their parents to participate in the United States seventh annual war loan drive at Chicago in June.

He said he received the invitation from the Chicago State Street Council, approved by the U.S. Treasury Department.

Mr. Dionne said he felt the invitation was "rather short notice," adding that the trip would involve extensive preparations. He said he did not think there was sufficient time to prepare for such a trip but that he would consider the invitation further before making a decision.

The quintuplets and their parents were invited last year to make a three-day visit in Chicago, beginning June 16.

"June 17th is Fathers' Day," the invitation read in part, "and it means: to everyone down here that your presence on State Street that day, together with your five famous daughters, would constitute a very fitting recognition of one of the world's best-known fathers."

POSSIBLY HALF MILLION HUNS IN BERLIN TRAP
AMERICANS NEARING MUNICH AND AUSTRIA

Patton's Divisions Strike East Into Czechoslovakia

British 2nd Army Captures More Than Half of Bremen

Paris, April 26 —(AP)— The British 2nd Army captured Bremen today, clearing all the great port except the dock area and Burger Park north of the centre of the city.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

Paris, April 26 — (AP)—American armies closed within 41 miles of Munich on the north and northwest today and sent tanks thundering down the Danube Valley within 11 miles of Austria and 100 of a junction with the Russians which would encircle Czechoslovakia.

On the Elbe to the north, a meeting of the 9th Army and the Russians who encircled Berlin appeared close for Red Army shells were falling near that river in the Arneburg area, 46 miles northwest of the enemy capital. The United States 1st Army and the Russians were last reported 18 miles apart in the centre.

The United States 3rd Army was closest to Austria and across the Danube at a point 41 miles north of Munich beyond hopelessly outflanked and by-passed Regensburg. The United States 7th Army threatening Augsburg was the same distance to the northwest.

Hitler's ruined roost at Berchtesgaden was barely 72 miles south of 3rd Army troops in the Danube valley. The three-army assault upon the Nazis' Alpine redoubt in the south was up to or across the Danube on a 180-mile front.

Resistance Stiffening

German resistance, however, was stiffening.

The British 2nd Army captured more than half of Bremen, Germany's largest submarine base, and resistance was collapsing rapidly. The Lowland 52nd Division fought to the 12th century cathedral in the heart of Bremen. The "Iron 3rd" Division took Thirfield and the Focke Wulf airplane factory and half of the part of Bremen lying south of the Weser River. The submarine pens were not yet reached, but 5,000 prisoners were taken.

Just south of Hamburg, the Germans counter-attacked the 7th Armored "Desert Rats" Division, but were thrown back.

Other troops under Lt.-Gen. Dempsey had smashed northward 8 miles midway between Bremen and Hamburg, and advanced from fallen Zeven to occupy Selsingen.

Men of the 1st Canadian Army were within artillery range of the former giant U-boat pens of Emden, while other Canadians closed on the important road centre of Oldenburg, capital of the Duchy of that name.

At Titling, the 11th Armored Division of the 3rd Army was within 11 miles of Passau, historic Danubian gateway to Austria.

The 3rd Army, like the French 1st and U. S. 7th, had crossed the Danube on a wide front.

Capture Eger.

Some of Gen. Patton's divisions struck east into Czechoslovakia capturing Eger (Cheb), where Hitler made his post-Munich tirade annexing the Sudetenland of Czechoslovakia. Eger, a city of 51,-640, is the 15th largest in Czechoslovakia.

The 3rd Army was in or on the border of that republic along a 50-mile front jutting within 35 of Pilsen and its newly-bombed Skoda munitions works.

The French closed on Munich from the west after destroying the German 19th Army.

The threatened entrapment of Bohemia and Moravia—last unconquered parts of Czechoslovakia—might prove a greater blow than even the German disasters in the Ruhr and at Stalingrad. The area is larger and it contains the last heavy industries in German hands.

All roads and rails from the Pilsen-Prague area to the Bavarian redoubt were cut except a circuitous route through Linz, and the 3rd Army was advancing down the last 52 miles to that Austrian frontier city of 121,423. Salzburg, eastern rampart of the redoubt, was but 65 miles from 3rd Army tanks which were curling around Munich widely to the east and northeast.

LOAN IS LAGGING LITTLE BEHIND FORMER DRIVE

Three-Day Total of $203,-179,900 is 13 Millions Off Seventh Loan

Ottawa, April 26 — (CP)—Canada's Eighth Victory Loan has run up a total of $203,179,900 in the first three days of canvassing, with Wednesday's total amounting to $60,-328,150, National Loan headquarters announced today.

This loan still lags a little behind the seventh loan which at this stage had a cumulative total of $216,038,-550 and a third-day total of $70,-508,450.

A headquarters spokesman said reports on large purchases from companies and organizations are "somewhat slower than in the previous loan so Canadian wage earners face a direct challenge to take up the slack."

Buying by Individuals Up

He described as "heartening," however, the continued "excellent" response of individual Canadians, who up to Wednesday had signed up for $105,018,300 against individual purchases of $93,399,100 on the 3rd day of the seventh loan. The minimum objective for individuals is $675,000,000, half of the over-all target of $1,350,000,000 in the three-week drive.

A grand total of 31,151 applications for $12,039,400 gave Alberta slightly more than 25 per cent of its $47,300,000 objective at the end of the third day.

Peterboro, with 21.9 per cent of its general canvass objective achieved, now leads 13 Ontario cities and towns of 10,000 or more population, followed by Timmins, Belleville, Kitchener and Port Arthur. Throughout the province, 19 more payroll establishments have won "V" flag honors.

GERMAN REDOUBT CITY, FREILASSING, GIVEN POUNDING

Hitler's Berchtesgaden Retreat Destroyed by Direct Hit From Earthquake Bomb

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, April 26 (CP) — Italy-based R.A.F. Liberators struck the German redoubt city at Freilassing last night in an explosive follow-up to the historic bombardment of Hitler's eagle nest refuge and his chalet near Berchtesgaden.

Freilassing is a road and railway junction 13 miles due north of Berchtesgaden.

It was disclosed today that 300 R.A.F. Lancasters were used in the attack on Hitler's properties, rather than 200 as originally reported. They were escorted by both British and American fighters. Many Canadians flew in the R.A.F. bombers.

Heavy bombers of the U.S. 8th and 15th Air Forces threw German defences off guard with attacks upon communications all around Berchtesgaden.

Hitler's sumptuous chalet at Berchtesgaden was destroyed by a direct hit from a six-ton earthquake bomb as 200 Lancasters raided the retreat in an apparent attempt on his life. Whether Hitler was there was unknown, but returning fliers reported the destruction of his retreat.

Reported in Berlin.

The Germans had reported Hitler in Berlin personally directing the defence of the capital. However, other European reports lent support to the story that he actually was at Berchtesgaden at the time of the bombing.

One British flight sergeant exclaimed: "I saw one terrific flash right on Hitler's house. It was a 12,000-pounder, all right."

In order to find their Norwegian objective—located near Tonsberg, 40 miles south of Oslo—the big bombers had to make a daring low-level sweep beneath the clouds and between rugged mountain peaks.

Returning pilots reported they left numerous fires burning, with smoke rising to a great height.

Mosquitos, meanwhile, hit the Kiel naval base for the fifth successive night and other British bombers attacked electric railway transformer stations near Munich for the third night running.

Captured German General Appeals To High Command to Cease Fighting

By DON DOANE

London, April 26 — (AP) — Lt.-Gen. Heinrich Kirchheim in a Luxembourg radio broadcast last night appealed to the German high command to "make the Fuehrer cease fighting at once" because "the war is irrevocably lost." He was the first high-ranking German officer captured by the Americans to make such an appeal.

Directing his remarks to Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Chief of Staff, but privately admitting the effect "very doubtful," Kirchheim said:

"You, Field Marshal Keitel, are the Fuehrer's highest military adviser. It is your duty to stop this senseless slaughter of our youth and destruction of our last cities. You must succeed in making reason conquer against military amateurs and make the Fuehrer cease fighting at once.

"It must not be further continued —certainly not for defence of our soldierly honor. Our honor requires us to confess our defeat and bear our heavy fate with dignity."

Kirchheim said his fellow German officers "cannot feel bound to their oath any longer" and added that "whoever continues this war is guilty." The General was reported to have removed Hitler's medals when he heard of the brutalities in German concentration camps.

Although Kirchheim is the first top-ranking German officer to appeal for capitulation from the western front, several captive officers have done so from Moscow.

Kirchheim ridiculed Nazi attempts to carry on the fight with a mixture of hastily organized civilians and Wehrmacht remnants.

Kirchheim was captured by the American 9th. Army last week. He was found driving his own car in an American supply convoy headed toward the front.

He told Keitel he had watched the fighting in the Magdeburg area with the intention of reporting to him what "shaking observations I made." Prevented from doing this by his capture, he said he was making the report by radio.

These were his observations:

"In troops and artillery the enemy sometimes enjoyed a tenfold superiority. The Americans are equipped with inexhaustible supplies of ammunition .."

Speaking in German, Kirchheim described the Volkssturm as "elderly men and boys equipped with nothing else but bazookas to meet American tanks."

The Werewolves—the German underground movement pledged to continue the fight behind the Allies lines—Kirchheim dismissed as merely a "good means of propaganda" which has "nowhere made its appearance."

Jeering at Hitler's recurrent promises of new secret weapons which will turn the tide of war, the officer said "if we had any more new weapons they would have been thrown in much earlier. They are certainly non-existent."

Meanwhile the Bern radio said Swiss troops at Constance were allowing a constant stream of French, Dutch, Russian, Polish and Belgian refugees to enter that neutral country.

J. F. Wilson, County Warden, Is Progressive Conservative Candidate for West Hastings

Opposed at Convention Held at Stirling Wednesday by Jamieson Bone, Belleville, and Dr. E. A. Carleton, Stirling

Stirling — (Staff) — With the echo of loud acclaim and the cheers of 265 delegates ringing in his ears, J. Fred Wilson, Sidney Township farmer and warden of Hastings County, stepped from the Community Hall stage here on Wednesday afternoon, the choice of the West Hastings Progressive Conservative Association convention to carry the party standard for the riding in the forthcoming provincial election.

Mr. Wilson was given the nomination by virtue of a majority of votes over Jamieson Bone, Belleville, in the second ballot. In the first ballot Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bone finished in that order while Dr. E. A. Carleton, Stirling, the third nominee to stand for the candidacy, finished third, and was automatically defeated.

The names of nine nominees were presented to President Col. A. P. Allen, chairman of the convention during the first part of the convention. These included Dr. Carleton, Mr. Bone, Mr. Wilson, R. D. Arnott, K.C.Belleville, Geo. A. Reid, Belleville, W. C. Mikel, Belleville, H. B. Fetterley, Belleville, W. H. Ireland, Trenton and Harry Rollins, Belleville. All with the exception of the first three withdrew their names.

Hall Filled to Capacity

The Community Hall here was filled to capacity long before Chairman A. P. Allen called the convention to order. Business of the association including the election of officers was quickly dispensed with, and the re-elected slate of officers got quickly down to business. Seated on the stage were several party stalwarts with executive officers and Federal members. A party of five including Mr. W. M. Nickle, K.C., guest speaker, arrived from Kingston during the preliminary business of the convention.

Chairman Allen, following preliminary remarks of welcome placed the stage and the delegates at the disposal of the Nominees.

R. D. Arnott, K.C., the first called, was brief in his remarks but spoke at some length later when he introduced the guest speaker. He expressed his appreciation of the confidence placed in him in two elections, and regretted that business pressure prevented him from standing for nominations.

Appreciation of Mr. Arnott's character and worth was voiced by Mr. Wilson, who stated that the Ontario Legislature was losing a valuable member.

Tribute Paid Drew.

He said the province had seen ample of group government in the past year and paid tribute to Col.

REGGIO D'EMILIA AND PARMA TAKEN BY ALLIED TROOPS

Enemy Hastily Evacuates Last Foothold on South Side of Po River

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Rome, April 26 (AP)—The Allied 5th Army erupted into the Lombard plain today, overwhelming Parma and Reggio and threatening to bottle up German troops fleeing the industrial area of northwest Italy where cities were reported falling to a general Partisan uprising.

Near the east coast the British 8th Army poured across the Po River to strike at the Adige river line 30 miles from Venice, where the Germans are digging in for a last-ditch fight before the Dolomite Alps.

The last reported positions of American forces, which burst from the Apennine mountains, were 54 miles from Verona, in the foothill approaches to the Brenner Pass.

The enemy hastily evacuated his last foothold on the south side of the Po river east of Ferrara, "leaving behind him so much equipment and motor transport that we are unable to count it," Allied headquarters reported.

The 5th Army thrust north of the Po was meeting scant opposition, but headquarters continued a news blackout on the exact areas reached by the United States and South African spearheads.

There was no immediate confirmation from air force headquarters that the Germans had fled from Genoa, Milan and Turin toward their homeland, leaving Partisans in full control of the cities.

Evidence For Weeks.

There has been evidence for many weeks, however, that the Nazis have been prepared for the abandonment of the three cities.

(A radio station calling itself "Free Genoa" the office of War Information reported in New York. The broadcast said the Patriots were mopping up the last centres of German resistance.)

An official report said the Germans were making a speedy withdrawal from their last strongholds in the western end of the Apennines.

American units heading up the coast from captured La Spezia were meeting only "very little artillery fire," the report added, saying "weak rearguards" blew up "a few" bridges.

Thousands Taken.

Thousands of prisoners were taken, swelling the total which two days ago had passed 40,000.

WAR-SICK WORLD HOPES CENTRE ON SAN FRANCISCO

Conference Formally Opened by U. S. State Secretary Stettinius

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

San Francisco, April 26 (CP) — Hopes of a war-sick world centred today on the United Nations Conference on International Organization which is now in being.

It came into operation yesterday in the colorful surroundings of a flag-draped opera stage as State Secretary Stettinius signified with three sharp raps of a gavel that the men of 46 nations and many languages and creeds now were in formal session.

The stage of the opera house had been transformed into a magnificent setting of grey, blue and gold, against which were arrayed the massed flags of the 46 United Nations, arranged in alphabetical order.

After considering the report, the plenary session will be opened for the addresses by delegation leaders. Probably the chiefs of the four sponsoring delegations—Britain, the United States, Russia and China—will start off. Other delegation chairmen will be called in alphabetical order.

To Express Views.

Not all chiefs of delegations will talk today, but they will have opportunities at later sessions. At these they will express their views as the Dumbarton Oaks plan for an international organization — drafted last Summer by representatives of the "Big Three" —comes under examination for elaboration and amendment, acceptance or rejection.

Importance was attached to President Truman's statement that the task of the conference is not to settle specific questions of boundaries, territories, citizenship or reparations, but the "establishment of a world organization for the enforcement of peace." The alternative to the latter, said the President, was "continuation of international chaos."

He stressed the importance of their task, as did Mr. Stettinius in his brief address of welcome.

"We must prevent," said Mr. Truman, "if human mind, heart and hope can prevent it, the repetition of the disaster from which the entire world will suffer for years to come."

GERMAN FLOTILLA ON L. CONSTANCE HAS SURRENDERED

Will Remain in Swiss Ports Until Entire Shoreline Has Been Occupied by Allies

London, April 26 (CP) — A German naval flotilla on Lake Constance has surrendered to Swiss authorities and will "remain in Swiss ports until the entire Lake Constance shore has been occupied by the Allies," the Swiss radio announced today.

(Places on the German side of Lake Constance are threatened by the French 1st. Army. The frontier between Germany and Switzerland runs through the lake, which is a large body of water with a number of small steamboat services.)

The Swiss report said:

"Last night the entire German Lake Constance flotilla stationed at Lindau, consisting of nine ships, sailed into the harbors of Argon, Romanshorn and Stein after previous negotiations with the Swiss authorities.

"After the occupation operations have been completed the ships will return to their harbors.

"The ship's crews returned to Lindau in motor boats."

Liberals Stand for Free Enterprise Says M. F. Hepburn

Arthur, April 26—(CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, told a nomination convention here last night that his party stands for free enterprise and that Canada "cannot live under Socialism."

Of the C.C.F. policy he said "there can be only confiscation or appropriation. There are no halfway measures. I want to disconnect the Liberals from any form of Socialism or Communism."

Mr. Hepburn said that his Liberal administration, when in power, had been able to reduce taxes and motor licence fees and to inaugurate other reductions for the benefits of the people.

C.C.F. policy would drive any outside financial assistance away from Canada, he added.

Of his Progressive-Conservative opponents, Mr. Hepburn said: "I am not going to tear (Premier) Drew to pieces — but I could do it."

He described as "tremendous challenge" the problems of rehabilitating those discharged from the armed forces and those whose jobs in munitions plants soon would come to an end.

Dieppe Prison Camp in Germany Liberated, 3 Canadian Officers Left

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the U. S. 3rd Army in Southern Germany, April 25 —(CP) —(Delayed)— The United States 3rd Army today liberated a prisoner-of-war camp in southern Germany near the Danube where the majority of Canadian officers captured at Dieppe had been held for more than 2½ years, but all these officers except one had been marched farther south 11 days earlier.

With the Dieppe officer left behind were two other Canadian officers, one captured in Sicily in August, 1943, and the other captured while serving with the British army. Their names cannot be disclosed until next-of-kin have been informed of their liberation.

With American infantry I went into the town, which cannot be named, near where the camp is located and met the Dieppe officer in the town square. He told me 84 other Dieppe officers were marched south April 15 along with two Canadians captured in Sicily and 10 members of the R.C.A.F. as well as about 1,700 British and American officers.

The Dieppe officer had been left behind in this town because of the recurrence of an old knee strain. He said the Dieppe officers left in fairly good shape. For the last 10 days, in anticipation of such a move, they ate practically double rations from a batch which recently arrived in Red Cross parcels. They carried more Red Cross food with them.

They weren't downhearted about the move and the officer said nothing ever got them down. They figured their freedom would not be long delayed.

I crossed Germany, north to south, to cover the liberation of the Dieppe prison camp. I was standing in the square talking to some jubilant British officers and trying to find out where the Canadians were located when the Canadian Dieppe officer appeared.

He disclosed the bad news of the movement of the others. Later I talked to him for several hours. He probably will leave the camp for England under the evacuation plan of an organization which looks after freed Allied prisoners-of-war.

In capturing this town the Americans freed about 150 other officers and men in addition to the three Canadian officers. All had been left behind after being moved to town from the prison camp.

The camp was filled with 6,000 Russians, Polish and Serbian prisoners, marched recently from Neurnberg, and they also were liberated.

I met British officers who had been kept prisoner for five years, men captured with the British Expeditionary Force in France. There were others from the desert, Australians from Crete, New Zealanders from Crete, South Africans from Italy.

Heart of Capital's Business District Attacked by Reds

Swift Russian Columns Pass Berlin to Meet Yanks

By MICHAEL DAVIDSON

London, April 26 (Reuters)—The Germans today said Russian shock troops were making an all-out assault on the police headquarters in the Alexander Platz, heart of Berlin's business district.

Red tanks and street-fighting squads were said to be only a few hundred yards from their objective.

Moscow reported the Red army had entered the central area and reached the region of the Goerlitzer station—Berlin's southeastern terminus.

Leaving Berlin to become a gigantic death trap, Russian fast-moving tanks and infantry were rapidly narrowing the gap between the Allied forces for a link-up with United States armies on the Elbe west of Berlin.

Russian storm units were making the conquest of the capital the world's greatest manhunt, other Moscow dispatches said. The Russians had been ordered to take Hitler alive if he still is in the capital as Nazi propagandists have declared.

Doubt Hitler in Capital.

The Russians were not too optimistic about finding the Fuehrer in Berlin, however. The Moscow radio observed that German reports of Hitler's presence in Berlin "are all lies and have been invented to stimulate a fierce defence of the capital."

Possibly 500,000 Germans were caught in the capital. The Hamburg radio asserted that propaganda Minister Goebbels still was in Berlin and that Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel also was in or near the city.

Hamburg radio began every newscast with the slogan: "The Fuehrer is in Berlin!"

1st Ukrainians Swarm Over Elbe.

In the German waist the 1st Ukrainian army swarmed over the historic Elbe barrier, toppling the best-bark fortress city of Riesa, 76 miles south of the capital and 22 miles from Allied-reported American positions on the Mulde River—only 18 miles from American bridgeheads on the Mulde as reported by the Germans.

Berlin's water, gas and food stores were running low, Moscow dispatches said, but the Germans fought bitterly in subways and on rubble-strewn street, under a rain of bombs and shells that plastered rail stations and Spree River bridges.

While German loud-speaker trucks goaded the defenders on, the city's airports were reported filled with planes evacuating high Nazi officials.

A Moscow communique said 6,-000 German officers and men were killed in yesterday's battles. The Moscow radio, meanwhile, said nearly 2,000,000 German troops had been killed or captured since Jan. 1, bringing to more than 11,000,-000 the Russian-reported German casualties for four years of war.

Port of Pillau Seized.

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, April 26 (AP) — A Russian war correspondent in Berlin reported today that virtually every German in the encircled city was now resisting the Soviet army's growing attack—"everyone able to hold a gun, shovel, axe or crowbar."

"But the Red Army cannot be kept from crushing the city," Major Sergei Penchalov, the writer, said. "Many men around me have Berlin addresses and scores to settle."

Russian artillery augmented by rocket-firing Katushas blasted the city from all sides today, no sector of the central area escaping the shells.

Tommy-gunners, red as Indians from clouds of brick dust rising from the debris, battled through barricaded streets seeking to rush the heart of the capital, where many high-ranking Nazis still may be found.

Muscovites impatiently awaited the expected announcement of a Russian-American link-up in the Elbe sector. It now was apparent that the news could come from several salients, anywhere from west of captured Riesa to the region of Stendal.

A late Tass dispatch said hundreds of Russians, Poles and Czechs had been liberated and were moving homeward while many Berliners were fleeing the battle zones "thinking the districts occupied by the Red Army are less dangerous."

More and more flags fluttered from Berlin's windows and her ruins — "like a washday" — Tass said.

MINUTE OF SILENCE

San Francisco, April 26 (AP) — The United Nations Conference was opened, at State Secretary Stettinius' request, with "one minute of silent, solemn meditation." Thus was compromised what had threatened to become somewhat of an issue—whether there should be an opening prayer.

Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Staplefords Honored By Congregation of Bridge St. Church

Upwards of 300 members of the congregation and organizations of Bridge Street United Church paid fitting farewell tribute to Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Stapleford, B.A., D.D., at an informal "At Home" in the Sunday School hall last night.

Dr. Stapleford has been acting as interim minister of the church since the Rev. Dr. James Semple accepted a Peterborough charge a few months ago. His successor, the Rev. Donald C. Ames, Toronto, will be inducted on May 6th. Dr. Stapleford will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday.

Tangible appreciation of the service and inspiration given by the departing minister was evidenced in the presentation of a handsome nest of tables to Dr. and Mrs. Stapleford. The presentation was made by Mr. R. Newton Thompson who later in humorous vein described the many "complaints" received and which Dr. Stapleford had satisfactorily settled.

The minister moved by the element of sentiment, expressed the grateful appreciation of himself and Mrs. Stapleford for the gift, and added his thanks for the many acts or kindness shown them during their brief tenure here. He had not done all he would have liked to have done due to the brevity of his stay, he said, adding that he had learned to like and admire the city and its people.

Policies of C.C.F., Lab-Progs., Liberals Sharply Criticized By W.M. Nickle of Kingston

Urges Voters to Elect Sound and Safe Administration Under Col. George A. Drew

Stirling, April 25—(Staff)—Levelling sharp criticism at the policies of the C.C.F., the Labor Progressive and the "Mitch Hepburn Liberals", W. M. Nickle, K.C., Kingston, Conservative, told West Hastings Progressive Conservatives in Stirling Memorial Hall yesterday afternoon that the Conservative party was the only one that could stay on their land as long as they lived, but could not be driven off by any one. Answering Mackenzie King, he said, "that stated that the "British Commonwealth was in grave danger."

"My answer to that is 'There'll Always be an England, and England shall be free'."

Canadians have worked hard, he said, to put something by for their old age or for their sons on the farm and if ever there was a reason for the C.C.F. it was to steal from the C.C.F. the answer is in their wanting their farms for their sons and daughters. The C.C.F. only commands 100 per cent against individual ownership of property.

Would Take Over Banks Too

"Do you realize," he asked, "that if the C.C.F. party gets into power it has said it will take over the banks? If it does, it has said that we must get the nod from the C.C.F. and farmers' banks and loan companies will be subservients of the party. Do you call that stifling of progress? All these people have done all we have worked for and strived for, for our children, will be done."

The speaker's answer to Mr. Stephen's manifesto was, "The Conservative party is not for sale."

He termed the Labor Progressive Party as synonymous with Mr. McLeod, "no more no less than Communists, who differ from us in relation to independent saving for old age." In a speech in Hamilton the prime reported that Tim Buck, the Labor Progressive organizer, had said "Mackenzie King, be hoped the Russian revolution would be duplicated in Canada."

"The C.C.F. is a militant party, which would like to overthrow our Labor Progressive way of life in relation. Now we have the right to protect what we have gained for you."

Mr. Nickle stated the Workmens Compensation Act was the highest standard leaf of bread, the doing away with late Workmens Act, old Age Pension Act and the Lieu and Standers Act were Conservative measures.

R. D. Arton, K.C., who introduced Mr. Nickle, said that the reason for the unwanted election thrown upon the people by the Hepburn Liberals was because Hepburn desired to throw a monkey wrench into Ontario's politics to open the gates for Mackenzie King who stands up and says, "Now I am Napoleon." Hepburn does not expect to go in as Ontario leader but he'll say Jr. father, but his father's worry, his influence will mean so much. Our opposition will be the C.C.F."

He charged that Ontario Liberal leader with following a policy of obstructionism all the way in parliament, during the past six weeks of its life, the Government was not permitted to do anything. Hepburn lined up his strings behind Rollings, Mr. Arton charged, Nickle, and worked the C.C.F. into position where they supported the Government. He defended the Government, he said.

Responsible for the election lies on the shoulders of Hepburn, Joliffe and McLeod "who set out to muddle the Government."

Mr. Arton termed the Hepburn administration of 1937-1942 "absolutely disgraceful exhibition of petty graft and corruption." Under the Conservative administration with its policies all or which were implemented as far as the opposition would permit, "If Drew had not done another thing than assume 50 per cent of educational costs, he would deserve the return of his Government. Our objective was not ninety per cent as urged by Hepburn but the total amount of the cost. And that is coming, he declared.

"The major concern of any government," he concluded, "was the health, welfare and education of the children so they could be physically and mentally fit. Not the major problem at present and one that requires attention is the rehabilitation of our returned men."

George S. White, M.P.

The Progressive Conservative party promises the coming election, Mr. Geo. S. White, Hastings-Peterboro, M.P. declared in an address at a Trenton campaign, when the present Prime Minister is overthrown.

"He had heard a report," he said, "that Mr. Joliffe, C.C.F. head, was going to Ottawa to discuss foreign crown companies which would operate in Canada. "Crown companies are opposed to government control and want all privately owned enterprises. United States Labor leaders had been threatening to send Labor Leaders to Canada to "free man wanted free enterprises."

In the plea on behalf of the Conservative candidates running on election day will be those with seven in the Hastings riding.

Mr. George H. Boyce, M.P., said that the Liberals had deliberately set the cards since North Grey and did not want the parliamentary seat. It will go to a Conservative winning in Ontario. He stated that a great many pieces of important legislation had been brought in by returned soldier members, namely The "First In, First Out" policy; Veterans' Affairs; Increased Gratuity allowances, pension allowances and disability pensions. He urged all to get out and vote so that the result "will not be in doubt."

Orders Drew "who got on his platform and stood on it". Mr. Nickle told the convention it should be the people who had his best in the riding and province. If not he would be willing to withdraw at the convention's choice.

Mr. Nickle made observations for the past 45 years, Gen. Mackenzie, Gen. Currie, Sir Arthur Meighen, Sir Robert Borden, for the past forty-five. Mackenzie King, he said, was responsible for the "worst election on war issues" and the "worst election on domestic issues" when he "set out to muddle the Government."

Mr. Nickle declined the honor offered nomination.

Reviewing his record as mayor of the city of Belleville in which office he served seven years, he said that his regime was responsible for many improvements and the city's debt. He had also inaugurated several civic improvements. Many of these men have since done. He was opposed by the Labor Progressives as it was imposed on real estate.

He was the president of the Ontario Property Owners' Association, he told the convention and that organization had served as a check whereby the building trades would not run away with the people. He had been called in to advise the Minister of Labor of several subjects also on municipal affairs. It elected he would take up the cudgels for the Ontario Property owners and the taxpayers as a whole.

False Statements Claimed.

Producing printed advertising that Premier Col. George Drew of promising to give the Roman Catholics 3 1-2 million dollars, Mr. Nickle expressed "certain organizations of uttering false statements." "That is false," he said. "Every Protestant and separate schools get their rightful share of the grants. Col. Drew or any other leader had not promised them a cent. Premier Hepburn said, Mr. Nickle declared, had promised in 1943 50 per cent of educational costs would be borne by his government. He has hope this year to have 50 per cent, while public schools are getting this grant on the basis of average attendance, Drew has appropriated 32 millions of dollars to schools of the province. Public and separate schools will get several 18 millions of the, and the 14 millions allowed in advertising is the amount. We repeat he did not promise 50 per cent of the amount was given to separate schools of the province. Not a penny more than that given to public or high schools."

Drew Will Win

Dr. Carleton felt he would like to thank Col. Drew on his appointment. "There should be some way to elimate the C.C.F. from the political scene, because when the bluster is gone there is nothing left. It is an Trenton, April 26 — Squadron Leader Lloyd H. Kerr, D.F.C., R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kerr, Hotel Clifford, Trenton, who was reported missing after taking operations over enemy territory on July 12th, has now been believed to be dead according to official word received by Mr. and Mrs. Kerr.

Known as Trenton's flying ace with nine enemy planes to his credit before being reported missing, S/L. Kerr had made a name for himself, being mentioned in despatches and D.F.C. with bar awarded. He landed in England early in November, 1942.

The young squadron leader was prominent in sports and especially boating and hockey.

He is survived by his parents and four sisters, Mary and Betty, at home; Rosemary Mrs. Hector Carver with the R.C.A.F. (WD), and serving as Sister in the R.C.A.F. Hospital at St. Thomas, Ont.; and Dorothy Sister Mrs. H. F. McGill, who after twenty months with the British Emergency Service, recently returned from England.

New Reported Safe.

A graduate of Cagoode Hall and a barrister with a leasehold practice in Owen Sound and Meaford before enlisting two years ago with the R.C.A.F., Flying Officer R. MacIntyre Aylesworth, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Aylesworth, Trenton, who was reported missing a few weeks ago, is now safe in Britain. His parents received a cable from him this week, also official notification from Ottawa.

He is a graduate of Trenton High School, the University of Toronto, and the Osgoode Hall Law School, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Latest reports indicate that another one-third of the German capital is now in Russian hands.

Sordid Cases Heard in Court

Trenton, April 26—Some of the most sordid cases for a considerable time came before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday, with Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, K.C., prosecuting.

A youth, who recently escaped from an institution, appeared in juvenile court on a charge of indecent assault against a teen-age girl. After considerable evidence by a number of officials and other witnesses, including a married woman, whom he had chased, the youth was committed to a hospital for observation for sixty days.

Two youths came up in the same court, one for breaking and entering College Street School twice within the past month and on each occasion stealing a sum of money and doing damage to the school property. His parent offered to make restitution, and he was put on probation for one year by the court. The same lad, with another youth, broke into a grocery store on West Street stealing a sum of money, and the same sentence was given in this case. A similar sentence was given the second lad.

Walter Deline appeared on two charges of gross indecency and was remanded for sentence for one week.

A counter charge of assault was made by both a man and his wife. The husband was defended by Allan MacNab and the case was enlarged for one month.

Michael Tochynski, Lewis Fuelle and Leslie Lobuk were remanded for a week they appeared on and a charge of trespassing on the railway.

B. Smith, charged with a breach of the Highway Traffic Act paid $10.00 and costs as did D. Gaughler. He paid the usual $10.00 and costs for Breach of the Liquor Control Act and one who was out on bail failed to appear and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

J. Wilson for breach of the Highway Traffic Act paid $4.50.

G. Harvey failed to appear on a charge of breach of the Game and Fisheries Act and a warrant was issued.

Two other cases were enlarged for one week.

L-Sgt. John Fyfe Awarded French Croix de Guerre

Lance Sergeant John William Fyfe of this city, and a member of the Royal Canadian Artillery overseas, has been awarded the Croix de Guerre, with Bronze Star, by the French Government, the Department of National Defence announced today.

The award was made "in recognition of gallant and distinguished conduct in the cause of the Allies."

Sergt. Fyfe's citation reads: "Sgt. Fyfe served in France with a Canadian anti-tank regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery. During this campaign he was promoted from L/Bdr. to the rank of sergeant as a result of exceptional good service. On August 12, 1944, during the push south from Caen, he was in charge of a gun detachment deployed with the forward infantry in a small salient at St. Hilaire Petit, subjected to a counter-attack by Panzer-Grenadiers. Despite the fact that his position was very heavy shelling, mortaring and machine gun fire, and danger of being overrun was imminent. Due to heavy casualties the infantry was very thin on the ground and when the enemy attack did materialize they were forced to withdraw a short distance. Sgt. Fyfe remained in his position in command of the infantry. With cool determination he brought fire to bear on the "bull-down" tank for over two hours, constantly reassuring his men and often exposing himself to enemy fire. The personal courage and determination of this non-commissioned officer helped materially in maintaining the salient until the reinforcements arrived and the position was restored."

Americans Dent Stubborn Jap Okinawa Defence

Guam, April 26 (AP) — American ease advancement on the southern Okinawa front have eased all immediate key terrain positions, a U.S. 10th Army announcement announced today.

These include Makasa Ridge, Kastes town, strategic hills and the important 178 on the east coast. Japan's southern Okinawa defence wall was breached after nine days of fierce fighting, and frontline dispatches indicate attacking forces are well into the enemy's secondary line.

Meier, scandalous suicidal, resistance cost Japan nearly 19 times as many troops killed as the Invaders lost in ground fighting, admiral Nimitz' communique said today.

Men of the 24th Army Corps and Marine 3rd Amphibious Corps killed 21,369 Japanese and captured 299 on Okinawa and surrounding islands from April 1 until dawn yesterday. This is one-third of the enemy's estimated force.

American casualties were 1,146 killed in ground action, 5,262 were wounded and 396 missing through Sunday.

Naval casualties for the period March 18-April 18 and included several carrier plane attacks from Tokyo to Formosa and 100, of which 369 were killed. Japanese navy casualties have not been estimated, but must have been high. One hundred enemy ships, including the 45,000-ton battleship Yamato, were sunk in the March 18-April 18 period.

Ground troops, supported by tactical naval bombardment and low-level aerial attacks, forged ahead at main pace, making gains on both the central and eastern sectors of the "Little Siegfried line."

German Crime in Holland

The enormity of the German crime against civilization grows. Even as the war sweeps swiftly to its close revelations are coming that stagger the imagination in the confirmation of atrocities in German concentration camps whose victims number possibly hundreds of thousands and in the accounts of wanton damage done by the enemy wherever it has been possible for him to put his destroying hand to work.

New York Times draws attention to the terrible crime which the Germans did in the Netherlands by flooding the country so that one fourth of the little Kingdom is under the waters of the sea. The result is that a large section of the Dutch people are slowly starving.

"No one can measure the extent of this Dutch tragedy for it is not yet fully revealed," says the Times, referring to the fact that "not a stalk of grain springs from those salted meadows." The paper adds that "Holland may yet turn out to be the most devastated country in Europe, not excepting war-swept Germany itself. At least the soil of Germany has not been poisoned, grass will soon grow again in the German ruins. But Holland has been set back three centuries, to a time when she had not yet locked out the North Sea. It will take years of constant labor and uncounted wealth to restore these flooded lands to fertility. There are great districts where the water has risen above the rooftops. Industry and transportation as well as agriculture are paralyzed."

The Times mentions the report that the Dutch Government "will demand territorial compensation from Germany, by the accession of West Frisia and a strip along the Dutch east coast where dispossessed farmers could raise crops to feed their own people. If that is what the Dutch want, they are entitled to have it. No nation large or small can present a stronger claim against the common enemy."

Meanwhile the Allies have food at hand to help out the people of the country but as the Times says, the Dutch cannot be expected to live on charity until their farmlands are restored. Hence their claim for compensation in territory.

Goebbels' "Lucky Star"

Goebbels in the last wail which was heard from him said, "We are witnessing the last acts of a tremendous tragedy. The decision is very near." And then he said, "Let us stake our hopes on our lucky star."

Where Goebbels is, the outside world (that means the world outside of the one-sixth of Germany that remained yesterday in Nazi hands), does not know, and it is certain that few in the 31,000 square miles of Germany left to the Huns know where he is.

What is the hope and the luck star Goebbels was referring to? Is it that resistance can hold back the victorious armies of the United Nations when the German armies are smashed and remnants may be fighting in separated pockets like bandits? Or is it the old futile hope that something will break the Allied friendship, when everything shows that there was never so full an alliance as today that of the United Nations is?

The insincerity and the bunk of the adulation and fawning of Germans before Hitler were never seen in more detestable light than in the words of Goebbels: "When we prayed on the eve of Hitler's birthday in earlier, happier days, we must repeat now more urgently to him: that he may be preserved to us, that he may remain what he is to us and always has been to us, our Fuehrer."

The maddest dream of all is that of a guerilla war in the southern Alps, said to be in Nazi minds. But while and if the Nazi chiefs are in hiding for their cowardly lives, the United Nations will be in occupation of Germany, giving Germany under the occupation the first taste of real law and order it ever experienced. Hitler's miniature war if he can stage one from the "hideout" cannot take the place of the war that threw him and all the Nazis into flight, destroyed German armies of millions and took all authority from them and vanquished Prussianism.

End of German Navy

The sinking, by the Royal Air Force, of the German battleship "Admiral Scheer" on April 9th begins the last chapter in the record of systematic destruction of the German fleet begun over five years ago when the "Graf Spee," sister ship of the "Admiral Scheer," was sent to her doom by the superior fighting quality and seamanship of the British cruisers, "Exeter," "Achilles" and "Ajax."

It is fitting to remember that the British fleet, which is being thrown more and more into the war against Japan, has already defeated the navies of two great European powers.

This war, from a naval point of view, has been very different from the last. In European waters there has been no question of great battle fleets opposing each other in direct combat as there was at the Battle of Jutland. It has been, rather, a matter of seeking out the enemy's big warships wherever they might be found and pursuing them until they have finally been destroyed.

The British Navy has had to adapt itself to these new conditions. It has had to await its chances and then strike; a slow process and one which requires infinite patience and skill. But the job has been done. Almost all the German battleship strength has been destroyed. Only the "Gneisenau," lying in Gydnia dismantled, the "Lutzow" and a few cruisers remain afloat. The "unsinkable" "Bismarck" was systematically hunted and destroyed by British warships and naval aircraft in May, 1940. The "Scharnhorst" was sunk off the North Cape by fleet units under the command of Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, present Commander-in-Chief of the British Pacific fleet, in December, 1943.

The "Tirpitz" was sunk at her moorings by the R.A.F. in November, 1944, after being crippled by midget submarine attack and Naval Air Arm attacks.

The cruisers "Konigsberg" and "Karlsruhe" were destroyed by submarines and naval aircraft respectively. The "Blucher" perished under the guns of the Oslo forts in the spring of 1940.

This takes no account of the smaller ships and U-boats which have been destroyed by the Royal Navy. Battles against E-boats, destroyers and U-boats are unceasing in a war of this kind. They still continue even now, when Germany is virtually a defeated nation. But in any naval conflict it is the enemy's battle fleet, no matter what form it may take, that must be brought to action and destroyed. This, the Royal Navy with the co-operation of the Royal Air Force, has achieved, and the Naval Air Arm, too, has played a very great part.

Not only the Germans have been driven from the seas. The far more formidable Italian battle fleet ended its career when the proud words of Admiral Cunningham's signal were flashed to a waiting Admiralty:

"Be pleased to inform Their Lordships that the Italian fleet now lies at anchor beneath the guns of Malta."

There will be no signal similar to that of Admiral Cunningham when the German fleet surrenders—there will be no guns to guard them—the sea they hoped to conquer is their grave.

Horrible—and Unescapable

(New York Herald Tribune)

The newspapers do not want to print these things (reports of German atrocities); but they cannot help it, for these things are an incontestable part of the record of our times. Newsreels edit out the worst, but the worst is there, none the less. One cannot hide under the comfortable defence that it is all just "propaganda" or "exaggeration," because it is not. The depths of sadism and brutality which were released when Nazism deliberately turned its back upon the dignity of the individual and built a philosophy of government upon the denial of the moral code of civilized man constitute one of the fundamental facts of our age.

They lose the world who buy it with much care.—Shakespeare.

BOOK LOVER'S DREAM

Last night I fell into a dream
  Which greatly troubled me.
I never thought by any scheme
  So tempted I could be.

Within a friendly bookshop where
  They let me browse alone,
I came across a volume rare
  I long have wished to own.

'Twas tossed upon the common stall,
  Among the ten-cent lot—
A treasure worth a fortune small.
  The dealer knew it not.

I knew the bookman didn't know
  That gem in buckram clad,
But should I boldly rob him so,
  Or tell him what he had?
What choice made I? My Nellie spoke

  To save me loss of pride.
And glad am I that I awoke
  Before I could decide.

Marines Make Themselves at Home

Editor's Note: In addition to the story which appears here today, we will print several others which we have just received from Ernie on Okinawa. We believe he would have wanted us to. As a great reporter, a great newspaperman and a great person, he would have wanted his stories to go through, despite his tragic death.

By ERNIE PYLE

Okinawa— (by Navy radio) —It's marvelous to see a bunch of American troops go about making themselves at home wherever they get a chance to settle down for a few days.

My company of First Division marines dug in at the edge of a bomb-shattered village. The village was quaint and not without charm. I was astonished at the similarity with the villages of Sicily and Italy.

The town didn't really seem Oriental. The houses were wooden one-storey buildings, surrounded by little vegetable gardens. Instead of fences, each lot was divided by rows of shrubs or trees. The cobblestoned streets were just wide enough for a jeep. They were winding and walled on both sides by head-high stone walls.

A good part of the town lay shattered. Scores of the houses had burned and only ashes and red roofing tile were left. Wandering around, I counted the bodies of four Okinawans still in the streets. Otherwise the town was deserted.

The people had fled to their caves in the hillsides, taking most of their personal belongings with them. There is almost no furniture in Japanese houses, so they didn't have to worry about that.

After a few days the grapevine carried the word to them that we were treating them well so they began to come out in droves and give themselves up. I heard one story about a hundred Okinawa civilians who had a Jap soldier among them, and when they realized the atrocity stories he had told them about the Americans were untrue, our MPs had to step in to keep them from beating him.

* * *

Our company commander picked out a nice little house on a rise at the edge of town for his command post.

The house was very light, fairly clean, and the floors were covered with woven straw mats. A couple of officers and a dozen men moved into the house and slept on the floor and we cooked our rations over an open stone cookstove in the rear.

Then the word went around for the men of the company to dig in for several days. Two platoons were assigned to dig in along the outer sides of the nearby hills for perimeter defense.

The boys were told they could keep the horses they had commandeered, that they could carry wooden panels out of the houses to make little doghouses for themselves, but not to take anything else, and that they could have fires, except during air alerts.

They weren't to start their daily mop-up patrols in the brush until the next day, so they had the afternoon off to clean themselves up and fix up their little houses.

Different men did different things. Some built elaborate houses about the size of chicken houses, with floor mats and chairs and even kerosene lanterns hanging from the roof.

One Mexican boy dug a hole, covered it with boards, and then camouflaged it so perfectly with brush you really couldn't see it.

Some spent the afternoon taking baths and washing clothes in the river. Some rode bicycles around town. Some rode their horses up and down. Some foraged around town through the deserted houses. Some went looking for chickens to cook. Some sat in groups and talked. Some just slept.

* * *

An order went out against wearing Jap clothing or eating any of the local vegetables, pork, goat, beef or fowl. But this was before the order came out.

The marines had dug up lots of Japanese kimonos out of the smashed houses and put them on while washing their one set of clothes. If you ever want to see a funny sight, just take a look at a few dozen dirty and unshaven marines walking around in pink and blue women's kimonos.

A typical example was Pvt. Raymond Adams of Pleason, Tenn. He had fixed himself a dugout right on the edge of a bluff above the river. He had a grand view and a nice little grassy front yard. Out there he had driven stakes and built a fire. He hung his helmet over the fire like a kettle and was stewing chicken. He had taken off his clothes and put on a beautiful pink and white kimono.

Later a friend came along with a Jap bicycle with one pedal off, and Adams tried without much success to ride it up and down a nearby lane.

If there ever is a war play about marines I hope they include one tough-looking private in a pink-and-white kimono, stewing chicken and trying to ride a one pedalled bicycle through a shattered Japanese village.

Private Adams is married and has a boy eight-months old he has never seen. If the baby could have seen his father that day he would probably have got the colic from laughing so much.

Neville Chamberlain

(The Ottawa Journal)

Prime Minister King, interviewed in Chicago on his way to the San Francisco Conference, speaking of international affairs, happened to say that he thought the world has not done justice to the late Neville Chamberlain who preceded Winston Churchill as Prime Minister of Great Britain. Mr. King's reference of course was to the criticism from which Mr. Chamberlain's memory has suffered owing to his visit to Munich in 1938 to endeavor to get Hitler to keep the peace.

We agree heartily with Mr. King. Mr. Chamberlain, we think, did a very noble thing by his visit to Munich in 1938. Cheap gisacres and hind sight critics are want to refer in a superior and scornful way to his visit to Munich as a lamentable attempt as "appeasement" which discreditably failed. We think that such critics are lamentably short of common sense.

Mr. Chamberlain had two choices before him in 1938. One was to try peacefully to persuade Hitler to desist from aggression; the other choice was to threaten war.

And Britain was in no position to fight.

Mr. Chamberlain took the only choice which any sane British leader with common sense would have taken at the time. He tried the pacific way. And he got a promise from Hitler that the latter, who had bagged Austria and seized the Sudenten from Czechoslovakia, would stop at that. Returning to London with what was believed to be an assurance of peace, Mr. Chamberlain was greeted with tremendous applause, which illustrated what was thought of his course all the time.

Hitler proved to be a liar. Mr. Chamberlain could not help that. Hitler attacked Poland; Britain went to war, and got a terrible thumping for a while; and most of the world has now been plunged in bloody war for nearly six years. This has been what Chamberlain tried to stop. Mr. Chamberlain's visit to Munich in 1938 got a promise of peace; and if war came nevertheless, war found Britain with a year's more preparation for it, which was utilized. All that would have followed had Mr. Chamberlain not gone to Munich would have been war a year earlier and Britain worse off.

Chamberlain is no more to be blamed for Britain's unpreparedness for war with Germany than his predecessors Baldwin and Ramsay MacDonald and their respective governments. Nor are these more to be criticized for the unpreparedness more than a majority of the British people. Any British prime minister between 1933 and 1938 who had advocated the promotion of a huge army and air force, as well as a greater navy, in what a majority of the British public would have thought to be a cock-and-bull alarm about an Austrian paperhanger, would have been put out of office—nor would his successor have been allowed to do any better.

We think with Mr. King that history will pay tribute to Neville Chamberlain.

Commandant of Nazi Concentration Camp Held as War Criminal

New York, April 26 — (CP)—A Polish Telegraph Agency dispatch from the German Front said today the commandant of the concentration camp at Aschendorf had set up fake anti-aircraft installations and wooden guns around the camp to attract Allied bombing, and that many prisoners had been killed when planes attacked the camp under the belief they were bombing a strong German position.

The commandant of the camp and his staff disguised themselves in civilian clothes and hid when the Allied planes demolished the camp. Their whereabouts were betrayed, however, by a captured German when Polish troops took Aschendorf, and they now are being held as war criminals.

VITAMINS VERSUS DOCTORED FLOUR

According to several correspondents one Dr. Quigley asserts in a book about nutrition in America that four out of every five cases of chronic illness are primarily due to years of malnutrition, moderate deficiencies in the everyday diet.

According to other correspondents Prof. Norman Jolliffe, a nutrition authority I have cited here many times, has recently made a similar assertion or estimate.

In striking contrast to the glib assurance we hear from some lesser authorities or bright young people writing magazine pieces debunking something or other, that one will get all the minerals and vitamins one needs if the diet is reasonably well balanced and includes liberal quantities or proportions of the "protective" foods — milk, eggs, fresh vegetables, fresh fruits, greens.

When I quoted her recently the estimate of Prof. Jolliffe that if one consumes his per capita amount of white flour and white sugar he must consume tremendous and impossible quantities of the so-called "protective" foods in order to get the vitamins and minerals required to maintain good nutrition—a food and nutrition officer serving in a great Army hospital remonstrated with me, said I gave a false impression to the public, and asserted that all planned Army diets or menus meet the requirements as recommended by National Research Council, so far as specific nutrients are concerned.

The officer cites a statement from a book by Col. Youmans, Chief of Nutrition, Surgeon General's Office, U.S. Army:

"We do not know much about the inter-relationship of vitamins or their relation to other constituents in the diet. Therefore, the order of use should be natural foods first, then concentrates of food or food-like substances such as yeast, cod liver oil, etc., and last by pure preparations."

Col. Youmans maintains that the amounts of such preparations (vitamin tablets, capsules etc.) needed for the prevention of malnutrition or deficiency disease are better provided and at less expense in food or food concentrates. That may be so, if you have the advice or guidance of a nutrition expert in selecting your food or food concentrates. For the ordinary layman I doubt that it is so.

This food and nutrition officer, taking me to task for suggesting that most people should supplement their diet with fair daily rations of vitamin B-complex, vitamin D and calcium, stipulates that the basic ration or menu which, he says, provides all the essential vitamins and minerals, shall include enriched flour.

Enriched flour is not a natural food. If we must use enriched flour in place of ordinary flour, in the planned adequate diet or menu, then there is little left to quarrel about. Personally, I'd rather take my vitamins and calcium for the day in one mouthful, than try to eat enough enriched flour to get enough vitamins to worry along with.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Forecasts of State Medicine

We need your booklets "Preparing for Maternity" and "Brady Baby Book." Wife is upset because each time she visits the. . . . a different doctor examines her and pays no attention to what the doctor told her last time. She came home yesterday and flatly stated she is through with "socialized medicine." (C.D.L. U.S.N.R.)

Answer—People who want socialized or state medicine should not be so finicky—one sardine in the can is no better, no worse than another. The booklets are free to service men or their wives who provide stamped self-addressed envelope. Ten cents each to others who ask for them and provide stamped self addressed envelope.

Minerals and Vitamins

Where may I secure data on the mineral and vitamin content of meats and dairy products. I have the———book relating to fruits and vegetables, also the Atwater bulletin relating to proteins, carbohydrates and fats. (B.G.A.)

Answer—Best sources I know are such textbooks as Rose's "Foundations of Nutrition," Sherman's "Chemistry of Food and Nutrition," McCollum's "Newer Knowledge of Nutrition."

WEALTH OF INDIES

The following inscription appears on the facade of the Union Station in Washington, D.C.:

"He that would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him. So it is in travelling; a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge."

This inscription, along with others on the same building, was suggested and edited by President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University. It was taken from James Boswell's "The Life of Samuel Johnson, LL.D." (1791), which contains the following passage under date of 1778:

"I said to him that it was certainly true, as my friend Dempster had observed in his letter to me upon the subject, that a great part of what was in his 'Journey to the Western Islands of Scotland' had been in his mind before he left London.

"Johnson: 'Why yes, Sir, the topics were; and books of travels will be good in proportion to what a man has previous in his mind; his knowing what to observe; his power of contrasting one mode of life with another. As the Spanish proverb says, 'He, who would bring home the wealth of the Indies, must carry the wealth of the Indies with him.' So it is in travelling; a man must carry knowledge with him, if he would bring home knowledge.'

"Boswell: 'The proverb, I suppose, Sir, means, he must carry a large stock with him to trade with.'

"Johnson: 'Yes, Sir.'"

This "Spanish proverb" has never been traced to any other source and may have been original with Dr. Johnson.

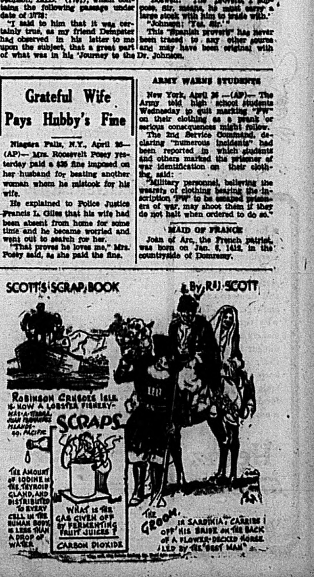
ARMY WARNS STUDENTS

New York, April 26 —(AP)— The Army told high school students Wednesday to quit marking "PW" on their clothing as a prank or serious consequences might follow.



The 2nd Service Command, declaring "numerous incidents" had been reported in which students and others marked the prisoner of war identification on their clothing, said:

"Military personnel, believing the wearers of clothing bearing the inscription 'PW' to be escaped prisoners of war, may shoot them if they do not halt when ordered to do so."

AIR TRANSPORTS LINK CANADA TO LABRADOR BASE

Regular "Berry Runs" Carry Millions of Pounds of Freight to Far Northern R.C.A.F. Stations

(By JACK BRAYLEY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Goose Bay, Labrador, April 26 —(CP)—A visitor can get to this Canadian base in the white northern fastness if he has a priority and doesn't mind sitting for three or four hours on a bucket seat designed for paratroopers and dangling his legs over a mail bag.

If you make the trip you'll be part of the million pounds of passengers and freight carried each month by the big Dakota transports of the R.C.A.F. Transport Command that have hauled everything from pigs to snowplows.

Focal point of the R.C.A.F.T.C. eastern activities is Moncton, N.B. It is from here that passengers and freight originating in Canadian and United States points are routed to R.C.A.F. stations in Goose, Iceland, Gander and Tor Bay.

The various lines are called "berry runs" The original berry—the Blueberry—goes to Moncton by way of Montreal and flies over the blueberry plains of New Brunswick. The "Ganderberry" goes to that big Newfoundland base and the "Gooseberry" of course has this station as its destination.

A passenger for Goose can board the "Blueberry" at Rockcliffe and be in Moncton in three or four hours riding comfortable, regulation airline seats. Flt.-Lt. John Fitzpatrick, formerly supplying the British 14th Army in Burma, may be the pilot.

The passenger transfers at Moncton to the "Gooseberry" and bucket seats and in another three or four hours, depending on headwinds and weather, he arrives here. Sqdn.-Ldr. Don Forbes of Fredericton may be at the controls of this run over the ice-cluttered Gulf of St. Lawrence and vast Anticosti Island.

Moncton is a hub and there you meet members of every service and civilian government personnel bound for some distant outpost on vital war missions. Here they are issued with Arctic clothing and kit.

Pilot's Problems Many.

Busiest man here is Flt.-Lt. Roy McCarthy of Regina, a former accountant in civilian life, who says that any mathematical problem he ever faced in civilian life is dwarfed in size to some of the difficulties confronting him when a spell of bad weather piles up a backlog of passengers at Moncton.

Then he has to sort out colonels, group captains, commanders and dollar-a-year men and try and match priorities with available plane space. "And what a lousy job it is at times," he said with a rueful smile. On a recent Saturday McCarthy cleared 151 service passengers in an hour and three quarters — including documentation, baggage checking and other formalities.

The transports follow regular commercial line procedure and questions are anticipated as they are on the big trans-continental air lines. Hourly bulletins, signed by the captain, tell you position, altitude, temperature, air speed, ground speed, estimated arrival time and weather conditions at terminal.

But the informality, encouraged by the bucket seats and litter of cargo at your feet, is more marked in these service flights than on the commercial lines. It is not unusual to see a passenger rise from his cold metal seat, guide himself along the static line—put in the plane for paratroops—to a pile of mail bags and stretch himself out comfortably for a snooze under heavy service blankets.

Keeping the Eyes in Harmony with Good Looks

Dorothy McGuire has beautiful eyes.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Selecting eye glasses is not not the casual matter it was when everybody wore dark lorioles shell frames, fairly academic and owlish. Now you have a wide choice of frames and lenses. The opticians will offer suggestions as to smartness and becomingness. Pay heed to his words. In his own way, he is a bit of a beautician.

Make glasses inconspicuous and they become a part of your portrait, not an accessory. They can scale features into better balance, believe it or not. It is wise to select frames that blend with your skin tones.

Suitable Styles.

To make the round face seems more of an oval appearance, deep square lenses and a high nose piece are recommended by specialists who have delved into the subject. Oblong faces need a low bridge piece are for the girl with a long, thin face and high forehead. The length of the nose can be shortened in appearance by a low, straight bridge piece.

Opticians have thought of everything. They offer, in addition to temple, a straight, blunt bow that slips in and out of the hair without disarranging the coiffure.

Then you must wear specs, style your hair in the most youthful manner possible to counteract the mature effect that glasses give, though that rule of course won't do for the misses or juniors.

The casual type of chapeau is best if one wears glasses with heavy shell rims. Because glasses tend to dim the eyes, a touch of lashes should not be darkened with mascara. One can even touch the far ends of the eyes with a bit of black crayon to make them look larger. Eye shadow is distinctly out as lenses make this artifice too apparent.

Lastly: when having eyebrows arched your eye glasses as the pattern will conform, or at least be harmonious to the shape of the lenses.

WEDDINGS

POUND—COULTER

A particularly lovely Spring wedding took place in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Rollin, on Saturday morning, April 21, when Laura Eileen, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Coulter, of Roslin, became the bride of Stanley Franklin Pound, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pound, of Corbyville. The Rev. T. C. Jones read the lines declaring clergyman, Perna, daffodils, snapdragons, and lilies adorned the church. Miss Phyllis Beatty, of Hallowey, cousin of the bride, governed in a floor length Brian blue net over taffeta dress, presided at the organ.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. She was radiantly gowned in a wedding dress of blush satin. The lace bodice was fashioned with sweetheart neckline, and long, tight fitting sleeves that ended in points over her wrists. A full sweeping skirt fell in graceful folds from a basque-tight bodice. Her fingertip bridal veil of tulle fell from a pleated halo. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and snowcarnations.

Miss Marion Coulter, as her sister's maid of honour, wore white sheer with lace insets. It was fashioned in torso effect and the neckline was in sweetheart design.

Miss Audrey Hall, of Plainfield, and Miss Iona Carter, of Point Anne, cousins of the bride, acted as bridesmaids and were lovely gowns of taffeta in pastel pink and lavender hues respectively. They were made in long effect with full skirts and sweetheart necklines. The bride's attendants wore corsets of flowers in matching hues and carried dainty nosegays of carnations, roses and sweetpeas.

Mr. Harold Pound, of Corbyville, acted as his brother's groomsman. The ushers were ushered in their seats by Mr. Clare Cocking of Roslin, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Ross Pound, of Corbyville, cousin of the groom.

During the signing of the register, Miss Reeva Walker, of Belleville, cousin of the groom stirred in a floor-length gown of pink chiffon, rendered delightful "Pleasant".

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Hotel Quinte at Belleville. The bride's mother chose an orchid crepe ensemble accentuated with black accessories and corsage of American Beauty rose. The groom's mother wore a British navy crepe costume with matching accessories and corsage of American Beauty rose.

On the wedding trip to Buffalo, New York, the bride selected a cocoa brown tailored suit and a grey Shag cloth coat. She wore a gold hat mated with veiling. Her accessories were brown and her corsage was of yellow rosebuds.

The bride's gifts to her attendants, pianist and soloist, were pearl necklaces. The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver, to the groomsman and ushers, sterling silver tie clips.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Pound will take up residence in Belleville.

Hospital Auxiliary Bridge Proves Most Successful

Figurative laurel wreaths go to Mrs. J. C. Redmond and the committee for the very fine bridge sponsored by the Hospital Auxiliary in the Nurses' Residence on Wednesday evening, April 18th. Lottery tickets, secured by her committee, arranged the bridge, and by their combined ideas and strong and whole-hearted co-operation with the auxiliary executive, the preparations for the affair made it an overwhelming success. The auxiliary's annual event attracted a capacity crowd to the Nurses' Residence.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. J. R. Aprans, president of the Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. R. M. Wray, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Miss E. L. Horton, superintendent of Nursing, assisted by a number of nurses-in-training, served the guests with very delicious refreshments at the conclusion of the bridge playing.

BEAUTY By HELEN JAMESON

Young Ladies Must Be Slender

Every woman wants to cut a pretty figure. Mrs. Slippy does not. She wants to cut a fat one. She is afraid of little frail ones. In public conveyances she hates a survey before she tries to squeeze into a seat. She thinks her fat-developed hips that ride up and spoils the lines of her dress. She thinks of her fat arms as "meat on the hoof" for male relatives who, as they were numbered among the slaughtered and salted animals, greeted her with moos. Is it possible that she is going the way of all flesh?

To make matters worse, it usually happens that Mrs. Slippy's fat-loving family considers ridiculously young-looking and slender. If she ponders over a dress pattern, they insist that it will drape to her necks, do something to her hips to fit her or they'll be unable to recognize her. In fact, it will make her feel fatter and meaner. Whatever amount of fattening foods she is allowed, she must eat only one-thirds. These comments are fair samples of what Mrs. Slippy's family and associates say when she wants to reduce. Sweets, fat-developing foods like white bread and butter, take the place of fruits, which are eaten by peaches or candy. She can't resist pastries, cakes, pies, but vegetables, fruit, fruit juices, poultry, milk, cottage cheese, all kinds of green salads. On this simple diet she will lose at least a pound a week.

Perhaps Mrs. Slippy has never given serious thought to the psychological possibilities of a slenderizing corset. If so, she should seek out a high class corsetiere who will know exactly what she needs. With spread anklebips, it is necessary to wear a garment that has added support in front as well as at the back. If the brassiere is attached, it will make the bust more shapely, more in proportion to the abdomen.

When wearing foundation and brassiere, there may be a space tire between them that gives the torso an awkward bulge. Whatever you buy, have it fit fairly snugly, so it will give support in the portion of the anatomy south of the waistline, and not bunch at the waist line. Many all-in-one garments for heavy figures are made with clever and comfortable adjusting devices. The corsetiere will know what is best.

When having a fitting, sit down in the new harness, stoop over, lift your arms, bend the body to the waistline. Notice if the breasts are pushed up, dragged down or pushed up; they should have support, they should not be bound.

Thighs must be nearly half with never a crease in the corset, and there should be no sign of a bun to form a cross line at the back when you wear summer frocks. Buy wisely and you will hear some friend remark: "Oh, my! How your figure has improved".

Get Maximum Efficiency From the Refrigerator

Refrigerator plays an important role in the preparation of meals at any time, but particularly in summer when appetites are apt to be poor.

Here's how things hot and cold should work: Cold foods should be thoroughly chilled to bring out the flavour. Baked, browned and steamed foods should be washed, cooled in water, shaken off, then stored in a loosely covered container to permit the cold air to circulate. Then an attractive salad can be produced in a few additional minutes.

The home economist of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests the following ways of making the most out of your refrigerator.

Proper storage of food is important. Keep it covered to prevent drying out, and cover strongly with waxed paper. Keep uncovered — butter, milk and any other foods which have readily tainted by the absorption of odours.

Place strong-flavored foods close to the top in a moderately warm part of the refrigerator. Fish may be placed in the tray directly below the freezing unit without contaminating other foods. Uncooked meats also may be kept in this tray, as the temperature there is slightly above freezing.

Do not store bananas in the refrigerator.

Cover left-overs, in order to retain their flavor, and also sterilize food odors within the refrigerator as far as possible.

The refrigerator can be a real time-saver for the cook. Here, for instance, are a few foods which can be prepared in advance:

1.—Light syrups for sweetening summer beverages.

2.—Sauces—chocolate sauce to serve with ice cream.

Custard sauce to serve with chilled desserts.

White sauce (medium) to serve with vegetables, fish and other dishes, and diluted, in cream soups.

3.—Chilled desserts—fruit whips, jelly puddings, Spanish cream, etc.

4.— Refrigerator cookies, which require less flour and also are crisper. (Try any such recipe, then and find, as may may be baked when needed, or when the oven has been heated for other purposes.

5.—Frozen desserts — sherbets, water ices, etc., (made in a mechanical refrigerator).

6.— Refrigerator rolls. As the temperature in a mechanical refrigerator can be kept below 45 degrees Fahrenheit, yeast doughs can be stored for a week and baked, as required. In an ice-refrigerator the temperature is usually above 45 degrees Fahrenheit, which is sufficiently warm to permit the growth of the yeast. Therefore it is not practical to store yeast doughs for more than 24 hours in an ice-refrigerator.

Refrigerator Rolls

2 cups boiling water
1 1-2 tablespoons salt
1 to 1-2 cup sugar
3 tablespoons mild-flavored fat
2 yeast cakes
1-4 cup lukewarm water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 egg
6 cups flour

To the boiling water add the salt, sugar and mild-flavoured fat. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve yeast cakes in lukewarm water which has been mixed with 1 teaspoon sugar. Then stir and add yeast mixture and beaten egg to first mixture. Add flour and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl, cover, and allow to rise until double in bulk. Knead, and if dough is to be stored in refrigerator place in a greased bowl, brush surface with mild-flavored fat and cover tightly until required. Remove from refrigerator at least 1 hour before baking and shape into rolls.

If rolls are to be baked without storing in refrigerator, shape into rolls immediately and place on greased pan of 2 inches thin. Allow to rise until double in size. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit, for 15-20 minutes. Makes four dozen rolls.

The Marry Go Round

Danger Ahead!

The gentleman is probably in the most dangerous position of the whole Front at this time of year. It is the heady moment when he is likely to make the mistake of his life, a ghastly and ill-considered marriage.

Each spring, every eligible and attractive civilian goes around, warily, with his hand on his pulse, an eye on his lips and self-preservation in his heart. He is suffering from an allergy—the allergy against marriage. He wishes that he could take out some sort of insurance against making a fool of himself. Every girl who smiles at him looks like a danger signal.

But the gay creature on furlough is unarmed and off his guard. He is eager for fetching companionship and in his mellowest and most unpredictable mood. He is the prey for that matter; and she can work up a lot of tenderness and heroism-worship for almost any pretentious man in uniform.

Every man has his softer and more responsive moods and his other moods when he is anti, sane and girl-proof, so long as a man is lucky, eager and contented and his friends are plentiful and life is full of interest, he need look fear that he will slide into a foolish marriage. He is emotionally well-balanced.

But when he is lonely or has been lonely for a long time, as the serviceman has, and is feeling a little sorry for himself, he is likely to fall in love with the first girl who will listen to his troubles and sympathize with him or brighten up his life for an evening. You know how it is.

So long as a man is absorbed in his work and filled with ambitions and business-schemes from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., he hasn't much time or thought left for romance. But the serviceman who has been sent home for a rest or is having long hours of waiting in the field, between the sentimental stages of battle, has lots of time to think of girls—and he is apt to fall in love walker-caught in the midst of trouble. It is only a question of which girl will get him.

As long as a man has plenty of work and play filled with ambition and admire him and is half in love with several of them, he is practically immune. He need not fear that he will fall in love with the wrong girl—or any one girl. The danger is remote. He does not need a study-body to help him love himself.

But when there have been no women in his life for a long time, or when he has come home to find that some girl has let him down or double-crossed him while he was away fighting for democracy, almost any sympathetic little Cheer Leader who comes along looks just like his Dream Girl.

No man should let himself get seriously tangled up with a girl when he is feeling weak or discouraged or lonely. He is too likely to see where he's going or what he's getting.

He should wait to choose a wife when he is conscious of success and feeling on top of the world. Then he can choose with his eyes wide open—and he can let himself go.

Wrens at Capital See Latest Styles

Ottawa, April 24 — (CP) — When Canada's girls in navy blue return to civilian life they will know how to get every cent's worth out of their $300 clothing allowance after the fashions shown being held for their benefit.

At a dinner here for several hundred Wrens of H.M.C.S. Bytown, five Wrens, all of the same size, modelled a long list of clothing costing $65.30 in Ottawa stores.

Wren Georgina S. Hall of Guelph, Ont., led off in a brown topcoat with brown accessories of standard classic style; Leading Wren Molly R. Bird of Victoria, followed in a wool suit and dark tweed topcoat and coat and accessories.

Leading Wren Dorothy McMaster of Toronto, combined the green suit with the brown hat, shoes and bag, but dressed it up a bit with a veil, flowers and pretty blouse.

FASHION FLASHES

THERE'S NOTHING like lace for evening allure. A dinner dress of black lace has pointed black grosgrain ribbon edging the squared neckline which has a deep curved base. Banding of the ribbon mark the puffed shoulder-line of the long, tight sleeves. Also from Paris comes on the floor-length skirt.

Handsome for late afternoon on is a black crepe dress with low, rounded neckline. Short but deep sleeves lend a softly draped effect to the bodice which has an oddly-sliced, tilted line. It is worn with a tunic coat of aqua wool made with big sleeves.

Coming back into the print picture is the dark ground. Black crepe is the background for a lovely design of little bedecklaces in white with here and there a bright red rose with long green stem and leaves.

Dress-up frocks for after dark have discreet bits of glitter; the black and white checked surah dress has tiny black sequins scattered over the draped bodice and also on the front-draped skirt pockets.

Kingpin in the sweater world is the handknit sweater with hand-painted touches. A navy blue sweater has a few imitation pennant flags hand-knit in contrasting colors and hand-painted with here of still further contrasting color.

A good idea for the bride who must forego the traditional satin and tulle is a softly handled suit of white gabardine, complete with white accessories, such as a hat of white roses and white tulle. There's the traditional white, but in a practical form.

level a spot at Group Capt. E. A. McGowan, the base commander, but there is a rough time to strive for the unthinking airman who treads on the hard-won grass plots that were buildings and roadways at this sand-infested airport.

This situation is ideal and the sand which is 400 feet in depth creates an unsurpassed drainage system.

But the sand also provided a problem. In the hot summer days dry winds beat the surface of the drabs and paint raising sandstorms. So the members of the valley was dragged. We silk a sand and millions of yards of cultured soil were moved to provide a sub-soil for growing grass and for beds dahlia and peony. The manufactured turf is nurtured with gentle care and guarded as zealously as the airport itself.

The army has also contributed to experiments in vegetation by establishing a unique glass-house garden. In charge of Lieut. John A. Gilbey, Lennoxville, Que., peacetime expert with the Federal Agriculture Department, the garden was originally intended to supply the base's needs for green vegetables.

There had been a heavy incidence of eye and skin disease among the troops and airmen. And it was at a time when all available freight space in planes and ships was needed for the more urgent necessities of construction supplies and defence equipment.

Indoor Garden.

So Gilbey's indoor garden was set up to relieve an emergency. No cultured soil had been found at the stage and he used the sand and chemically fertilized his stand of plants by pumping certain ingredients into the beds. He was able to produce a fair crop of greenery but it proved unpopular among most of the service personnel. "It wasn't that it tasted any different than most garden greenery but they just wouldn't go for it," Gilbey recalled.

Later storage bins were constructed and great quantities of vegetables and other perishable food supplies were brought in and laid down during the season of open water navigation. Refrigeration of meat was also introduced. These supplies now are reinforced daily by the big Dakota transport planes.

The present varied and appetizing diet of the base is in marked contrast to the early days when Resident Engineer Wellington (Tubby) Cuthbertson of the Transport Department recalls that "never was there served in so many ways."

Lieut. Gilbey, finding his hot house was not going to be the chief source of green grocery supply, looked about and found a 30 acre plot of ground suitable for a market garden. However, as the area is frost-free only from June 15 to Sept. 15 he needed his greenhouse to bring the young plants along before transplanting them to the outside garden.

Help Shortage Lowered Nickel Output in 1944

Toronto, April 26 —(CP)— Manpower shortages in 1944 caused a drop in production of the International Nickel Company of Canada, Ltd., to 191,309,000 pounds, 1944, compared with 244,638,177 pounds the preceding year, Robert C. Stanley, chairman and president told shareholders.

Mr. Stanley predicted a continuation of the trend of sales growth in the post-war years in his address to the annual shareholders' meeting.

"Our sales have increased very regularly and very rapidly since commercial business was resumed after the last war. The overall rate of progress during the years 1920 to 1927 inclusive was 65 per cent," he said. "It may be assumed that in a young company such as ours this increase will continue if supported by able management and by diligent research.

Copper Product.

Mr. Stanley reported 1944 copper production from all sources as 210,648,451 pounds, compared with 219,598,366 pounds in 1943.

"Now that the war in Germany is closing, the revival of commercial business with the United Kingdom and continental Europe must be actively pushed," he said.

He said a duty of four cents a pound on Canadian copper from the United States except for wartime arrangements, and urged that the Canadian government try to bring about a removal of this trade barrier.

"With the large tonnage of scrap available and great war destruction existing in many countries, it may be assumed that the copper market will have a slow recovery," Mr. Stanley continued, adding that "as heavy withdrawal of ore from all copper mines during the war should temporarily check the structure of the industry in time.

1,800,000 Feet of Tunnelling.

He said ore reserves had been cut during the war and labor shortage made it impossible to expand them by continuous mine exploration. However, he said, the company had nearly 1,000,000 feet of diamond drilling which might provide tonnage as great as the war loss in reserves.

The Russian government offer to say Canada, for transmittal to international nickle, $30,000,000 U. S. currency for Finnish territory in which the Petsamo Mines is located, Mr. Stanley said, "is fair and equitable and should not be criticized."

"Nevertheless," he added, "my opinion is that in the long run our company would be better off with the Petsamo Mines than with the $30,000,000."

Mr. Stanley said the company's research division was co-operating with the steel industry in developing technical data for producers and consumers of stainless steels.

"Thus, we believe, will be a great help to post-war business as we feel stainless steel making will be an important division in the steel industry when peace returns," he said.

Battle of Britain Described to Kiwanis Club

The story of exploits during the Battle of Britain told by Fit. Lt. Pat Morse, Public Relations officer for the Eighth Victory Loan in this district was most interesting to a large number of Kiwanians who met for their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. The former officer of the Air Force was in Kiwanis when the war broke out and he served with distinction through the early trying times of the present conflict. This week Kiwanians are entertaining Goodwill Week with the United States cousins here and messages were read from the late Harry Rotman, Kiwanis Dean, International President of Kiwanis and the Syracuse Kiwanis Club, one which the local club has always exchanged greetings with for many years. The messages were read by Jack White.

There will be an exhibition of Canadian Art by the Educational Club at the Collegiate in the early part of May according to an announcement made by the President. Ted Schwab reported that the show, "Pack Up Your Troubles" is coming along fine and that the residents are in for a grand treat. The directors have approved a substantial grant for the promotion of hardball in the city and the sports committee will lend their help and assistance to this project. Mark Vanner was appointed to the Mark Lake camp committee. The president paid tribute to the members of the club that were serving on the loan committee.

In England in 1939

Introduced by Jack Trudeau, Flt. Lt. Morris stated he was in England when war broke out and in February, 1940, entered operations and stated that by working in the loan he had stepped from one service to another. "I do not need to tell you of the importance of the Victory Loan" said the speaker "although there are a lot of arguments given, one particularly being that the war is nearly over and the money is not needed. The money is needed for supplies to carry the war against Japan, to bring the wounded and soldiers home and then to feed and clothe the civilian populations of Europe, and to pay the hundreds of millions of dollars ties and rehabilitation credits."

The speaker stated he was in Germany six weeks before hostilities broke out and there was a definite air of hostility to English speaking people. Leaving Germany he went to North Africa and was called back previous to the outbreak and when war finally came was assigned to duty with the R.A.F. "We were given Ansons to fly" said the speaker and "with these we did an astounding job but nothing in comparison to the work now being done." He told of being assigned to watch the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest after these two German battleships had been driven to port by the British Navy and how many planes were lost in these bombing raids especially on one trip when 7 were knocked down out of a bombing force of nine planes, his plane and another being the ones to return. He told of the escape of these two ships up the English Channel, stating that planes went up to intercept them in weather that was almost impossible. He also told of the Japanese practising cannibalism and hoped that all would go out and support the loan to their fullest extent. Hearty appreciation was expressed by the president.

Andrew Doe, manager of the Coca-Cola Company exhibited a film — "The Price of Victory" which was very timely and most interesting. The sergeant at arms was Harold Selden with Harold Carruthers leading the community singing. Bill Navin presided at the piano but Les Biggs, who has recently returned from Florida accompanied one of the numbers.

Unnamed Fortress Being Prepared For Marshal Petain

By EDMAN MORIN

Paris, April 26 —(AP)— A cell in an unnamed fortress near Paris was prepared Wednesday for Marshal Petain, former Idol of France, by a precaution against disorder when the aged hero of Verdun returned here to stand trial on charges of high treason.

The semi-official Agence Francaise de Presse reported Petain and his party crossed the French frontier near Geneva Wednesday morning but a dispatch from Zurich indicated he was still in Switzerland.

Justice Minister Francois de Menthon said Petain had not yet entered France, denying the Agence Francaise de Presse report.

An almost complete news blackout has been thrown over details of the Marshal's return.

Upon arrival, however, Petain will be held under heavy guard at the fortress he the Paris suburbs. Like any other man accused of a major crime in France he will be denied any victory except defense counsel.

There was every indication that France already had been torn apart by the dramatic arrival at the Swiss frontier Tuesday of the aged Marshal and his announced intention of returning to France to stand trial.

In the provinces there are countless thousands of persons who still idolize Petain and for whom his prestige remains undimmed by the events during the German occupation or France.

Papers Demand Death.

With almost unanimous voice Paris newspapers Wednesday demanded death for Petain.

Hardly a phrase was written in his defence or even in extenuation of his acts. Newspapers bristled with epithets, appelations as "traitor," "monster," "Hitler's valet," and "head of fifth column."

The opinion that the Germans engineered his return to create confusion in France and with the hope of placing him at the head of their underground organization was widely expressed.

However, a section of the French public venerates him for his record in the First Great War. They believe that the Germans duped him in 1940 and that he was ignorant of the acting of Pierre Laval and others under him.

Huns Turned Dogs on Prisoners; German Torture Camp Scenes Rival Those of Days of Nero

Belsen Concentration Camp, Germany, April 23 —(Delayed)— (AP) — Prison contrasts of the German atrocity camps were torture arenas, rivalling those of the old days of Nero, where dogs were turned in to rip the clothes from defenseless prisoners and naked men and women were paraded together in the bitter cold, persons liberated from this camp said today.

Among those liberated was Rev. Stanislaw Kadalska of Zemtsgrce, Poland, whose father, Jakob, lives in Winnipeg.

A group of women who had been held in Belsen camp today described Nazi tortures — the flogging of women's breasts, lashing of the soles of feet, forced prostitution, the use of human beings for vivisection experiments — which they declared were "enjoyed" by the women S.S. Guards, as well as German men.

The things the prisoners endured, at Belsen and at the camps in which they were interned before they reached Belsen, said Veronica Molnar, a beautiful Jewish girl, "the people of England and America will not believe."

Madame Irene Goldberg said that she had been in a prison in Warsaw, her home, for two months. Every day the S.S. Guards brought a Jew into the courtyard and set dogs upon him. The dogs ripped the clothes from the man while the others watched. Occasionally the guards would order the women's fats and lash them with whips.

On Christmas Eve, 1941, at Auschwitz, Alexandra Dutkevich of Warsaw said, the Germans erected a huge Christmas tree in the centre of the camp. Then guards gathered together a group of half-dressed Gentile women and made them stand at attention in the bitter cold while truck loads of naked Jewish men and women were paraded around the compound several times.

Rhodesia Seeks Britain, Norse

Salisbury, Rhodesia, April 26 (Reuter)— The Rhodesian government is planning to bring British and Scandinavian war orphans to the colony after the war, and has offered the Imdina Air Station near Bulawayo as a temporary home, Sir Godfrey Huggins, Prime Minister of Southern Rhodesia, said here.

"Scandinavians assimilate most readily with the British," he added. "We want no foreign islands in our midst."

Captive Brother-in-Law Gestapo Chief Himmler

Somewhere in Germany, April 26 —(AP)— Brig.-Gen. Heinz Kokott, who said he was a brother-in-law of Gestapo Chief Himmler, told his American captors Tuesday that neither the Nazi party nor the German army would make peace and that only an Allied proclamation could end the war in Europe.

Kokott, commanding the 26th Volksgrenadier Division, was taken three days ago in the Harz mountains. An extreme Nazi type, he said Himmler himself had been in the Harz mountains April 16, but escaped.

Jan Who is Typical of All Dutch Farmers Starts Work Under Handicap Of Seed, Horse and Labor Shortage

By MARGARET ECKER
(CP War Correspondent)

Eindhoven, Holland, April 26 —(CP)— On the flat Netherlands countryside near Eindhoven, Jan was plowing with a good German horse. The furrow wasn't very straight and the plow didn't move quite as quickly as it might have five years ago.

For a great deal has happened to Jan and the field since he last plowed it. Before the Germans moved into Holland, Jan was plowing the field to plant tulips—not to sell, but because they made a brave show.

This year there will be potatoes in the field, because this year in Holland food is a more beautiful sight than flowers.

Jan, striding the furrows in his yellow sabots with round cap on the back of his head, looked the symbol of Dutch agriculture, which this year with great difficulty is rising from the grave.

When the Germans came to this part of Holland they seized Jan's automobile along with all the farmers' cars. Then one day other Germans saw Jan working in his fields with his horse. Both were made slaves to repair roads. Jan took it for four months until he could stand the work, the ill-treatment and the scanty food no longer. Then he "dove underground" as the Dutch call it.

When he went home last fall he found little changed on his farm, except that most of his equipment, his horses and his six cows had been taken by the Germans.

So this spring Jan started again, short on fertilizer, seed, farm implements and labor to help him but eager to raise what he could to help his starving country. Nearby in Eindhoven, an Allied Psychological Warfare Headquarters mission to the Netherlands is working on his problems.

"The domestic production picture in Holland looks pretty black," said the Allied officer, an American major who was a professor of agriculture at the University of Southern California. "The Germans have drained the country of everything the farmer needs. They have taken away the younger men, the cattle, the horses."

Holland, before the war the world's greatest producer of its size of vegetable seeds, today is begging supplies from outside.

Protests Report In Irish Press

London, April 26 —(AP)— David Gray, United States Minister to Eire, has protested a story in Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's Irish Press reporting the deaths of four Irishmen in Manila, saying the rigid Eire censorship left possible the inference that Americans were responsible.

Mr. Gray told The Associated Press Wednesday by telephone from Dublin that he sent the story, obtained from the United States Office of War Information, in the form of a letter to all Dublin newspapers, but that Eire's censorship ordered deleted that part which made clear that the Japanese were responsible.

Only one newspaper, Mr. De Valera's, printed the letter.

CONDEMNED WOMAN

Paris, April 26 —(CP)— For the first time in its history, the Paris Court of Justice condemned a woman to death Tuesday. She was Virginie Guirous, convicted of denouncing a French Jew to the Germans during the occupation. The Jewess was taken to Germany and presumably executed.

American Press Called 'Very Fair' To Britain's Effort

London, April 26 —(CP)— The American Press on the whole has been "very fair" to the British war effort, Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, told the House of Commons Wednesday.

"It must be remembered," he explained, "that the American press primarily report the doings of American troops just as our newspapers report the doings of British troops."

The British Information Services, he said, has "an effective record of rebutting British propaganda in the United States and there is plenty of evidence of leading American newspapers and broadcasting companies combatting such propaganda."

Mr. Brackon's reply was made to a remark by Lady Astor that the danger lay "not in what they say against England, but in what they do not say about our war effort."

BAN LIFTED ON PICTURE

Buenos Aires, April 26 (AP)—As a sequel to its recent declaration of war against the Axis, the Farrell government yesterday lifted a long-standing ban on the showing of Charlie Chaplin's motion picture, "The Dictator", in Argentina.

IT isn't just another piece of bunting . . . it is the Emblem of Canadians' Will for Victory and the determination that inspires them to raise the money for the "tools to finish the job."

The Huns have never seen this "V" Flag, and wouldn't know what it stands for anyway; but the winning of it, by millions of wage and salary earners who buy Victory Bonds, proclaims that they are united in their Will for Victory.

No bugle will herald its raising at sunrise or its lowering at sunset . . . but it is a Symbol of Victory just the same.

Canada's "V" Flag is recognition of the special effort that workers have put into their Payroll Savings Campaign. It means that employees have reached and passed their official objective, and that at least 9 out of every 10 employees are buying Eighth Victory Loan Bonds. That is why thousands of firms from coast to coast so proudly display it, and that is why their employees will win it again in the Eighth Victory Loan.

Rasputin, the Beardless, Loses Wrestling Bout to Toar Morgan When He Used Illegal Tactics

Insists on Wrapping Morgan Around Ropes and Thrashing Him From Ring

The loss of his famed Muscovite beard didn't improve Ivan Rasputin, the Toronto Russian, in looks. Like the proverbial leopard, it didn't change his wrestling tactics spots to any noticeable degree either.

As a matter of fact "Ivan the Terrible" didn't have too many friends at the Rome Arena last night, when upwards of 1,200 gleeful fans braved a stormy night to have their hopeful desires granted when Rasputin lost to Wilbur "Toar" Morgan, the Hickory Log Cutter.

Frankly Rasputin could well have been named "Ivan the Strangler" if for no other reason than that he's pulled an oldie out of the wrestling bag to employ the use of a device, well secluded from Referee Bert Maxwell's view in its trunks, to repeatedly draw around Morgan's neck a la hangman's noose, with results that were satisfactory to only himself. However, Ivan's show here will be remembered, when Arbiter Maxwell played possum to catch the performance and declare Morgan the winner in the final round after some 13 minutes of unmistakable ring efforts on Rasputin's part.

Fans Assist

"Ivan the Strangler" held gained considerable prestige with his shadow strangling efforts to leave the "Lindsay Lion" helpless and horse-de-combat and a repeated victim of being booted for a ten-yard lost at the corner of the ring where sympathetic Morgan supporters obliged kid. It was while Morgan was lying helpless with Ivan's spidery legs about face act that Maxwell caught on (outside like a hunter) and pulled Morgan's hand in token of victory despite the fact the former United States Marine was lying on the mat quite disgusted with life in general and Rasputin in particular.

Not daunted Rasputin reverted to the shoe less business in open decision second session, but this time he used the metal tag to gouge Morgan's optical cadaver and nearly did so far as to clog Arbiter Maxwell hard enough to knock him into the more expensive seats of the Rome Arena. Finals, where Morgan took over, laying in a few of those hefty elbow smashes, a flying mare and pinned Rasputin with a body slat in two successive verdicts and that's going some for the big wrestling world, especially versus one Ivan, (the beardless) Rasputin.

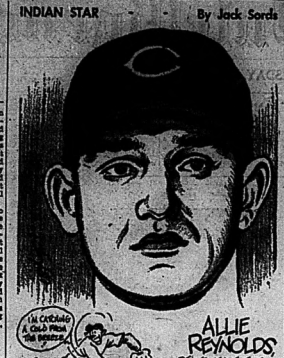
He War Sorry

Something new in the wrestling fraternity was witnessed in the semi-final bout between Nanjo Singh, the real Hindu, and Ned Harbin of Georgia, when Archie Hill, a local wrestling fan, was invited to relieve the tedium. Now it seems Hill has been a repeated backer of Referee Bert Maxwell's Cliff Fox for some time past, considering he could "make" those "push-over ruffians". Hill was given his great opportunity, but soon found out "rolling" referees are not exactly the cushion job it appeared to be, especially when Nanjo Singh was around. Hill was quite content to call it a draw when Referee Fox and "Toar" Morgan hastened to his assistance as Singh was making some progress in the scoring for a self-styled referee. However, Hill did offer some explanation books and no doubt found out it is good practice to "do as the Romans do" especially if you're in Rome. In this case it was Singh staging the Roman act.

Prays Hard

However, with Arbiter Fox back on the job it was Harbin's turn to clasp hands and go through some sort of prayer to "Allah," as the fans were most responsive. Singh finally gained his famed "Sleeper" hold on Harbin cry "uncle," and concede. The fans didn't like this, but enjoyed the opener that saw Tom Collins pitch Jack Wentworth out of the ring, when the latter was overturned out. Now the question is would it be fair to bring Singh and Rasputin back into the Rome Arena next week?

British Railway May Boost Charges



London, April 26 —(CP)— Sir Ronald W. Matthews, chairman of the London North Eastern Railway, forecast an increase in passenger, freight rates and passenger fares after the war.

Speaking at the L.N.E.R. annual meeting he said: "When hostilities cease demands for labor will come, some to an end and there is no clear indication as to the quantity or extent by which they will be reshaped by peacetime traffic.

"To adjust the net revenue position it is obvious that an increase in the level of rates and fares will have to be effected. It may well have to be substantial."

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Nominations of 10 famous portrait paints in baseball of by-gone days were accepted yesterday for the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., at a meeting in new York, of a special committee. Ballot-ing for players to be honored along with the 12 names already inscribed on the shrine include Roger Bresnahan, Tommy Collins, Ed. Delahanty, Hugh Jennings, Mike Kelley, James O'Rourke, Wilbert Robinson and Hugh Duffy.

Duffy is the only one of the group who is still alive and only John Connie Mack of Philadelphia Athletics is the only living member of baseball's minor leagues.

With the club since 1936, Johnny Gottselig, yesterday became manager of Chicago Black Hawks under a one-year contract, it was announced yesterday by owner Bill Tobin. Previously, Gottselig was team coach under Paul Thompson who resigned.

Saturday, 23-year-old son of Ukrainian-Surahan and the sire of many top winners, has been destroyed, it was announced yesterday at Cockington, Ky. He had sired 464 winners which had won $2,394,099 in race prizes.

With a 33-10 victory in the second game of the series last night at Toronto, the local Y.M.H.A. defeated Peterborough Collegiate for the city junior basketball championship. The Lift Lock crew had won the first game 36-4.

Following the spring meeting at Stratford last night of the Intercounty baseball Association, the club found itself with only two senior clubs, London and Galt, but there were prospects of entries from seven teams for the junior series, these to include Kitchener, Guelph, London and Hamilton. The senior schedule meeting is to be held at Galt May 8.

Walker Cooper, captain and catcher of St. Louis Cardinals, left the team yesterday to arrange for his enlistment in the U. S. Army Medics, thus bringing to an end the 11 consecutive baseball games until further notice. He is 36 years of age, married and has a young daughter. His lifetime batting average in the National League is .285.

Montreal Y.M.H.A. Quebec provincial contenders, last night at St. Catharines marked up a 41-44 win over Merritton Hayes in the first encounter of the Canadian juvenile basketball championship. The second game is scheduled for tonight.

With prize money raised from $5,000 to $7,500, the 1949 Miller High Life Open golf tournament at Brookwood will be staged July 21-24 at Islington Golf Club, it was announced in Toronto last night.

After nearly twenty years, Jimmy Walker finally has admitted he was the guy who made Chicago Cubs Tommy-Jack Dempsey fight from New York to Philadelphia. "The Concessions got the blame," said Jimmy, "but I used all my influence because I th-ught Harry Wills deserved a cha...e at the title". . . The Yankees made a contribution toward conserving transportation by taking only 39 players to Philadelphia for their rain-delayed one-game stand.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 26 — (CP)—Post Mortem:

Moose Jaw Canucks are on their way back to championship form, but wier team. They learned — too late — the value of good checking. When they recognised their need to play a checking game, they were too far behind to do much about anything.

There would be no gamer loser, though. They put up a struggle to the final bell of the final period of the final game. The plucky line had lost to a superior team, but in retrospect it was not one thing that was of importance. For that matter, both teams lost there.

The big loss was the matter of refereeing. It seems a shame that for a series of the calibre displayed by junior teams in the Memorial Cup finals, better refereeing is not available. In the C.A.H.A.'s books, such referees as Danny Cox, of Port Arthur, Dick Davis of Winnipeg and Arnie Peterkin and Hap Shoulice of Ottawa, are among the best available.

But if was concensus that if that was the best, something was wrong. There seems no reason why the more skilled not get the opportunity of playing under arbiters who can keep the finishing punches in the game — and most of all keep them in check.

The refereeing throughout the eastern finals and the Dominion finals was weak, to say the least. The whistle-blowers ran hot and cold. One minute they imposed a penalty the next they allowed a more serious demeanor to ride.

Free Parlays:

Despite the fact that the Stanley Cup series was under way at the same time the Junior finals, there is not enough referees from the professional loops that could handle the Memorial Cup series. A referee who lets a player "get away with murder" once, is soon going to have a situation on the ice that he may find hard to handle.

That was often the case during the last few games of the St. Michael-Moose Jaw series. Tempers flared, and though there were no serious outbreaks it looked many the time as though blood would flow. The reason? The two officials were lax at the start of the series and at the start of every game.

The boys in white let themselves in for more grief toward the end of each game when they clamped down. Then, fans, players, and coaches alike cried aloud: "You let one like that go before. Why call this one!"

It's a problem that the C.A.H.A. should seriously consider. These are the boys that are hockey's backbone. As the twig is bent, so grows the tree.

Today's Quotes:

Said Paul Thompson, ex-Chicago Black Hawk: "I'm the only National Hockey League coach in history who ever quit his job."

Dave (Regina Leader-Post) Dryburgh, in Toronto for the junior series: "All easterners are hot tempered if they ever get throwing a ryak around in the goal-mouth."

CANADIAN ARMY HOCKEY TEAM WINS SERIES

Defeats Navy Squad in Both Games by Close Margins

Brighton, Eng., April 26 — (CP)— The Army sank the Navy—but only just — in a stirring two-game series labelled as the Canadian Forces United Kingdom Hockey Championship.

Led by Polly Drouin, former Montreal Canadien, who scored four goals during the best-of-three series, Army won 4-3 and 7-4. The winners didn't have as much speed as Navy but showed more finish around the nets.

The Army team was the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers outfit which previously won the Canadian Army in England title. The Navy men were from H.M.C.S. Nonfe at Greenock, Scotland.

From the time Drouin opened the scoring less than a minute from the first-game face-off there was nevercending action. Four penalties in fights near the end of the second set.

Playing coach Ramon McAndrew of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Lt. Cmdr. AB Chilcott of Toronto, who managed from the bench, handled the Navy team.

In the second game Army scored twice in the first five minutes, Ing Dodds of Tegaina, Ont., potted the first.

Other Army scorers included Joe Cahin, Kingston, Ont.

Drouin, who will write out in the middle period of the second game scored the winning goal, helped by Buck Jones of Owen Sound, Ont., Army rearguard and former Ottawa Senator Frank Finnigan from Montreal, and Gaudet of Halifax.

Army, spearheaded by well-known Montreal sportsman Maj. Dave Ritchie, included Cpl. Gen R. G. Nicholson, Kingston, Ont.

Old Gaffer Maguire, who was as deaf as an owl, met the vicar of Bray in the village of Sidlesham.

"Ah, Maguire," beamed the vicar, "there's spring in the air."

"What's that you say", asked Maguire.

"I said spring in the air," shouted the vicar.

"Why should I," snapped the old man.

About Game Fish.

When the Hon. George H. Dunlop, Minister of Game and Fisheries, was asked for his views on the menace of the Belleville Fish and Game Protective Association, how Monday night he replied that he was not prepared to express opinions relating to fishing matters pending the receipt of a report from the department's revenue from angling licenses, which amounted to $1,500,000. If fifty persons was obtained from non-resident anglers, principally from the United States, Mr. Dunlop was keen on the increase, but if the number was less than fifty he would be in favor of reducing the fee. Mr. Dunlop was keen on the increase in Ontario after the war, as tourist trade was the biggest industry in the province.

Within a radius of 30 miles of where I'm standing tonight you have a good game preserve ground as any in the province," was one of the remarks Minister Dunlop struck us as unique. If the tourist industry is to flourish, and we're very sure we believe it must, that why shouldn't the various municipalities surrounding the Bay of Quinte endeavour to make the best of the splendid natural resources we have within our grasp?

Sportsmen are lavish spenders and although they may complain they not benefit directly from any influx of American anglers the sportsmen they will eventually benefit in many indirect manners and therefore should be as vitally interested as those directly in the tourist business.

In another phase Mr. Dunlop pointed out the fact that the game in Ontario was worth $4,320,000 in 1944, to say nothing of an additional three million dollars derived from fur farm industry. Here is another fertile field of industry, especially good for returned war veterans. The wild life of Ontario belongs to the people of this province and we intend they shall benefit to the fullest from it," promised the Minister. Which is as it should be.

Beating the Gun.

Now it can be told just why Charlie Barnett refused to stand pat on the record of the Toronto Leader football league. It seems Hilda Chas. wanted to get back in the business of coaching and yesterday popped up as coach of the Toronto Argos. Maybe it's a good omen for Deacons, as Charlie handed the Argonauts two to two straight league championships and Grey Cup victory. Maybe it's just because as though league titles without Argos without Steinke in his new job with the Argonauts seems to play as exhibition game without the colorful Charlie at the helm.

When the gals' softball executive met the other night Percy Robinson was there and the commissioner satisfied one of the finest moves yet to assure the future of their game. Namely the organization of a girls' softball school with Percy as primary schools of the city. Bill VanTassle, Don Barrett and Bill Chandler assisted in the demonstration to interview the principals of King George, Queen Alex., Queen Victoria Schools, as well as St. Michael's Academy. The permission to announce at assembly that a girls' softball school would be held at each of the above mentioned school grounds next month.

From this school a four teamed girls' softball league will be operated by the local senior clubs—Canucks, Universal and Deacon A.C. It is certain to be a game among next-age girls for subsequent replenishment of players in the senior loop. If successful a junior and senior game will be played each evening the girls' softball league operates throughout the summer months. The program is highly recommended upon and could be well put into practice by baseball and hockey.

Remember When.

The Winnipeg Falcons, captained by Frank Fredrickson, beat the Swedish team 12 to 0 at Antwerp 26 years ago today to capture the first Olympic hockey championship. The Canadians defeated the United States team 3 to 2 the first year and trounced Czechoslovakia 15 to 0 giving the Falcons three straight shutouts. Lester Fredrickson, Middleton and Goodman, of that first Olympic championship team all turned professional with New York.

Yankees Eye Heath.

Are the Yankees going to make a bid for Jeff Heath, who has announced that he will never again play for the Cleveland Indians?

"The Indians have taken complete care of Heath's threat with Roger Peckinpaugh's trip to Detroit to talk terms with Jeff," Larry MacPhail.

Maybe we can discuss Heath. If McCarthy wants the combination, and Cleveland is willing to talk turkey, we will go after Heath."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 26. (AP)— The Yankees have made a contribution to baseball conservation looks from the standpoint of the club owners that favored a "promotion" instead of another "Golden Era" of baseball. Yesterday, General Manager Roy Hamey, who joined with Larry MacPhail to help make baseball history, was not spoken on the idea that when the Yankees go to Philadelphia for their game with the Athletics on April 29, they will "sell" the game to another baseball club. The Philadelphia Chandler seems to fill the bill and the Yankees will take their entire team to Philadelphia. It should see that another government owned athletic equipment should be distributed among the kids. . . . Another thing charged is the baseball's tendency to become racing. You wouldn't expect to see a horse like a guy who was raised in the Kentucky Blue Grass country . . . and it will be a real innovation the first debut commissioner turns up his batter-box and on "Rainbow in the Sky".

CHICAGO CUBS IN SECOND PLACE OF NATIONAL LOOP

Winning Form Shown by Claude Passeau and Paul Derringer

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Cholly Grimm strummed a happy tune on the banjo today with the Chicago Cubs in second place and winning form by Claude Passeau and Paul Derringer easing his pitching worries.

The second department was Grimm's big headache all last season after he took up the reins that Jimmy Wilson dropped while the Bruins were leading 13 of their first 15 starts.

Passeau, who had a sore arm in spring training, relieved Hank Wyse Friday against Pittsburgh but worked only one third inning as Grimm waited until yesterday's first starting pitcher, a 4-0 shutout of Cincinnati, before counting on him too heavily.

After reporting late last spring, Passeau waited until June 3 to bang up his first win but then went to town, including in his 12 decisions, four straight over Cincinnati, a club that hadn't beaten him since Johnny Vandermeer did it in Sept. 6, 1942.

Yesterday Claimant hit safely only five times, all singles, off the 36-year-older from Lacadale, Miss., as Bucky Walters allowed his first setback. Passeau didn't confine his efforts to pitching, hitting his first home run since 1942 in the third inning and driving in a second tally in the seventh with a single to centre.

"STEW" WOOD WINS FIVE-MILER

Running in a downpour of rain over a heavy mud-covered course, "Stew" Wood captured the gruelling five and one-fifth mile Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School cross country run yesterday. Wood headed a field of seven starters over a muddy course in the remarkable time of 34 minutes and 27 seconds.

Second was Morris Bradshaw and third came Graeme Martin while Jack Dodson, Leon Scafford and Bob Southcott finished in that order of the first six. The annual five and one-fifth miles cross country run was organized by Homer Townsend, athletic director at B.C.I., with Lieut. Neal Cumming acting as official starter.

The route was laid over a course that took the distance runners east along Queen Street from the starting line at the Collegiate, thence north on Herchimer Ave., where the heavy going began, to the first turn at its toll. Over C.N.R. property the runners, plugged on in the given pour, of rain and mud to College Street and thence to Cannifton Road and ultimately along Station and Church streets back to the finishing post at the Collegiate. Entrance running queries announced, following the event, that best time was remarkable under the prevailing weather circumstances of the day.

SPORTS GOODS OUTLOOK LITTLE BRIGHTER IN '45

Although Larger Supply There Will Also be a Greater Demand

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—The Prices Board glanced ahead today and on a detailed inventory of the sporting goods situation said supplies peeta bright—with some reservations.

Equipment for most sporting activities will be in larger supply, the Board's survey showed, but demand likely will increase because of new post-war programs and return to civilian life of men in the armed forces.

Improvement was foreseen for baseball, tennis, rugby and fishing but continued shortages were forecast in golf, swimming and shooting equipment.

From baseballs to bicycles, this is the picture:—

Baseball—improved supply of balls despite shipment of 50,000 softball balls for 1945 use by troops overseas. Supplies of catchers' mitts, gloves and team equipment generally increased.

Tennis—dealers receiving double the quantity they received in 1944. Racquet supplies are the same as last year and a limited number of nets is available.

Badminton—similar to tennis with 20,000 dozen birds, almost unavailable last year, delivered to dealers.

Ping Pong—dealers to get increased quantities than in comparable months of 1944.

Golf—no new golf balls but old ones are being recovered. Clubs in short supply.

Rugby—production tripled to meet demands of armed forces. Players to receive double their 1944 supply.

Basketball, volleyball and soccer—same as rugby.

Cycles—supplies imported from England. Few bats or balls available.

Fishing—rods expected to be in short supply and there may be most sufficient lines available but they will be of Canadian manufacture. Hooks, spoons and other items available in limited quantities. Shortage in hooks and reels.

Swimming—worsted bathing suits difficult to obtain but fabric type expected in quantity.

Boats—as many canoes and rowboats delivered as last year—no acute shortage.

Shooting—guns practically all imported and scarce. Ammunition expected to be same as last year—limited.

Archery and croquet—plenty of archery equipment available. Quantity of croquet equipment low.

Riding—few jodhpurs for sale. Riding clothes may be available but extent of manufacture has not been decided. Supply of saddles is good.

Roller skates—but many on market because of material shortages.

Bicycles—supply should be the same as last year.

AT THE BELLE — Dana Andrews and Gene Tierney featured with Clifton Webb, famed Broadway actor in "Laura," fast-moving action film. Miss Tierney's costumes are novel and magnificent.

Peterborough Beaten In Bantam Series

Toronto, April 26 — (CP) — Toronto Y.M.H.A. scored a 20-10 victory over Peterboro Collegiate here last night to win the Ontario bantam basketball championship 41-38 in a two-game, total points series. Peterboro won the first game Saturday 26-18.

Abe Cooper, diminutive right forward, sparked Y.M.H.A.'s form reversal with 16 points, 10 in the first half. Sam Spielman, who played a hard defensive game at guard for Y.M.H.A., followed with nine.

D. Richardson led Peterboro scorers with four.

Half time saw Y.M.H.A. leading 20-6 on the game, but down six points on the round. They continued to dominate the play and led 3 points on the round at the three-quarter mark, a lead they never relinquished.

"AL." HITCHON NAMED PRESIDENT SOFTBALL ASSOC.

Walter Harden Also Elected to Position of Secretary Treasurer

F. A. "Al." Hitchon, who has long been associated with sport in the city of Belleville, was last night elected president of the Belleville and District Men's Softball League. His successor, J. E. Harden, who declined reelection to ultimately sit on the league executive for 1946.

With three clubs definitely in the fold the league moved to endeavour to obtain a sponsor for junior softball in Belleville, thus bringing the league roster to four clubs. The date of night appointments of affiliating bodies SACO "Marines" 1944 championship, Army Association" and a new entry from C.N.R. Y.M.C.A., INTAC. All league games will be played at the Exhibition Park. President Hitchon announced today.

The election of officers of the Belleville and District Men's Softball League for 1945 resulted as follows:—

President—M Hitchon.

Vice-Pres—H. Bowden.

Sec.-Treas.—Walter Harden.

Executive councillor—Harry Rollins, Harry Hoest, J. A. Samuels, Don Lee and Oswald Berrigge.

Retiring Secretary Don Lee presented a detailed report from the annual meeting of the O.A.S.A. and also as last year's treasurer submitted financial statement of the league which revealed a balance of $62.11 on hand. After tendering the entire personnel of the league a banquet last fall and also paying all 1945 affiliation fees into the parent body, Don Lee also pointed out that Belleville had advanced two teams to the Ontario provincial finals, namely the SACO "Marines" and the Columbian Squires.

The league delegates voted Mr. Lee a $10, honorarium fee for his untiring efforts for 1944. However, he gracefully rejected the offer and returned the fee as a donation to the current league.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey game over to play bridge with me and my mom an said to Gladdis, You're using a new perfume it's very attractive, what is it?

It's called Sheu Chi, Gladdis said. It's Chinese Lilac, Lubbock's latest creation and they say it's going to be even more popular than his Breath of the Orient. Harvey said with a suspicion of wild rye, and a tiny little bottle of it costs more than I can, to mention with gentlemen present, she said, and the last my latest passion in perfume is Reckoning Rye. It's the first new perfume from France since the war and it has a very illusive aura. You can scarcely tell whether you're smelling it or just imagining it. It's supposed to be a secret preparation but I understand it's made from strawberry leaves. It reminds me a little of Tender Night. It's much more illusive, ma said.

Well, I guess I'll put on the sweater if I was a perfume manufacturer, I'd call it Pep and Bull. I'd go perfume for serious women who want to be taken seriously. By golley it would be a brain new field. There's a fortune in it. For instance how about a perfume called Farmers' Daughter? It might have a base of onion with just the faintest hint of parsley. What do you think, Harvey? he said, and Harvey said, well I think you're on the right track, but that combination might be just a little obtrusive, if you know what I mean. I'd suggest something a little delicate, maybe a suggestion of radishes on a base of stale tobacco. A good name for it might be No. Three, or, or maybe Pardon My Dust, he said.

Scram wouldn't be bad or maybe Please Dont Muddle, pop said, and then he said, How about, you'd better stop before you get positively vulgar. I think somebody had better set up the bridge table, she said.

Morning pop.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 666
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When things go right for Billy Ake, you never hear him squeal. But when his hand is not so jake, he seeks another deal.

In bridge, you are entitled to a new deal for certain reasons within certain time limits. They are:

Before the first card is dealt, if (1) the correct pack is not being used, (2) the pack was not prepared by the player at the left of the dealer, (3) the pack was disturbed thereafter by any player except the dealer, (4) the cards were not shuffled thoroughly, (5) the cards are cut by any player except the one at the right of dealer, (6) less than four cards are cut in either operation of the cut pack, (7) any player except dealer completes the cut, (8) the cut is not completed by putting the bottom portion on top, (9) a card was faced in cutting, (10) a player sees the face of a card other than the card cut for him.

Before the last card is dealt, if (1) the wrong player is dealing, (2) the pack has not been cut, (3) the cards were not dealt one at a time in rotation, (4) a card is faced in the pack or elsewhere, (5) a player has seen any and can name two or more cards dealt to another player.

After the last card is dealt, if (1) a player picks up another player's hand and sees a card in it, (2) the pack contains an improper number of cards or a duplicate, (3) one player must have picked up too many cards, another too few, (4) a player has too few cards and the missing card is not found before that deal ends.

Under no other circumstances and at no other times is a new deal required. In all other cases where something has not been done in a proper manner, some remedy or penalty, applies other than a new deal.

After the last card was dealt, a player started to pick up this hand:

- ♠ A Q 9 5
- ♥ K 8 3
- ♦ K Q 9
- ♣ K 7 3

While picking up his cards, both his aces dropped face up on the table. There was a penalty, of course. But not a new deal.

Why? Because rules are merely brakes to avoidable mistakes.

Hitherto-Unpublished Poem Reveals Franklin Roosevelt's Ability as Poet

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of six articles by a reporter who has been assigned to follow Roosevelt for The Associated Press in his 14 years in office.)

By DOUGLAS CORNELL.

Washington, April 26.—(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt is a poet.

The story reveals around an hitherto unpublished opus. It is necessary to sketch in some background.

Immediately after the United States entered the Second Great War, a security blackout was imposed on movements of the President. Secrecy, it was said, had for a long time whom he went to his home at Hyde Park, N.Y., reporters were not permitted to go along with him to record the fact that he had been there.

Representatives of the Associated Press King of the other two major United States wire services kept pushing for the right to go along on a "protective" basis even if they could write nothing about the trips. Called "The Three Ghosts."

Mr. Roosevelt called us "The Three Ghouls," we were told, but eventually we won our point.

The first trip after the war started on which we went along was an inspection of war plants and military establishments in the fall of 1942.

In March 1943, we got wind of another big journey that would take Mr. Roosevelt to Mexico to meet President Camacho. We feared we might be left out again.

Then we hit on an idea. We decided to make an appeal on the idea that we hadn't been riding an expense account for a long time.

We thought that might work because the President always was ribbing us on the subject.

Off to Spring.

So we drew what was intended to be a picture of a train rolling along by land and water. We captioned it, "Ode to the Spring," or "Sojourn Around, Oh, How I Miss You."

"As we wait for sedere
To
Warm (like hope) springs
Thermometers
We'll bask in liquid pleasure
While piling up a modest treasure.
The problem's simple, answer same—
Let's jump in Georgia once again."

F.D.R.'s Reply.

A few hours later, Mike called us into his own office and handed us this reply, scribbled in the President's own hand on a memo pad:

"Mar 18 '43
"Your touching, deep desire
Arouses in me fire
To send a hasty wire
To Warm Springs in the mire
To escape the cold
Break out the corn.
The gas is waiting.
Sho's yo born."

Mr. Mac had photostats made of the Presidential poem for us.

Also in the scrawl of Presidential travels are bits of our original copy, edited personally by the President.

Submitting copy to him for blue-pencilling was one of the conditions imposed by wartime censorship. He read it all but seldom made any unworthy changes. Occasionally he caught an error or made a helpful suggestion. He never criticized, even though we thought he might not like some particular excerpt.

Whitehall Notebook

By JOHN DAFOE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 26.—(CP)—Two political groups bearing the name "Liberal" have taken part in the Anglo-Russian agreement of May 1942, and candidates in this year's general election in one of three ways. They are in the left of traditional Liberal policy and the other to the right.

No three groups. The Liberal party under Sir Archibald Sinclair claims that the Liberal Nationals headed by Ernest Brown, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, are nothing but Conservatives under another name. The Liberal Nationals claim the straight Liberals are no Liberals that they might well join the Liberal party.

Neither has more than token representation in the 615-seat House of Commons. At 1935 last election in 1935 the Liberal Nationals elected 37 members and now have 36. The Liberals elected 18 and now have 16.

The Liberal Nationals will not be trying to form a government in the 1945 voting. As their name implies they support the National government of Prime Minister Churchill and will not oppose Conservative candidates in any riding. T. Enoch Wallace, their chief organizer, says "we'll fight at least 25 constituencies and plan to win 50 by running only where we have a good chance."

The Liberal party, on the other hand, has been specifically instructed by its annual conference to the policy of free trade for Britain."

Liberal Nationals claim to be the "true Liberals." They say they are more anxious for reduction of regimentation, and restoration of more over-all freedom for the individual than are the opposing Liberal group.

Aside from trade and the amount of private initiative to be permitted after the war, their platforms are much alike.

'Overlord' Was Code-Name for Invasion of Europe

London, April 26.—(CP)—When War Secretary Sir James Grigg informed the Commons that "Overlord" was the code-name for the invasion of Europe, he caused consternation in military security offices.

Few things are guarded as closely as these code-names for individual operations. The War Office, declining to issue a list of the official "nicknames" for Canadian army operations like Spitsbergen and Happe, though they occured several years ago, said only two have been made public formally since the war began.

One was "Overlord" and the other "Mulberry" — the name given to the prefabricated port set up on the Normandy coast to pour supplies into the invasion bridgehead.

STIRLING

DELEGATES ATTEND ANNUAL MEETING OF DIOCESAN W.A.

St. John's Church W.A. Marks 60th Anniversary of Auxiliary's Founding

Stirling — The 60th annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Ontario was held recently at the Cathedral Church of St. George and the Parish Hall, Kingston.

There was a celebration of Holy Communion at 10 o'clock at which about 250 women were present. The Rev. E. Teskey was the special preacher. At the conclusion of the church service the members adjourned to the Parish Hall where Mrs. Constantine read the address of welcome which was responded to by Mrs. Harrison of Plevna.

Rev. Rural Dean Seeley addressed the meeting.

The Diocesan President, Mrs. J. F. Wright, made the announcements. There was a minute's silence in honor of the armed forces. The reports of the Deanery Secretaries were read and approved. The meeting then adjourned for luncheon.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Wright gave a friendly welcome to the visitors followed by a short history of the W. A.—its founding and advancement and work. She spoke of the great need of trained workers to be ready for China and India, after the war is over. The guest speaker was Mrs. Greta Black who first went to China as a missionary 35 years ago. She told of the work in China and told about her experiences when the Japanese came into Honan and her escape from there.

Miss Buchn announced the thank offering of $14.55 which was allotted to the Diocese of Ontario in care of Bishop Lyons, to the united thank offering and to the accepted appeals. Officers' reports were then given and the afternoon session closed with prayer.

At the evening session Rev. Mr. Watts, a missionary who had spent two years in China and 14 years in Japan, was the speaker. He had been back in Canada three years and in that time has covered a trip of 17,000 miles. He showed beautiful colored moving pictures of his work of the church in some very isolated spots. Those who had the privilege of attending these meetings from Stirling were Mrs. C. C. Brazill, Mrs. A. S. McConnell, Mrs. E. Cooke, Mrs. H. Rodgers and Mrs. G. Cottam.

St. John's W. A.

On April 24th, the Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Church, Stirling, celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of this important part of the church work.

Holy Communion was celebrated in the church at 10 a.m. with the rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill, as celebrant. There was nearly one hundred per cent attendance of the ladies of St. John's W.A. also the ladies of St. Thomas Church, Rawdon, and a few visitors.

There was a pot luck dinner served in the Parish Hall at 12 o'clock. The regular monthly meeting of the Auxiliary took place in the afternoon at 2 o'clock with the president, Mrs. H. Rodgers, in the chair, and thirty members and several visitors present.

Mrs. Rodgers welcomed the visitors from Rawdon. Mrs. Earl Morrow read the Scripture Lesson. Correspondence was read and a report of the Annual Diocesan meeting which was held at St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, on April 18th. The treasurer's report was given. Mrs. A. S. McConnell read the chapter in the Study Book "Peoples of Inland India." The meeting enjoyed a solo by Mrs. Colden of Rawdon. Rev. Mr. Brazill sang "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." Mrs. Rodgers read the names of the members of this branch who have passed to higher service, followed by a minute's silence observed in their honor.

Mrs. K. Mumby of Rawdon gave a very fine reading called "Prayer." Mrs. H. Smith and Mrs. A. S. McConnell sang a duet with Mrs. B. Alger at the piano. Mrs. J. Clute moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Brazill, Mrs. Colden, Mrs. Mumby and all those who helped make this meeting a success. Mrs. W. Tanner of Rawdon responded. Rev. C. C. Brazill closed the meeting with prayer. Tea was served and then the members and visitors entered the church for Evensong to close a very happy and helpful day.

CHAPTER 3

"What you talkin' 'bout, Smoothie?"

"I'll tell you the whole story as we travel, Henry. We're leaving from Philly at one-ten a.m. . . . Have I got the dough to take it? Look here!"

"I'll say you got it," Henry said, admiringly. "Why didn't we hop the same train as the dame, huh?"

"And take chances of her spotting us? I wonder, Henry, why I sometimes get the idea there's just a hollow inside your skull!. . . Listen, when I hand at the 'T' Slash-Dude ranch it's going to appear. I came from Kansas City where a guy who wants to buy a ranch and cattle might reasonably hail from. I'll drop off at Kansas City to send a wire and pick up an auto for the rest of the trip."

Henry blinked. "You can twist your tongue round 'most any kind of lingo, but can you pronounce a buyer of cows?"

"Watch me brainless. Watch me."

"Sure. I will since I'm going to Wyoming with you, Pal. But how 'bout that chest, you had on with Hudson Alexander? Smart guy, Alexander, to put on like he's on the up and up, and a big shot in society, too."

"That's why, Henry."

"Oh? As I 'member, you was to trail Alexander and this old guy's niece to see as they didn't up with some valuable papers or securities they was — Alexander was out to get from an old fool whose dog was workin' the wrong side, but he was scairt of the young frail and—"

"Henry, perhaps I owe Alexander something for putting me wise to this play. But he was going to give me a damned slim cut for my work. Now that the real dough is split I'd be a fool not to give Alexander the run-around."

Henry leaped from the bed, his dark face bristling. "You—you're two-timin' Alexander? Takin' this way to—"

"Why not?" snapped Smoothie. "We ain't splitting any two hundred G's with Mr. Slippery Alexander and you're playing the hand with me!"

Henry drew a deep breath. For a moment he seemed on the verge of open mutiny, but all he said was, "Okay, pal. But how'll I fit in out to the ranch?"

"You're going to be out in the brush where nobody'll see you. Next to, anyhow. Now, look here—"

"No cot in the brush!" Henry snapped. "I'm not with the bears, coyotes and snakes!"

"If Henry you'd just right at home," Smoothie chuckled.

"Go ahead and laugh, damn you! . . . Did you know I'm scairt of scrid, snake-head watch fob was broke and had six guns?"

Smoothie Dick stopped laughing. "I'm a—"

Westward bound, Nancy Eleanor Smith stopped off in Chicago. Thereby enjoying her new-found freedom, she had a wonderful time "doing" the city and replenishing her scanty wardrobe. Though she possessed clothes to fill three chests, if luggage were sent from home it could easily be traced by the dreary detective and Smythe was sure to engage sooner or later. Since even on a remote dude ranch one must have the pretty and serviceable apparel, Nan Cy ordered her purchases shipped by parcel post to Miss Marcia Farnsworth at the 'T' Slash Ranch, Jimtown, Wyoming.

So thrilled was the girl by her new adventure, with no one to criticize her choice of amusements or clothes, that she purposely passed several trains. She even failed to catch the proper one to put her into Dagger Wash at eight in the morning when the stage left for Jimtown. She therefore consulted the timetable, and sent a wire to David Thomas Farriwell, "I'e host o' the 'T Slash," familiarly known as "Old Sol," stating the time of her arrival and requesting that she be met at Dagger Wash.

Rolling onward forty hours behind her original schedule, Nancy examined illustrated papers, the leaders diligently through. Omaha newspapers. She read the headings in Denver newspapers purchased when her train reached Cheyenne. Nothing in any of them about "Beautiful Young Lady Mysteriously Missing." Would she be called "beautiful"? Would she be called "young lady" or "debutante" or "heiress"?

But why should there be any news yet? Mrs. Pauline Sherwood Huntington - Smythe would take Nancy Farrwell note at face value. She'd probably go to New York with Mr. Alexander, there to consult with heads of state—errors due to sail for South America. Not, until she failed to find Nancy's name, not until she failed to find any trace of her, would publicity become enough alarmed to engage a detective to discover the reason for her disappearance.

Because Nancy Eleanor Smith was young, giddy, silly, a bit of a madcap and adventure-hungry, she had decided rather than alarmed her. There was, too, always the possibility that Uncle Cyrus Mosley Weld, or Aunt Julia, would let the cat out of the bag.

Wyoming sunlight filtered through the windows of the Pullman. Nancy car. Wyoming's hospitalia, gently rolling and softly alluring with the green of spring, stretched endlessly into deep blue distance. Hazy hill, ending at the vast loneliness, only its allure, its enchantment. She was free, at last, free of conventions and restraints imposed at home; free of the dominating management of a scaly way to—

"Why not?" snapped Smoothie. "We ain't splitting any two hundred G's with the slippery crook and you're playing the hand with me!"

Henry drew a deep breath. For a moment he seemed on the verge of open mutiny, but all he said was, "Okay, pal. But how'll I fit in out to the ranch?"

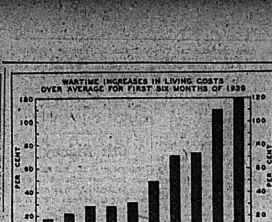
Limbs, Joints Stiff, Sore, Painful—Tells of Relief



"Suffering with Rheumatism, Pain Has Left Me Since I Have Used Syntona," Says This Man. Also Relieved Stomach Trouble and Dizzy Spells.

Nearly every day you can read in the paper how local men and women have obtained good results by using a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound. Sufferers of stomach disorders, rheumatic pains and liver, constipation, nervousness and dizzy aches and pains tell how this medicine has brought surprising relief. Here, for example, is the statement of Mr. Archie Cross, 19 Abel Ave., Brantford, Ont.:

"For a year I had rheumatic pains in my joints and muscles," said Mr. Cross. "My back ached and my arms and legs were stiff and sore. I felt tired many days. I was full of aches and pains. Food upset my stomach. I suffered so much with indigestion and gas that I felt bloated and short of breath. I would get bad dizzy spells when I was walking around and nervousness was terrible. I began to sleep better and to awaken morning feeling refreshed. My appetite is fine, my stomach is free from indigestion and nervousness went out of my joints and muscles and I haven't had an ache or pain since. Although I am in my seventies, I am enjoying good health and everything, and recommend Syntona to others. Why not begin taking Syntona without delay?"

Syntona is sold in Canada by reason of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better digestion, and food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Illustrating how, despite price stabilization, measures their determined support, the chart at upper hot indicates how the wartime rise of living costs has been less in Canada than in most other countries. At right, living costs are compared with those during the First Great War.

She watched the train fade into purple-blue distance before she looked at Dagger Wash's dingy frame shacks clinging a little hill behind Dagger Wash's little yellow railroad station. Then a tousle-haired, tall, lean, bronzed individual with a face the color of saddle leather and a fierce, black mustache—a veritable "horse-tail" mustache. He was anywhere from fifty to seventy years old, Nancy decided, deciding also that she was going to like him, and glad he had spoken the name by which she was to be known in the West. She herself had only forgotten it.

He said, "That's right. But how did you know?"

"Halladay Hank's the moniker, Mr. Farnsworth. Gawsh, what a lawbreaker of a handle! I run the range to Jimtown, you set, got word from ol' Sol himself at the 'T Slash to be lookin' sharp for you. Your telegram was phoned all along. Knowed I'd seen him, in Jimtown yest'day. You know who I mean—Sol Perriwell, who's fixin' to call me Hank. Sure enough I reckon it's his woman a doin' it, the old Sol.

"Howsoever, Sol sez your name was most somethin'. Sez folks is some pushnickety. Sez, I've read 'bout 'em in the society section of the New York papers and his here girl a-comin' to my spread to visit. Sez, I'm to look out for the hoof, 'fides which,' Sol sez on, 'I've had a telegram from pa's secretary, Mr. Farnsworth, by himself. Wm. F. Walley, tellin' me to be sure and look after her like—"

At last Nancy got in a displeased word. "So I'm to be taken care of, am I?"

Nancy suddenly felt disquieted to think that even here in this ranching country Sol Perriwell was the New York newspapers and Walley nothing about the Farnsworth family. And his sez—pictures of Marcia Louise! Fortunately, Halladay Hank was not for escaped newspaper photographers.

"Sure, Miss Farnsworth. . . . You bet you're to be took care of! Sol sez you was somebody an'll add pressure, mebbe, I got the drift o' what he meant, and now I see you ain't no flapper. Sol sez you bet-cha! Wal, I was to bring you right to the ranch an' not overtake, even waitin' for my reg'lar trip tomorrer and the 'T Slash rig'll meet you. Set down in Dagger Wash, Farnsworth. Ain't no other passengers."

The stage coach nosed its way along a wagon track leading toward mountains which seemed only a stone's throw distant. Those mountains lifting huge blue-green shoulders into the slanting sunlight their hoary heads into the bluest sky Nancy had ever seen. Barbed wire fences ran away across the level reaches. Beyond those fences grazing cattle, horses, and farther still, clusters of ranch buildings. Then the stage coach seemed to cling to the earth.

Halladay Hank, behind the auto's squeaking wheels, yet very little dust reached Nancy's nostrils, parted. Her face, she knew, was set, relaxed on her side of the seat, allowing Halladay Hank's monologue to flow uninterruptedly in one small pink ear and out the other. The old man was evidently wound up for an allday run.

"Best-a-drivin' night onto forty year, I bet. Fust off though I packed what I'll that was to Jimtown on a mule. He were a right stubborn mule, I reckon, critter's feelings. But say, he could smell an injun further'n ol' Ike Shimo can spit down wind . . . See them three-four boulders yander, an' the scrub cedar growin' outa them? Onliest tree 'round here. Long time ago 'twas a couple o' bucks, Indians was layin' for me behint them rocks. But my mule, he smelt 'em. Whirled spang around, fer the trail afore he come in range o' them savages. COUNTY COURT

Two Plead Guilty To Trafficking In Loose Coupons

Charges of violations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in the trafficking and accepting of loose or invalid gasoline coupons resulted in two convictions in Thursday's County Police Court held before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Convicted were Roy White, Bancroft trucker, and Wm. Montgomery, Stirling service station employee. The cases were presented by E. O. Butler, special prosecutor, who charged that White had been apprehended with loose coupons, while Montgomery delivered gasoline upon the receipt of loose or invalid coupons. Both men pleaded guilty and paid fines of $20 and costs each. Another similar case was enlarged for one week.

"This man has been convicted of drunkenness on 33 occasions since 1938", stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan when Joseph Betts, Kingston, appeared on a charge of intoxication. His Worship imposed the maximum sentence of thirty days in jail in default of a $50 fine.

Karl Langford, Toronto, was convicted of being in the illegal possession of liquor and assessed ten dollars and costs. On a second charge of speeding the minimum fine of $15 and costs was paid.

Charged with speeding at 65 miles an hour, William Nicholls of Leaside, pleaded guilty by mail and paid a fine of $40 and costs. The charge was preferred under the War Measures Act. Charges of violations of the L.C.A. preferred against Harold Crawford, of Roslin and Gerald Pack of Belleville, were enlarged for one week at the request of E. E. Pollwell, solicitor for the latter.

Tudor Township Couple Charged With Arson

Charged with committing arson in Prince Edward County 15 years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lalone, of Tudor Township, were arrested at their home this week and arraigned in court. The man and wife were not asked to plead and were subsequently released on $7000 bail, Provincial Police authorities revealed at district headquarters here today.

Working in conjunction with the Fire Marshal's Department, Provincial Constable Stanley Palmateer, of Bancroft, re-opened the 15-year-old charge last month, culminating his efforts by arresting Mr. Lalonde and later incorporating his wife into the double arson charge.

The authorities alleged the Lalones set fire to their dwelling house on the Irvine Gore Road, in the Township of Hallowell, in Prince Edward County in 1930, with the result they are alleged and charged with obtaining $3,100 by fraud from the Bay of Quinte Fire Insurance Company.

Following the destruction of their home by fire in 1930 the Lalones went to Tudor Township to live, Provincial Police stated today.

CANUCKS WITHIN ARTILLERY RANGE OF PORT EMDEN

New Threat Imposed on German Defenders of North Sea Naval Port

With the 1st. Canadian Army, April 26 (CP) — A new threat to the German defenders of the North Sea naval port of Emden developed today as the 1st. Canadian Army troops swept up the Rheider Peninsula across the Ems Estuary to within artillery range of that bitterly-defended bastion.

Clearing the peninsula, elements of Gen. Crerar's army were reported last night in the outskirts of Verlaat, seven miles southeast of Emden, after a 2½ mile advance and were in position to launch counter-battery operations against the enemy whose naval guns had been turned on the advancing Canadians.

Suggest Amphibious Operation.

(Paris dispatches suggested an amphibious operation across the estuary might be necessary to reduce the port. Canadian artillery from the peninsula thus could provide a potent shield for such an operation.)

Threatening Emden also were Polish troops of the 1st. Canadian Army in the Leer area on the Ems east bank 12 miles southeast of Emden and Canadian troops who reached Bingum on the west bank 2½ miles southwest of Leer. Flooding and demolitions hampered the Polish forces, however.

At the eastern end of the northwest German front, the Canadian 4th. Division reported a perceptible decrease of enemy resistance at the northwest tip of its Kusten Canal bridgehead, seven miles southwest of Oldenburg. The bridgehead, now ten days old, has been deepened to five miles and broadened to more than three.

Near Bremen Port

Another development in this sector was the disclosure that the Canadians battling southeast of Oldenburg were from the 2nd. Division, last active in helping clear northeast Holland. After taking such towns as Huntlosen, Hosune, Neerstedt and Kirchhatten southeast of Oldenburg, they reached the outskirts of Falkenburg last night. There, the Canadians were five miles west of the Weser River on which the port of Bremen, under assault by the British 2nd. Army, is situated.

In Holland, meanwhile, other Canadians sealed off the eastern end of the Spijk pocket, on the Ems Estuary. About 1,500 Germans were believed contained in an area of 26 square miles.

--and Then The Boss Fainted

Had Diogenes selected Belleville as the locale in his search for an honest man, and if he would have settled for one of the so-called weaker sex, his travels would have been much shorter.

For it seems a young business woman of the city left for the bright lights of the Queen City a few days ago on a buying trip.

Returning she reported her activities to the "boss" who always solicitous of the welfare of his executives, asked if anything untoward had happened.

The Y.B.W. knitted her brows, smiled and said, "Oh nothing much, except that when I arrived in my room at the hotel to ready myself for dinner, I happened to open the top drawer of the dresser and there before my eyes was a full bottle of the Dew of Scotland, untouched, untarnished, and as yet not broached by thirsty mankind".

"Well", replied the boss, who is not averse to removing the dust of the day's toil with a spot of the heather brew of Auld Scotia, "I suppose that was a welcome sight. What did you do with it?"

The Y.B.W.'s eyes widened. "Why, you should know better than to ask that. It did not belong to me, so I left it there when I checked out".

It took five of the staff and fifteen minutes to bring the boss back to consciousness.

MORE MAIL SERVICES BEING RESUMED

MARSHAL PETAIN ON WAY TO FRANCE TO FACE CHARGES

Writes Adolf Hitler on April 5th Announcing Decision to Return Voluntarily

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

Weesen, Switzerland, April 26 — (AP)—Marshal Philippe Petain left this community in Eastern Switzerland today on the last lap of his return trip to France to face charges of high treason, a crime punishable by death.

The 89-year-old Marshal, his wife and others of his party travelled in a four-car caravan led by motorcycle escort.

Members of his entourage meanwhile made public a letter the aged former Vichy Chief of State wrote April 5 to Adolf Hitler announcing his decision to return voluntarily to France.

The letter, which seems likely to stand as the theme of his forthcoming defence, declared:

"I am informed that the French authorities intend to place me on trial in absentia before the high court of justice.

"Preliminary discussions begin April 24. This information imposed an obligation which I consider as imperative and I address myself to Your Excellency to aid me in accomplishing my duty . . .

"As Chief of Government in June, 1940, at Bordeaux I refused to leave France. As Chief of State during the grave hours which came again for my country, I decided to remain at my post at Vichy.

"The Reich government compelled me to leave April 20, 1944. It is not true I sought refuge on foreign soil to evade my responsibilities... it is in France alone I can explain my act and I am the sole judge of the risks that attitude implies. I have then the right to demand that Your Excellency gives me immediately the facilities.

"You will understand the decision I have taken to defend my honor . . . and to protect by my presence all those who followed my lead. This is my sole purpose. No argument can make me renounce this object. At my age one can fear only one thing, that is, not to have performed completely my duty."

From Paris, it was reported that a court writ, addressed to the Marshal, summoning him to appear at a trial May 17 and answer charges of "plotting against the state" was en route to a Swiss frontier point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—The mining groups and the industrials were up narrowly at mid-day today. Volume was down considerably from that of previous sessions of the week.

Giant Yellowknife, O'Brien, and East Sullivan were strong golds, East Sullivan adding 30 cents. Quemont weakened 35 and Frobisher was down 30.

Base metal stocks were steady but for a gain of 15 cents for Labrador and in the industrial section the utilities, papers and miscellaneous issues showed strength while the liquors were down moderately.

ELM TREES PLANTED

Fort Frances, Ont., April 26 (CP) --Seventy-five elm trees were planted along the Ontario Highway 71, just west of Fort Frances yesterday as a living memorial to the members of the armed forces from Rainy River district in northwestern Ontario.

20 Industrial Plants Attain Their Loan Quotas

That industrial employees in Hastings county are serious about this business of supporting the Eighth Victory Loan campaign is clearly indicated by the report from loan headquarters today which shows a total of 20 county industrial plants having exceeded their respective objectives.

Approximately ten industrial plants had gone over the top even prior to the official opening of the campaign, while others, both in the payroll savings and in the group payroll sections have now completed their canvass and are reported as well over their objectives.

In addition to the plants already having been reported as surpassing their objectives the latest to go "over the top" in the payroll section are the Bata Shoe Company of Frankford; Stephens-Adamson, Canada Packers and Stewart-Warner Alemite Corp. of Belleville and Trenton Cotton of Trenton.

In the group payroll section the latest to top objectives are Bateman's Motors; The Ontario Intelligencer and Quinte Hotel of Belleville and the Trenton Dyeing and Finishing Plant of Trenton.

General canvass sales by salesmen in Belleville are reported by Victory Loan officials to be slightly up over that for the corresponding period in the last loan, but returns are still coming in slowly from other municipalities and rural sections of the county.

LOAN IS LAGGING

Crippled Flier Buys Large Bond

Before hobbling through the wards of Christie St. military hospital to canvass fellow patients, Flt. Lt. William Poole of Toronto, bought a $1,500 bond himself, remarking "this is about all I can do now." Only recently repatriated to Canada after a year in a German prison camp, Poole fractured his legs when he bailed out over Bremen and part of his parachute was blown away by enemy fighter fire. Four of his crew were killed.

"I want to get my kid brother back fast from Germany," said FO. Hal May, Cayuga, Ont., another Christie St. patient, as he signed for $1,000. A former hockey player, May is being treated for injuries aggravated by poor medical care in a German prison camp.

The loan office in Sudbury, Ont., received its customary visit from Rade Loncarevich, mine worker, who bought his fourth consecutive bond for $100. In the Fifth Victory Loan he supplemented his purchase with a gift of $50 to the Dominion Treasury, and has added a dollar each loan since.

Large purchases recorded from Ontario included one from the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Ottawa, for $445,000.

Royal Canadian Navy men and women have poured $2,666,550 of their savings into Victory Loan purchases amounting to 53.3 per cent of their $5,000,000 quota. At the second day's end West Coast Command was leading, with $368,500. That beats their quota by 11.5 per cent. Naval divisions' $196,850 brings them within 1.6 per cent of their mark.

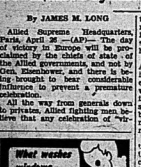
Day of Victory in Europe Will Be Proclaimed by Allied Chiefs of State

By JAMES M. LONG

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Paris, April 26.—(AP)— The day of victory in Europe will be proclaimed by the chiefs of state of the Allied governments, and not by Gen. Eisenhower, and there is being brought to bear considerable influence to prevent a premature celebration.

All the way from generals down to privates, Allied fighting men believe that any celebration of victory while thousands of men still may have to die in opposing-up operations would be a sheer sop to wishful thinking and a handicap to the job still to be done.



Even before Gen. Eisenhower, Allied Supreme Commander, was instructed that word of the American-Russian linkup in Germany would come from London, Washington and Moscow and not from supreme headquarters here, it has been obvious that plans for announcement of the end of German resistance have been changed.

A little less than a month ago, the Supreme Commander said victory would come a time when he could announce the end of organized German resistance in the Western Front.

That was interpreted at the time as meaning he would announce the victory. It soon became clear, however, that this would virtually be impossible unless the announcement could be correlated specifically with a Russian statement at the same time and to the same effect.

By the time Gen. Eisenhower received specific instructions that the link-up announcement had been taken over by the Big-Three capitals, it was apparent that the official announcement of the end of organized resistance would be proclaimed also from the intergovernmental plane.

The reaction of military men is that this is well enough—as long as politics can be kept from interfering in the parades, the confetti and the night club celebrations while more war material still is needed and more fighting men must die.

WAR-SICK WORLD

same row of seats last night as the United Kingdom delegation led by Foreign Secretary Eden. Next to Mr. Molotov was his interpreter, who translated the speeches of Mr. Truman and Mr. Stettinius. The Foreign Commissar appeared to give approval at the more striking passages.

Problems created by the Russians are engrossing considerable speculation—mainly Russia's plan to seek separate votes for White Russia and the Ukraine, and her stand on the Polish situation.

Perhaps it was these problems that Mr. Truman had in mind when he said that "all progress begins with differences of opinion and movies onward as the differences are adjusted through reason and mutual understanding."

Welcomed by President

It was Dr. Benjamin Truman in Washington the delegates heard a welcoming radio message which gave them a new statement of their solemn assignment:

"You members of this conference are to be the architects of a better world. In your hands rests our future. By your labors we shall know if suffering humanity is to achieve a just and lasting peace"

It was an English-language show, as international custom prescribed that the host—in this case the United States—must assume responsibility for the opening.

Will Draft Report

Today the heads of the various delegations, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King, meet as a "steering committee" to draft a report for presentation and action at the plenary session of all delegates at 3.30 p.m. P.D.T. (6.30 p.m. E.D.T.)

It will cover credentials, organization of the conference, election of officers.

The first plenary session lasted 37 minutes, but Stettinius scored seven times before the opening.

This, delegates are predicting, one sometime with cocktail parties, dinners and banquets, but by next May 8, the end of the official mourning period for the late President Roosevelt, social entertainments will be informal and no large parties have been scheduled.

REGGIO D'EMILIO

A special communique last night said "every road is jammed with the retreating enemy, who is using only the roads because of mines and human beings to draw his transport."

Eighth Army men, speeding northwest, were hopeful of getting the enemy's Adige defence line anchored on Monte Baganza, a hill mass beginning about 20 miles north of the Po and extending to within eight miles of Parma.

Hans Puffler The Real Villain He Did it All!

By Lane Norcott, London Daily Mail satirist, and not to be taken too seriously—Editor.

It can now be revealed that the further Allied troops go into Germany the clearer it becomes that the German people have always disliked the Nazi regime and hated war.

On their own admission — and who can doubt it?—they are the most kind-hearted people on earth, and Hitler has never been anything but extremely abhorrent to them.

Who, then, is responsible for this monstrous evil that has burden hand put the Fuehrer in power and is now in the agonized wah of the kindly German people.

Fortunately that is revealed too. It was a small, bespectacled little Nazi named Hans Puffler, of Aix-Muckinstein.

In 1933 Hans Puffler, secretly and unknown to the German people, elected Chief of Police.

He did this by disguising himself and rumbling in and out of a polling booth 13,500,000 times.

It was Hans Puffler, and Hans Puffler alone, who invented those enthusiastic "Sieg heils" whenever Hitler's name was mentioned for breath.

Every one of those brown-shirted sub-men who used to goose-step down the Unter den Linden was Hans Puffler. He did it himself with the aid of mirrors.

It was Hans Puffler who staged the riots in the Sudetenland. It was he who demonstrated in Danzig.

It was Hans Puffler who organized the concentration camps. He invented the flying-bomb and the rocket. He personally committed the atrocities single-handed, who stole the art treasures from France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Yugoslavia, Greece, Poland, Norway, Denmark, and Czechoslovakia. He made slaves of the inhabitants. He personally invaded Poland and started the war.

Do not let us blame the German people for the work of one man.

Of 66,000,000 Germans it will soon be found that 65,999,999 were absolutely guiltless.

Hans Puffler alone among a docile, industrious, kind people is the real war criminal, and in our opinion he should be slightly punished.

Unfortunately, his whereabouts are not known, and it is rumored that he may have escaped to a neutral country with his ill-gotten gains.

Patriots Helping Free Northern Italy of Nazis

London, April 26 (CP)—The Rome and Swiss radios said today that an insurrection of Patriots of Northern Italy was sweeping away German resistance, capturing town after town and district after district.

At the same time a Swiss frontier dispatch said Benito Mussolini had fled Milan as fighting raged there between Partisans and Germans. One report said the Duce of Fascist Italy city had been liberated.

A radio station identifying itself as the "Free Genoa" radio went on the air today with an appeal to Genoa's municipal which proclaimed that the Nazi garrison in Genoa had capitulated and that all resistance had ended by 9 a.m.

A general strike was reported in Turin and bloody clashes were said to be in progress there between the Nazis and the Patriots.

The reports suggested elimination of this important industrial area as a possible source of supplies for any last-ditch stand in Northern Germany.

Patriots were reported by the Rome radio to have seized Novara, an important industrial area near Turin, and Gallarate in Lombardy, Verona, Castellanza "and the whole area" of the Serio Valley and of the Lake Maggiore region.

The Swiss said Italian Loyalists swooped down on Fascist guards in the Chiasso district on the Swiss frontier, about 30 miles north of Milan, and seized frontier posts.

The Swiss radio subsequently declared Turin was captured by Patriots, but gave no details and the report was unconfirmed.

P.O. Arthur Doran Buried With Crew Near Paris, France

Missing since last June 11 when his plane failed to return from a bombing mission over Germany, history, Pilot Officer Arthur J. Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, St. George Street, is now reported having been buried with the crew of his plane, according to information received by his parents.

In a letter recently received from the R.C.A.F. casualty office, Mr. and Mrs. Doran were informed that their son had been buried by the inhabitants of Ferte-Alais, in the Seine-et-Oise district, miles southwest of Paris. The letter also stated that the burial services were conducted by the local priest when the bomber crashed.

One of four brothers enlisting in the armed services, P.O. Doran joined the R.C.A.F. in March, 1943. The three other brothers are Gerald Doran; Leading Stoker Ted Doran and Stoker Fred Doran, are in the navy, Gerald having enlisted in 1941, Ted in 1942 and Fred in March of last year. With the exception of Ford all three brothers have been in foreign operations.

Stoker Fred Doran is stationed at Sydney, N.S., while the two other brothers are at present home on leave. One sister, Pte. Sister Mary C. Doran is at the St. Vincent de Paul hospital in Brockville, while a younger brother, Jack is at home.

The letter received from the R.C.A.F. casualty officer giving details of P.O. Doran's burial follows:

ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE

Ottawa, April 19th, 1945

Mrs. W. H. Doran,
31 Grove Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Mrs. Doran:

I refer to your letter of January 11th I deeply regret to advise that a report received from France states your son, Pilot Officer Arthur J. Doran, lost his life June 11th, 1944, when his aircraft fell in the village of the woods near Ivry Ile Rosa. You are buried in the Communal Cemetery at Ivry En Montjoie (Seine et Oise) and the aircraft were carried to the Communal Cemetery in the district which the mayor was able to obtain at once.

The German authorities gave permission to attend to the victims, on the spot, the event in the meantime, changed their minds and came to claim the bodies at the moment when the priest was about to perform the his blessing. The coffins were opened and laid in a grave where the whole seven remain. One last prayer, one bunch of flowers, and the grave was closed on our unfortunate brothers.

The whole country risked reprisals and came to visit the grave over which flowers of the national cockers were piled. Our friends have never been abandoned. Masses were said for them and their tombs are always covered with flowers.

Your son was identified by his identity disc, I bracelet watch and the remains of his flying boots. Although the Germans took the identity disc it is reported that a nurse of the French Red Cross has taken the documents and keep them for the families to whom she offers deepest sympathy and thanks to those who have died for the cause of France. The Red Cross Nurse will, no doubt, forward these documents to you in the near future.

In accordance with the established procedure regarding those who are reported to have lost their lives or have been reported to be enemy in enemy occupied territory action is being taken by the Air Ministry to presume you son's death for official purposes. When this action has been completed you will be notified by registered letter from the Chief of the Air Staff. Pending completion of this action your son is to be considered missing believed killed.

I wish to have full well how weak and fruitless are any words of mine which would try to divert you from your overwhelming sense of loss, but it is my sincere hope that the efforts made by your gallant son by the French people will be a source of great pride to you and the members of your family and sustain you in your sorrow.

Yours sincerely,
(signed) J. L. Westman, F/L,
R.C.A.F. Casualty Officer, for Chief of the Air Staff.

Paris, April 26 —(CP)— For the first time in its history, the Paris Court of Justice condemned a woman to death Tuesday. She was Virginie Gutroux, convicted of denouncing French Jewess to the Germans during the occupation. The Jewess was taken to Germany and presumably executed.

The War Today

Destruction of Hitler's Chalet Happy Departure From Practice

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Analyst)

Destruction of Hitler's mountain home with a 12,000-pound earthquake bomb has provided a happy departure from the usual practice of not gunning for heads of states, although unfortunately the chances seem small that the barbarian was in his house.

The chalet's death knell, nasty and the war has immediately, making it necessary for Hitler's armies to withdraw to obtain up the last pockets of German forces. That is, if nobody would end the war if his death became generally known to his satellite forces. Since loyalty to him provides the main reason for continued readiness resistance of the Nazi fanatics.

The Fuehrer's death "in action" also would be a boon to the post-war world, because his capture and punishment after trial most certainly will make a martyr of him. The last thing we need is to add to the Allied difficulties in the reformation of Germany. Perhaps such will be with us in the future, since he apparently is moving about in the danger zone.

Hitler Murderer and Fugitive

Under normal circumstances it has been the practice for bombing headquarters to wait until the war is the last one — to avoid the reckoning of ruiney and other chiefs of state, who live in the midst of their civilians. The case of Hitler the Hun, however, is unique in that he not only is the actual military commander but, more to the point, his death will bring to an end the hundreds of thousands whom he has murdered, and he is a fugitive from justice.

During the last war even the Germans followed the code of not molesting rulers. A typical example was the flying of the Kaiser, who lived throughout the conflict in a castle located in Holland, but far from the fighting lines. There was a day when the Royal Family couldn't have been lifted out by bombing or shelling.

I spent a very deal of time in that sector and we had an amusing incident at the situation in one of His Majesty's birthdays. At high noon German artillerymen flung 3 or 4 shells into an open field near the Royal farmhouse. They came from guns which had been moved up to make them an obvious birthday salute — obviously to the King that they could have been hurled into the residence just as easily.

There also was a sort of tacit understanding in those days that gunnery and scores to settle."

"That means a partial pay-off for the airraiding which the German have been receiving since long ago. The Russians have long lists of Germans who are guilty of war crimes. Those lists have been carefully built up from the testimony of eye-witnesses over the years of fighting. We may be sure the German people who have participated in atrocities will suffer the full penalty — and deservedly.

FATALITIES DUE TO INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS SHOW INCREASE

Toronto, April 26—Fatalities due to industrial accidents during the first quarter of 1945 show an increase of 64 deaths over the same period for 1944. Figures issued by the Industrial Accidents Prevention Associations and reported by the Workmen's Compensation Board are as follows: During the first quarter of 1945 there were 31,401 accidents including 79 fatalities. In 1945 there were 30,456 accidents and 127 fatal cases. The total compensation awards by the Board in the first three months of 1944 were $1,081,-972.62 and in the first quarter of 1945 they were $2,341,381.32.

YANKS AND REDS LINK UP

AUSTRIA INVADED BY U.S. THIRD ARMY

Swift Drive Shuts Door to Hitler's Alpine Retreat

Radio Contact Established With Reds West of Vienna

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

Paris, April 27 — (AP) — The United States 3rd Army invaded Austria and established radio contact with the Russians west of Vienna today in a swift advance nearly sealing off Czechoslovakia and shutting the door to Hitler's Alpine redoubt.

The French 1st Army closed to within 31 miles of Munich and 76 of the Brenner Pass, through which the rampaging Allied 5th Army in Italy was striking from the south. The United States 7th Army approached Munich from 35 miles northwest of that city of the Nazi party.

Direction of the French push suggested a move to encircle Munich. Nearing Munich

The U. S. 7th Army moved to within 36 miles northwest of Munich and outside an Allied train through to within six miles of Augsburg, the 10th, Armored and 44th Divisions captured Memmingen, 36 miles from the Austrian frontier, and liberated 4,000 Allied prisoners.

Breitfeldt, medieval fortress city on the Lambte was captured by the United Army which moved five miles south, within 36 miles of Munich.

Far southward in the Italian Alps French troops struck into Italy as far east as Bordighera, on the Mediterranean six miles west of Ventimiglia, and Liberated the Maritime Alps, restored to that patriot.

Far to the north, British 2nd Army men, sweeping over the rubble of fallen Bremen, struck inland toward the North Sea coast at Bremerhaven, the port whence the German liners set out across the Atlantic in peacetime.

Gain Near Oldenburg

The 1st Canadian Army was burning up the Scheldt Peninsula which juts into the Ems Estuary southeast of Emden, and also reported the southeast of Oldenburg, key to the Friesland Peninsula.

Bezirksgauden was menaced by the 470,000 or more Germans trapped in the south when were rolling through the fringes of the "doubtful salient" of Austria, taking Villings, a village.

Third Army troops were 31 miles from Linz, third city of Austria, and within 36 miles of Salzburg, famous goes to the Alpine redoubt. The last route into the redoubt lead through Linz.

Resistance Almost Encircled

Reprisals at the Austrian almost point on the Danube was almost encircled, the 3rd Division, 30 ancient streets and within sight of nearly Vienna.

The 90th Division captured Pruth near the Czech frontier, 16 miles southeast of Pilsen and 80 from Prague—the last two centres of heavy industry in the hands of disolving Germany.

The 3rd Army's invasion of Austria climaxed a 130-mile advance by the 11th Armored Division.

A junction of American and Russian armies in the Austrian Alps is imminent if not in fact. Reports many hours old and lagging behind secret broadcasts declared that they were 14 1-2 miles from the 9th Army and the latter's patrols were within 6 of the 1st Army near beleaguered Dresden.

The British Guards armored division flashed south towards Hamburg in a manoeuvre which, if successful — would lop off the Schleswig-Holstein, Kiel Canal peninsula, leaving Germans in that bleak northern area with no chance to escape.

The capture of Bremen (342,900) gravely galanced the German defenses between the Weser and Elbe, the main defence points. It left Germany with only a dozen miles.

CAR ATTACKED BY FIGHTER

With the U. S. 7th Army, April 26 — (Delayed) (AP)—Mrs. Edwin Rosenthal's widow, found 2½ ing in the Bavarian town of Ottobrunn, a suburb of Munich, at today her husband's death was the result of enemy action. Rosenthal was killed car was attacked by a fighter-bomber in France on July 17, 1944.

Dwindling Water Supply at Manila Given Attention

Manila, April 27.—(AP)—A Japanese menace to Manila's dwindling water supply commanded renewed attention today even though American forces appeared to be driving the enemy from the major objectives elsewhere in the Philippines.

Two United States regiments continued to battle entrenched Japanese in the northern part of Manila, trying to liberate the water system before a shortage materializes.

Elements of the 6th Division, whose objective was Wawa Dam on the Marikina Front, fought a strong enemy force in a score of pill-boxes on the crest of vital Mount Pacawagan, 14 miles from the capital. The peak is 1,850 feet high and the American hold all but the crest.

On Mindanao Island, the 24th Division between Davao Gulf and within 12 miles to come within 16 miles of Davao Gulf and within 45 road miles of Davao, important hemp centre.

The 32rd Division fought on the outskirts of Baguio, Philippine summer capital in northern Luzon while another contingent smashed to the mountain fortress and west and northwest. The two American forces were 2,270 yards apart.

SECOND IN 24 HOURS

Guam, April 27 (AP)—Bombs from more than 100 Superfortresses fell on Kyushu airfields in daylight, second time in less than 24 hours on that southernmost main island of Japan.

Results were not yet available on the attack, made against six airfields which have been staging bases for raids on American positions in the Ryukyu archipelago.

As the steering committee meets again today, a plan to have rotating chairmen for both the conferences and the four commissions will be under consideration.

Mr. Eden, last of four speakers yesterday, literally stole the show by far as applause and forthright-

Paths Often Diverged but Strong Bond Between President, Mrs. Roosevelt

By DOUGLAS CORNELL

Washington, April 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt had a plus tooth—right on the front row. He liked his steak well done, and usually he didn't unless he was making a point or appreciate or seeing someone important.

But he kept five a spare handy, ready to pop into his gap—because Mrs. Roosevelt always was after him to do something about it.

There was a strong bond between Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt. Two gossip mongers spread tales about them all during their years in the White House, and neither said they "weren't getting along very well," that the only reason she was staying with him was because he was President.

Their public differences, if there was real community of interest. Mrs. Roosevelt was more ardent "new dealer" than Mrs. Roosevelt, and there is evidence that each had a great respect for the opinions of the other.

She called her the "Missus," she called him "Franklin."

The Roosevelts were much like any other family. They had their traditions—never more than in the Christmas tree birthday cake, Mr. Roosevelt's reading of Dickens' Christmas Carol every Christmas Eve.

They had their troubles and trifles. There were numerous instances these were magnified because of their position. Marriages and divorces, and schoolboy pranks of a President's sons received a tremendous amount of attention.

Mr. Roosevelt took a fatherly interest in all these affairs. Sometimes he meted out a bit of stern advice, but he felt that his children, ought to be free to lead normal lives.

The boys, every one voluntarily in the uniform of his country, were thrilled when he and Mrs. Roosevelt made many favors. The eldest, James, was the first appointed to have his friend—

"Before this is over, every one of us is going to have to die or people will think we got all the breaks."

Franklin, Jr., claimed the often of national attention for, spending charges with Secret Service men at Harvard.

On one occasion, the President dunned Jimmie for church dues. That was in Mr. Roosevelt's capacity as senior warden of the Episcopal Church in Hyde Park, N. Y.

The youngest son, John, was the first to hit his grandson in the summer of 1937. Stories leaped the Atlantic that he had "punished" grandson in the face of the Mayor of Cannes and slapped him with his glove. Mrs. Roosevelt denied it, val. John denied it.

When he returned to New York afterward, his principal statement to reporters was:

"I have my funds are a bit low. Will I be glad to see the old town."

Thus the President watched the boys grow up, and the escapade that might have happened in any family.

He, too, tried to live as normally as he could.

Although he was behind schedule, He kept everyone with whom he had an appointment waiting, to his stories or ideas. That was because, most of all, he liked people.

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

San Francisco, April 27—(CP)—Impelled by a display of unity on the Polish question among the four great sponsoring powers, the United Nations Conference on International organization is off to a long start towards the goal of a new world security agency to maintain peace.

Despite the continuance of a deadlock between Russia on the one and Britain and the United States on the other, over the Polish question and preliminary differences over conference organization rose rapidly between Russia and Britain, the United States, China, and Russia are on record as firmly determined to see the conference through to a successful end.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to make a short speech today, since Canada's position is already familiar as built like a small, single-seated plane, Mr. King's address will be about 16 feet. The fuselage are 16 feet long, and have a cockpit at the rear for the pilot. announcements said.

Russia's little control of the flying bombs, and ships can dodge them by evasive action, Nimitz said.

ALLIES SPEED CONQUEST OF NORTHERN ITALY

Consolidate Positions Along South Bank of the Adige River

Rome, April 27 — (AP) — Allied troops pressed forward for a rapid clearing of northern Italy yesterday with the Allied 5th Army rolling north, west of Lake Garda, capturing Piacenza, and the British 8th along 5th Ligurian coast Genoa.

British 8th Army units consolidated positions on the south bank of the Adige River, where the Germans were expected to attempt another stand.

The seizure of Piacenza brought the 5th Army about 30 miles south of Milan — one of the major cities reported in control of Italian Premier Mussolini.

"A commission, disclosed mopping activities and were in progress in Verona and said: "Our troops encountered road-blocks and snipers in the vicinity of Vigasio"—nine miles southwest of Verona. Fall of Verona was announced last night.

Nazi-General Captured

Another German divisional commander, Major-General Otto Ernst, the 334th Infantry, was captured as the 5th continued to bag large groups of prisoners.

Enemy resistance along the 5th Army front appeared to have been disorganized but the communique said: "there still are some pockets of fighting energyal actions in isolated areas."

On the right flank of the 5th's right front, the U. S. 91st Infantry Division entered Legnago on the Adige River, 22 miles southeast of Verona, and Montagnana, 6 1-2 miles west of Legnago against some opposition.

Headquarters disclosed a task force of the 10th Mountain Division, in a forced march Wednesday, surprised the enemy at Villafranca. And captured an airport before the Germans were able to destroy it.

Troops Closely Supported by Naval Shelling

Guam, April 27 — (AP) — Closely supported by naval shelling, U. S. 96th Division infantrymen were through the first line of Japanese defence on southern Okinawa today and hammering a wedge deeper into tough secondary positions.

New high ground in the centre of the line, captured by the 96th yesterday, gave command of all dominating terrain on the outer rim of the thick belt of fortifications defending Shuri, Okinawa's capital.

The 400-foot height was stormed after the Japanese made a general withdrawal under heavy artillery fire. Resistance was surprisingly light.

On the east coast, the 7th Division sent patrols to the northern approaches of the Yonabaru airfield, only five miles from Shuri.

Naha is about 3 2/10 miles southwest of the 96th's position. Shuri, the 27th Division is about half a mile closer to the city.

Enemy artillery, mortar and small arms fire still was heavy.

Heavy shelling of U. S. battleships and cruisers gave effective support to the ground drive in all sectors.

Admiral Nimitz disclosed today that Japanese have been using a pilot-guided rocket bomb in their defence of Okinawa. Nimitz said the bombs, generally launched from the mouth of a cave, resemble a small, single-seated plane, have a wing-spread of about 16 feet. The fuselage are 16 feet long, and have a cockpit at the rear for the pilot.

Japan's little control of the flying bombs, and ships can dodge them by evasive action, Nimitz said.

CORE OF BERLIN'S DEFENCE APPEARS TO BE CRACKING

Russians Break into Workers' District of Moabit and Edges Of Tiergarten

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, April 27 (AP) — Berlin's inner defence core appeared cracking today under a hasaile Soviet squeeze operations.

Marshal Zhukov's forces in the northwest sector surged forward 3 miles during the night, breaking into the workers' district of Moabit and the fringes of the famed Tiergarten park in the centre of the flaming capital.

Front Line While Russian army's advance from industrial Siemenstadt, captured yesterday, was disclosed in a Soviet broadcast by the Moscow radio.

The broadcast indicated the gains in the south by Marshal Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army, which was believed to have completed the occupation of Berlin's main airport at Tempelhof.

Battles Swirl Near Hergarten

At Moabit the Germans were in the area of the biggest prize in Berlin. The Soviets' advance on the Tiergarten on the northwest and Hergarten zoo on the south.

German reports indicated that both the already were striking over that great park. The Germans held on to the zoo.

While the most spectacular overnight gain was recorded in the north-south nutcracker on the eastern side of the capital, where the terrific pressure also was being exerted by Marshal Konev's forces on the south notably at Grunewalde.

Soviet dispatches described Berlin as a wilderness of crumbling stone swept by hot winds from the flames of furniture buildings and heavily charged with brick and cement dust.

Flame-Throwers

Russian flame-throwers went in with perfect German units which had established machine-gun nests on the fringes. In fact account said the fighting now was raging from room to room, in the corridors, on the staircases, in attics and on the roofs of the larger buildings. Fighting also centred underground in cellars and the network of subways and Berlin's subway system.

Berlin's bloody street battles overshadowed three other Russian battles underway on the outskirts of the capital.

Further bloody street battles overshadowed three other Russian battles underway on the outskirts of the capital.

Say Hun Grocer Chosen to Die For Hitler Legend

Stockholm, April 27 — (AP) — The Nya Ord German newspaper Arbeid said Thursday a carefully cushed German grocer resembling Adolf Hitler has been sent to Berlin to die Fuehrer's place "to die on the barricades."

"He will act as Hitler's trump card, creating a hero legend around the Fuehrer's death while Hitler himself goes underground, the paper said.

It said the stand-in was August Wilhelm Hoppe, 45, a Hamburg grocer in Plauen, and that he had been specially trained to speak like Hitler in a long association with the Fuehrer at Berchtesgaden.

Two or three days, the agency said, Bartholdy will appear in the Berlin fighting over the last remnants where "Hitler's devoted photographer, Hoffman," and propaganda staff members will be on hand to film Hitler's last moment on the battlefield."

Historic Junction Made At Torgau on Elbe River 28 Mi. Northeast of Leipzig

London, Washington and Moscow Announce Meeting

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

Paris, April 27 —(CP)— The United States 1st Army and the Russians have joined in the heart of Germany near Leipzig, severing Germany.

Strong columns of Gen. Hodges and Marshal Ivan S. Konev established their junction at Torgau, the United States 3rd Army invaded Austria and established radio contact with the Russians west of Vienna in a swift manoeuvre which virtually encircled Czechoslovakia and cut the Germans' vanishing hold in Europe into three great death traps.

Americans and Russians joined hands yesterday. Their patrols had met in the ancient city of Torgau, historic town of 14,000 where ancestors of the Russians and their western Allies nearly two centuries ago in the Seven Years War, 28 miles southwest of Gyng Berlin and 26 miles east of Leipzig.

The junction hopelessly outlanked Berlin, enemy capital, and Dresden and split German armies for reduction in detail.

The London command said the 9th Army crossed the lower Elbe from the north side of Tangermunde where another junction with the Russians was imminent if it had now already taken place.

Berlin, Vienna Homes, the Kremlin and Whitehall jointly announced the historic junction of the 1st Army and the Russians. The American Army group, led by the tall, soft-spoken Omar Nelson Bradley, turn impending disaster into victory at the gates of Moscow in the snow of December, 1941.

The end was not yet, but it was inevitably brought closer. The Germans still had 200 divisions, most of them under strength but many of them fighting with the desperation of the doomed, but were S.S. units.

The Russians now were at the threshold of sure and imminent victory.

The two armies fought their way to the junction across the whole breadth of Europe —3,260 airline miles from Stalingrad on the Volga to the Elbe, and Czechoslovakia and the Atlantic which Gen. Eisenhower's armies reached when June 6 broke his wires scored on one building.

German Barges Sunk at Hamburg By Typhoons

London, April 27 (CP)—An attempt by the Germans to reinforce their garrison at Hamburg from the west was broken up late yesterday by rocket-firing Typhoons of the R.A.F.

Just before dusk, the enemy sped several heavily laden barges into the port and started unloading them. A reconnaissance plane reported the activity, two aimed were made and some barges were sunk. Explosions indicated that the craft may have carried ammunition.

The Germans were fighting bitterly in the defence of Hamburg, but only to hold the port but to keep open the escape highways to Denmark. Signs of a general movement north toward the Danish frontier were reported by Allied fliers.

The naval base of Kiel was bombed for the second time and other Mosquito made sweeps over the remaining enemy airfields in northern Germany without loss. Beaufighters reveiw minelaying from attacks on enemy shipping off southern Norway yesterday. Two enemy merchant ships were set afire.

Three buildings believed to be headquarters from which the Germans are directing operations against Arnhem and Nijmegen bridges were destroyed or badly damaged by dive-bombers of the Royal Air Force and some bomb hits were scored on one building.

Junction of Allied and Russian Forces Viewed as Great Symbolic Triumph

London, April 27 (CP) — The German war machine now is recognized as the last great preliminary to the closing battles in the heart of Germany.

It is true that Mr. Churchill himself, last night, described the battles might be won more quickly than single armies had dared to hope, but the words of caution have taken from rock-ribbed Britain's mouth, publicly, optimizing the weight and importance of the linking up of the armies of the two leading powers.

Delay in the news of the junction, which many people believed had occurred some days ago, tended to take the edge off exuberance.

Today in the newspapers, the junction of the armies of the United States and Russia was the subject of the leading articles, and the significance of the event was stressed.

The Daily Telegraph and Morning Post declared that the junction of the armies of the United States and Russia was the subject of the leading articles, and the significance of the event was stressed.

There's a Housewife Now Gunning for Thin-Haired Reporter

There have been many inquiries in the editorial rooms of this newspaper regarding the weather reports.

The boys, many of them, prior to taking off on a hunting or fishing trip usually call to ascertain what the weather man has in store for them. Other people planning long motor trips do likewise. Farmers have asked for the information to assist them in planting or other agricultural problems.

But it remains to a city housewife on Thursday to take the proverbial cake with her reason for inquiring about the future whims of the weather bloke.

"What are the probabilities for tomorrow?" she inquired sweetly.

A reporter scratched his two remaining hairs, reached for the weather probabilities and as sweetly as a scribe could do it, seeing it was yet twenty hours before the payroll deadline, quoth "Milder, on Friday, cloudy, unsettled on Saturday."

"Thank goodness," breathed the voice at the other end of the line," Now I can hang out my washing."

Today it was pouring rain. The reporter now has one hair to scratch.

When his motor car was struck by a C.P.R. freight train at the Ivanhoe crossing Thursday evening, 69-year-old Robert Shaw of Ivanhoe, narrowly escaped death as the vehicle was completely demolished after being dragged and rolled in front of the railway engine for a considerable distance along the railway right of way and was suffering from concussion when attended by Dr. S. R. Beatty of Madoc.

Provincial Constable J. H. Hatch of Madoc investigated the accident and found the motor car and freight engine were in collision at the bottom of a hill where the C.P.R. tracks cross the Madoc-Belleville road. The motor car was rolled some distance along the track and was completely demolished, the report added.

UNITED NATIONS

ness of his statement counted.

He asked the conference to set itself a target of four weeks to agree on a charter, and laid special responsibility on the great powers to observe the high standards of conduct in dealings with other countries.

Mr. Eden's speech appeared to indicate he intends to play the role of conciliator for the great powers in dealing with the smaller.

He described the Dumbarton Oaks security plan for an international organization as "a compromise," but "not an attempt to dictate to the rest of the world what the future world organization shall be."

Fill in Details Later.

Warning that security could not be built in a day or in a document, he asked the conference to draw up a charter in conformity with agreed principles and fill in details later. Security on a lasting basis could only come with time and trial.

The same idea was stressed by Mr. Stettinius who presided as acting chairman. He said:

"The whole structure will take years to build but without agreement on a charter the structure of peace cannot be built at all."

M. Molotov spoke in Russian and his speech was translated into English and French. He said he wanted to assure the conference that Russia was devoted to the cause of setting up an organization to preserve peace.

In an interview previously M. Molotov said that the Polish controversy would be solved, but he made it clear that the conference would play no part in the settlement. There was an excellent decision on the question adopted at the Crimea Conference.

"We shall carry it out and facilitate the solution of the problem," he said.

If Mr. Eden's four-week schedule works out, it still is unlikely that all Canadian delegates will stay until the end.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader, is scheduled to make an election speech in Vancouver May 21 and may not return to the conference.

Mr. King may leave about the same time or a little earlier to start his election campaign.

ALLIES SPEED

The communique limited its report on 8th Army activities to the disclosure that these troops had crossed the Canale Bianco at several points, capturing many bridges intact, and had reached the Adige against moderate resistance, including tanks.

Planes flew more than 2,200 sorties in support of the ground offensive yesterday, destroyed five enemy planes in combat and five on the ground.

Believe Nazis Withdrawing

Bern, April 27 — (AP) — Indications mounted today that German forces in northern Italy were withdrawing rapidly into Germany to reinforce Hitler's Bavarian redoubt, leaving Mussolini and his Blackshirts to their fate.

Advices from the Swiss frontier said the Germans apparently had made little if any effort to aid Fascist forces in defending the big industrial cities of Genoa, Turin and Milan, which last night were reported captured by Italian patriots.

Long columns of German trucks, evacuating troops and equipment from garrisons along the Swiss frontier, were seen moving toward the Brenner Pass — the avenue to the mountains area where die-hard Nazi leaders are expected to make their last stand.

Mussolini, abandoned by the Nazis, was said to have fled to a monastery in the border town of Como, where bitter fighting later was reported between Partisan and Fascist forces.

The Rome radio, in a broadcast heard in London, said today there apparently was no foundation for reports of Mussolini's arrest. The broadcast asserted, however, that the entire Swiss-Italian border from Como to Domodossola — 75 miles westward on the Simplon Pass route — was in Patriot hands.

The annual meeting of the Catholic Women's League of the Belleville sub-division was held in St. Michael's High School.

The President, Mrs. S. B. Upper, presided and after the opening exercises, recited prayers for deceased and sick members. Upon completion of the monthly business, detailed and comprehensive reports of the year's activities were given showing a most successful year completed with the largest membership ever in this sub-division.

The social service work of the League is closely linked with that of the Benevolent Society of the parish. An active park has been taken by members at the Blood Donors' Clinic and in the distribution of ration books. In the work of the Red Cross this subdivision has this year made an outstanding contribution, having completed three hundred and forty-five articles, including soldiers' shirts, blouses, boys' underwear, kits, coats, girls' underwear, gowns, skirts, blouses, dresses, tops for quilts and sundry other articles.

Byron O. Lott, Only Surviving Charter Member of Stirling Chapter, Gets 50-Yr. Jewel

Jewel Inscribed With His Name and Date of His Initiation

Sincere tribute was paid Thursday night, by Keystone Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons in Stirling, through the presentation of a fifty-year jewel to the chapter's only surviving charter member, Companion Byron O. Lott.

Companion Lott, though partially incapacitated by a fall when visiting Toronto last week, was able to be present to receive the decoration and to hear the warm congratulatory messages from prominent members of the order who were present.

Beautifully Engraved.

The beautifully engraved gold jewel was suitably inscribed with the name of the recipient and the date of his initiation when Keystone Chapter was instituted half-a-century ago. The names of the other charter members, all of whom had entered the eternal, were read by the secretary.

The Scribe E. of the chapter, Rt. Ex. Comp. Thos. W. Solmes, made the presentation in a brief but appreciative address. He stated that this duty was to have been performed by Rt. Ex. Comp. Dr. C. F. Walt but the latter was unable to appear because of illness. He paid fitting tribute to Companion Lott's sterling qualities as a citizen and a Mason and then pinned the decoration on the coat of the veteran fraternalist.

Ninety Next June.

Companion Lott, who will be ninety years of age next June, but who appears a much younger and a sturdier man, made a grateful acknowledgment and in a reminiscent mood gave some interesting facts about his association with Masonry.

He was a native of the township of Rawdon and was born upon his father's farm. Both his father and his grandfather had been members of the Masonic order and his father was the oldest Master of the province of Ontario when he passed away at the age of 90 years. He himself had been initiated into Craft Masonry away back in 1877 when he was received into Stirling Lodge, A.F. & A.M. of which he subsequently became master and by which he was presented with the other fifty-year jewel he was wearing. He had done his best to live up to the principles of the order and deeply appreciated the many fine friendships he had formed within the portals of this greatest of fraternities.

R. Ex. Comp. Henry Speaks.

The presiding officer then called upon Rt. Ex. Comp. J. Owen Herity, of Quinte Friendship Chapter, Belleville, and Past Grand Superintendent, Companion Herity referred to the great service Companion Lott had rendered to his native township and to the county of Hastings when he was a prominent member of the township and county councils. The speaker stated that there were three forms of government in Canada—municipal, provincial and federal. Of these he regarded the municipal as the most important because it was the closest to the people and had a more intelligent appreciation of their needs. He instanced the fine financial record of Hastings county, now free of all bonded indebtedness and the remarkable service to the county of such municipal statesmen as Messrs. Robert Cooke, Nathaniel Vermilyea and Col. Ronson Vanderwater.

From Far Gonaives.

In ending Companion Herity quoted a poem composed for the occasion:

Hence Companion Byron Lott!

May he live a thousand years!
In better joy and friendliness
With God and man.

And may I live a thousand too,
A thousand less a day;
For I, whilst I want to stay on earth,
And know he passed away,

So I'm looking forward to the night,
For that happy reunion
When he shall wear, upon his breast,
A jewel bright and gay.

To show he's spent one hundred years,
While on our course pursue,
As brother, neighbor, loyal friend,
Companion, Christ and true.

After Companion Lott had graciously commented upon the congenial appreciation, there were further congratulatory addresses by Companion Col. Ronson Vanderwater, Companion Clifford Bateman and Companion Dr. Walt.

St. Comp. J. A. Lott, First Principal, presided very capably during the meeting.

KILLED AT LEIPZIG

This photo of Gaston Madru, ace newsreel cameraman, was made when he was filming the happiness that followed the liberation of Paris by the Yanks. Disclosure has just been made that Madru was killed by a German sniper during street fighting that preceded capture of Leipzig.

While Soviet armies drive into the streets of Berlin, and the U. S. 1st and 9th armies are moving to a junction with the Red forces south of that city, Gen. Patch's U. S. 3rd Army has swarmed southeastward to join in the advance against the ramparts of the Nazis' Alpine redoubt, along with the U. S. 7th and the French 1st. Bridging the latest bridgehead across the Danube, the 7th (1) and elements of the French 1st move toward Berchtesgaden (A), while the U. S. 3rd (2) presses toward Austrian airfield (3). At the redoubt's eastern gate, Munchville, sweeping halfway across Austria, Soviet armies (3) approach the same gateway.

Berlin a Trap for Huns

Marshal Stalin's armies have achieved is of the great events of history, the enclement of a great modern capital city, rlin, and are carrying the war right into very part of the city a large part of which now in their possession. It is estimated at there are trapped here no fewer than at a million Germans the largest number men ever surrounded. Here is a proof of e mammoth and gigantic character of is struggle with vast armies and great ength in materiil on a scale never before conceived. A gigantic battle is raging thin the city and its end will be one only, e destruction of the German defender ere.

The battle of Berlin is the unavoidable nsequence of the evil genius of Hitler nd of the arrogance of the German people. It is a symbol of the ruin which has me upon Germany. The Germans are efeated in a marked degree. The powerful forces of the United Nations have met gimented Germany and thoroughly defeated her. The evil designs of Germany ve bringing their retribution, the destruction of the enemy's armed might and its militarist and unrepentant aggression.

Britain's Maquis

It has now been officially revealed that a 1940 an underground movement was rganized in Britain in preparation for a erman invasion of Britain.

The occasion and medium for this revelation was the farewell message of General ir Harold Franklyn, C-in-C British Home forces, released to the press recently, rior to this the existence of this secret ritish civilian force, elaborately trained nd organized for Maquis warfare, was unnown to any but a few high-placed officials. The organization has been "stood down' by the War Office. General ranklyn's message reads:

"Each member of the organization from the first invasion days, beginning in 1940, luntarily undertook a hazardous role which required both skill and courage, well knowing that the very nature of their work ould allow no public recognition. This rganization, founded on the keenness and atriotism of selected civilians of all rades has been in a position throughout o constant and thorough training to furish accurate information of value on invasion instantly to military headquarters."

According to unofficial reports, the overnment was so secretly organized that very few people knew of it, not even members of others. It was not founded on any continental example, since it was stablished before France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway organized heir undergrounds. The members had adio transmitters and receivers, messengers and code clerks, and were organized and supervised by 300 specially picked officers of the British Army Special Duties branch. Members were all civilians doing ordinary jobs.

Radios hidden in the countryside in small concrete hideouts were so well camouflaged that many people have walked over them without suspecting that anything was there. It was no amateur force, but highly skilled, minutely trained and kept in training by an army of intelligence officers, so that if the Germans had invaded England a merciless underground warfare could have been carried out against them.

The names of members remain on the files still marked "top secret," and will remain unknown lest the occasion should ever arise again for them to be ordered underground. The London Daily Mail reports that in one area of southern England, considered likely for an invasion spot, the key figure in this underground movement was an attractive blonde young woman who was a cipher expert for two counties and charged with conveying to headquarters all details reaching her from agents.

One Nazi Crime —

(Archbishop Spellman of New York, in Collier's Weekly)

I met a Frenchman from Ermoges who told me about Oradour, "place of prayer" the Lidice of France—that ghost town of horror, pillage and massacre, with everyone of its fifteen hundred villagers dead! It was one more pathetic proof of the pitiful plight and the needs of the people of France. Early in June, Nazi troops arrived at Oradour, said they had information that arms were hidden in the vicinity and ordered the men, women and children into the church and neighboring barns for verification of their papers.

Thinking that because they were not guilty, the villagers politely and quietly did as they were told. Over five hundred women and children, some of them from the neighboring farms of Ligoux and Javerlhac were there, and all marched into the church and barns which became their death tombs, for the Nazis had stored explosives in the church. The doors and the windows were set afire. Terrified, the children called frantically to their dying mothers, helpless in their torture. And anyone who tried to escape was machine-gunned.

Every house in the village was put to flame. The church was a scene of ghastly horror, and in. the rectory garden were empty baby carriages in which mothers had unsuspectingly brought their babies to slaughter.

The Always Arrogant German

(London Sunday Chronicle)

From what springs this arrogance, this sullen hypocrisy of defeat so obvious? Goebbels can answer this question. These Germans are his people. In twelve years he has built around the German mind a shelter of lies. Goebbels hopes that shelter will survive defeat, that it will keep the Germans unrepentant for another generation that they might nurture hatred in their hearts and in that hatred find the will to fight again.

The fight against the Germans of men are meeting today show the measure of his success. Their defiance is the product of the Nazi school. The thing they have to believe is that Germany is a guiltless nation, wretched and attacked by jealous neighbors. That is the lie we must destroy. Upon it is built the vicious desire for revenge that will exist in the German heart after the last German city has been occupied. Upon it is built that mad Nazi plan to make a last-ditch stand in the Bavarian mountains. The errand lambs who brought horror to the world want to find their last battle there and, by this fantastic downfall, create a German legend for all time.

Genius of Terror

(Providence Journal)

The full story of the destruction caused by these weapons (V-1 and V-2 rocket-bombs) has never been told. It is an appalling one, appalling in its achievement and in the genius spent in sheer revenge. For from the beginning this diabolical attack offered no promise of a military victory. . . . They had already done a monstrously effective piece of work. Every V-1, for example, compelled the diversion by wide the direction and distance of those which followed were adjusted. Another device plunged it toward its target at the proper second. The V-2 was less accurate but far more destructive. This paragon of vengeance brought out the genius of the Germans all right, genius devoted to sheer terrorization and fore-shadowing more monstrous things to come unless saner and more humane genius makes a concerted effort to overcome it.

"During this war the BBC has beaten Goebbels at his own game," says Collier Knox in the London Daily Mail. "By telling the truth—a simple but unpopular practice. Its European service, staffed by capable young men who deserve the recognition they will never get, has worked wonders. The Overseas Network, a marvel of engineering dovetailing like the Cromwell road—goes on forever."

COMPENSATIONS

Against life's hurt and care,
Earth offers pleasures rare:
A sturdy oak or birch,
The laughter of a brook,
The thrill of line and hook,
The flash of cardinal wing,
The song the thrushes sing.

Not all is grief and harm.
Earth offers much to charm:
A patch of ground to hoe
Larkspur and marigold;
Trillium each May, and fern
And tulips in their turn;
Next at the springtime's close
The peony and the rose,

Not all is heartache here.
Good things supply the year.
Moonlight on lake and stream,
Old trees 'neath which to dream,
Wild creatures, wood and sky;
Beauty to catch the eye,
And friendships true to share,
Whatever comes of care.

French-Canadian Serves on Okinawa

This is another of the articles written by Ernie Pyle before he was killed in action on Ie Shima.

OKINAWA.—One morning after breakfast about a dozen of us were sitting on the mat covered floor of a little Okinawa house. Mr. and Mrs. Nishigo over while sipping our coffee.

Our First Division Marine company had just moved in the night before and several days' accumulation of grime covered everybody.

Suddenly Lt. "Bones" Casteel stood up and said:

"I cleaned my fingernails this morning and it sure does feel good."

And then my friend Bird Dog Clayton held his own begrimed hands out in front of him, looked at them a long time and said:

"If I was to go to diner in Dallas and lay them things up on a white tablecloth I wonder what would happen?"

A good many of the Okinawa civilians, while wandering along the roadside, bow low to every American they meet. Whether this is from fear or native courtesy I do not know, but anywhere they do it. And the Americans being Americans usually bow right back.

One of the marines I know got mixed up in one of these little bowing incidents the other day. He is Pfc. Roy Sellers a machine gunner from Amelia, O.

Roy is married and has a little girl two years old. He used to be a machinist. He played semi-pro ball too.

When Roy has a beard he looks just like a tramp in a stage play. He is only 27, but looks older. In fact he goes by the nickname "Old Man."

Well, one day Old Man was trying to ride a Japanese bicycle along the bank of a little river where we camped. The ground was rough and the bicycle had only pedal and Roy was having a struggle to keep his bike upright.

Just then an old Okinawan, bareheaded and dressed in a black kimona and carrying a dirty sack, walked along the camp. He wasn't supposed to be at large but it was none of our business and we didn't question him.

He was bowing to everybody, right and left, as he passed. Then he met Machine Gunner Sellers on his one-pedaled bicycle. Roy was already having his troubles.

As he came abreast of the Okinawan, Roy, deeply over the handle bars, hit a rut, lost his balance and away he went. The Okinawan, with Oriental insecurity jumped right on the bar now and grew locked back.

We all laughed our heads off. "Who's bowing to whom around here?" we asked. Roy denied he had meant to bow first. He was bowing after that he decided to give his old Nepal way to somebody less polite than himself.

As our company was moving forward one day, I looked down the line of closely packed marines. I thought for a moment I was back in Italy.

There for sure was Bill Maudlin's cartoon character G.I. Joe—the solemn, bearded dirty, drooping weary old man of the infantry.

His character was Pfc. Urban Vachon, of French-Canadian extraction, who comes from Leonfrd, N.H. He has a brother, William fighting in Germany.

Urban is such a perfect ringer for Maudlin's soldier that I asked the regimental photographer to take a picture of him.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH

Somewhere old Ponce de Leon began his search for the "Fountain of Youth" when he was fifty-two—an old man indeed for those early in the 16th century, was centenarian is about 85 today—and turned up his nose, poor fellow, when he was in such a remarkable old age that, though today a great deal of speed be made accidentally interested, in social security, hardened arteries and rheumatism. At that I dare say Ponce got a better daily ration of his anti-gray hair vitamins than you or I can get from our food, for in his time people ate undenaturated, unrefined food, not refined, startled stuff left after the mother or other processors have removed the vitamins and minerals from it.

It is difficult to infer, from what the history books tell us of Ponce de Leon, whether he had gray hair or any hair to speak of at the time he set out on his adventure. But this is pretty certain — he must have had what it takes, what it does it take for a man at 52 to begin a great adventure? Vite, Ponce had all, right.

And that brings us to the anti-gray hair vitamin. There are certain vitamins of the B-complex, particularly pantothenate, choline, inositol and para-amino benzoic acid which various investigators believe essential to prevent the premature graying of the hair. These and other factors or components of the B-complex are required in adequate daily amount to maintain vite. Probably most of us would get adequate daily supply of these anti-gray hair vitamins if we ate plenty of wheat entire, or ground into fritz or milled into flour as people did more than a century ago.

But that is not us. We've been thoroughly educated and we have childish notion that for us plain wheat flour with 72 per cent extract is too coarse, crude or even "irritating" for our delicate digestive tract. So we eat only dainty refined flour.

We Yankees even try to provide our delightful white bread as a special treat for sons of the Italian and French people who have had to subsist on black or brown bread, which is of course, far better nourishment for any one than the chalk-faced loaf we call bread.

BELLEVILLE GIRL STUDYING VOICE IN NEW YORK

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brennan, Sr., Honored by Friends on Occasion Of 55th Anniversary of Wedding

Congratulations and best wishes were the order of the day on Saturday, April 21st, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Brennan, Sr., of Lonsdale, 8th concession of Tyendinaga Township, when they celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The couple were married at Marysville on the 21st day of April, 1888, and have resided at the groom's homestead most of their married life.

About fifty guests who gathered to honor the occasion and to "trip the light fantastic" were delighted when the bride and groom led a quadrille and the groom performed a very fine step dance.

After the reading of an address, followed by suitable responses, Mr. and Mrs. Brennan were the recipients of several handsome gifts among which were two beautifully upholstered chairs from family relatives and friends.

Following the presentations by the hostesses and two granddaughters, refreshments were served by others of the nineteen grandchildren.

The two charming hostesses were Mrs. Frank Brennan, Marysville, and Mrs. Fred Brennan, Lonsdale, daughters-in-law.

It was regrettable that a third daughter-in-law, Mrs. Clare Brennan, Kingsford, was unable to attend, owing to illness in the home. The youngest of the family of four sons, James Leonard Brennan, Kingsford, sailing somewhere in the St. Lawrence and lower lakes, was also unable to be present for the happy occasion.

Hearty good wishes still continue to follow Mr. and Mrs. Brennan through the twilight of their lives.

Supt. of Nurses Guest Speaker At Anglican YPA

Miss E. Horton, Superintendent of Nurses of the Belleville General Hospital, was the guest speaker of the Anglican Young People's Association of Christ Church, at their last weekly meeting, held in the parish hall, Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

The address was preceded by the regular business and devotional periods. Due to the resignation of the worthy president, Miss Eleanor Bassett, an election was held, with Bob Bentley elected for the 1943-44 year. Marjorie Bassett, 1942-43 National convention of the A.Y.P.A. to be held next June in Port Arthur, Woods, at the end of June. President Lloyd Gladwell was chosen to be the local delegate, with Secretary Charles Fielding as sub-delegate. A discussion followed on means of raising funds for sending these members, which concluded the business. Jean Yates, being elected as chairman of a racing and bridge committee, and Terry Mosely as chairman of the refreshment committee. Both of these special committees will report on their progress next week.

History Outlined.

Miss Horton then addressed the gathering. The history of the nursing profession was outlined, with special emphasis on the part the sisters have played in it. The speaker proceeded to discuss the educational requirements of the nurse, her training and personal qualities of a good nurse, the hours of duty and the types of work. The first essential to be that the nurse of today is well-trained. The old saying that "every woman thinks she is a nurse" was answered in the negative by Miss Horton in this profession. You must want to serve people, but you must also have the necessary training. Many women are very attractive, for their is, and there is no place in the field for a certain shortage of skilled nurses. Besides the hospital and home nursing, there is public health work (V.O.N.) industrial nursing, teaching, and military nursing." Special attention was drawn to the severe shortage of nurses in the latter field, and the speaker pointed out that many splendid openings are available in the nursing profession to take the place of those who are free to serve overseas.

In thanking the speaker, Lloyd Gladwell said the thoroughness with which such a wide subject had been dealt with was very much appreciated.

The meeting was then turned over to the Fellowship Committee, under the leadership of Ed Waterhouse, and a few games were played. A sparkling close closed the meeting with a prayer

CANADIAN Y·M·C·A WAR SERVICES

According to the News Bulletin published by The National Council of Young Men's Christian Associations of Canada at Toronto, a new Y.M.C.A. hut was opened last week at Prince Rupert, B.C., built and furnished by the Canadian Legion. The Y.M.C.A. War Services as a cost of $225,000. This centre is believed to be the largest of its kind in Canada. On the opening of this new centre, the Right Hon. Viscount Bennett, who is now Lord Bennett, will act officially: "It is safe to say that under conditions as they existed before the war, we would never have been able to provide ourselves with such a splendid structure as the Y.M.C.A. has opened for its local service centre, and which after the war is over will be a principals will become available at the Prince Rupert centre, according to which we have so long hoped and worked."

The Bulletin also contained an article on the extension of Y's Men's Clubs throughout Canada. Recently, new clubs have been chartered in Brantford and in St. Thomas, and the word has just come from Fredericton, N.B., that the Y's Men's Club there has gone out to Woodstock, N.B., and organized a Y's Men's Club there. The new Club is sponsoring a group in Dartmouth and the Y's Men's Club at Toronto Central have three clubs in prospect. The Sydney Y's Men's Club says that a club is practically assured at Glace Bay. Very recently reactivated was the Y's Men's Club in Belleville. It is claimed that a new club is in progress in Port Arthur. The Kitchener Club is on its feet again. A strong Y's Men's Club has been organized at Edmonton.

There is also a Red Triangle Club at Chinandeau, Italy, which is doing a really fine job. The centre was organized from the nucleus of a small sports field has been allocated to it. Recently, 200 men have availed of the facilities every night. When Canadian Y.M.C.A. War Services Supervisor, Dr. Arthur Surridge, recently visited repatriated Canadians who were all Liverpool men, news of the war and comic strips in Canadian papers were read and soldiers wanted most to hear from him.

Since the beginning of the war, the Canadian Y.M.C.A. War Services have done a great deal to work towards boosting the morale of the service personnel. They have provided by every guard in their power the strain of the past six years of war. And when the victory is won and the peace declared, the success of this great undertaking can be attributed in no small measure to the wonderfully cooperated effort of the Y.M.C.A. War Services. Since the outbreak of hostilities in 1939, they have distributed to the Armed Services free of any charge one and a half billion sheets of writing paper, one quarter of a billion envelopes, four million post cards, five and a half million packs of matches, four and a half million packs of playing cards, 31,264 hockey sticks, 79,000 softballs, 11,713 badminton birth, 14,476 pairs horseshoes, 612,000 lbs. of chewing tobacco, 1,000,000 bars of chocolate, 38,000 phonographic records, 8,964 wall pictures, 11,482 gramophones, 1,000 trunks and a great deal of other sporting equipment.

Full-Tide of Pacific War Must Come After Battle of Berlin Says J. F. Pringle

Warning that the Battle of Berlin does not necessarily mean the speedy end of the European War and that afterwards the full-tide of the Pacific War must come was emphasized by J. F. Pringle, vice-president and general manager, Central Region, Canadian National Railways, at a general meeting of the Belleville Division Victory Loan campaign Thursday afternoon. The gathering was a big one, presided over by Superintendent O. W. Duff, it included supervisory officers, key-men and canvassers from various points on the thousand miles of track making up the division.

Approximately 300 Canadian National Railways employees from the various points on the Belleville division attended the meeting which was addressed by Mr. Pringle, Mr. Johnston and Lieut. Allen Kerr of the R.C.N.V.R.

Mr. Pringle opened his address by reading a message from R. C. Vaughan, chairman and president of the Canadian National System, which said: "As the forces of the Allied nations close in on the heart of Nazi tyranny, the German people have been called upon to cast aside the rules of warfare. We may expect fanatical resistance, as the day of victory draws near. The war is not yet won. Our men have sacrificed much and much more will be demanded of them. They are not resting and we at home cannot relax. The price of victory is great and every one of us must help to pay it. I am confident that the men and women of the Canadian National system will be equal to their splendid achievements of the past and will do their utmost in support of the 5th Victory Loan".

Fighting For Freedom.

"The men we sent overseas are fighting for freedom", continued Mr. Pringle, "and each and every one of us has a particular interest in seeing that this country is preserved free. Makes We are fighting for the freedom of the press that is freedom for our newspapers to publish all the news, freedom for the radio, freedom for our radio stations to broadcast and freedom for our people to listen; freedom of worship and freedom of education. These are the same things our boys are fighting for. It is our privilege to do our part and by so doing to support them to the limit. Without such freedom we are a nation of slaves". Continuing with Hitler's conquest, Mr. Pringle pointed out, and the fact that another enemy resistance may be encountered, these might not mean a speedy end of hostilities. There are other factors to be considered, such as Hitler's recent outburst of defiance, in which he urged the German armies to fight on, S.S. troops to break up into guerilla bands and the boast of the underground "werewolves" that they fight a campaign of banditry and assassination. "There is also the Japanese War", he added. Our long Pacific Coast line makes us as much interested in the Pacific theatre as in Europe. We learned that in 1942 we barely escaped from a Japanese invasion of our coast, or, at least, having it shelled from the sea. Money will be required to furnish supplies and ships for the Pacific War.

Money to Feed Europe.

"Money is also necessary to feed the Nazi devastated countries of Europe. It is necessary for the purpose of bringing our boys back home, rehabilitating them in civil life, and seeing that the wounded and maimed are provided with the best hospital and medical care. To see that the men and women of our fighting services receive every consideration and help is a national obligation which cannot be shirked. To provide money for this is as necessary now as it was at any time during the course of the war".

Concluding, Mr. Pringle congratulated the Belleville Division upon the fine showing made in the 7th Victory Loan. He said that 2,333 employees, out of a total of 2,373 subscribed $264,000, making an average of $117, per subscription. He was satisfied that in the 5th Victory Loan the Belleville Division would make an equally fine showing.

Prices Bd. Order Defines Tenants Who Can Be Evicted

"Undesirable" tenants who may be rightfully evicted by householders are defined by an Order of the Prices Board as those who are "Communist" or "Communistic", who "tend to harm the character of the accommodation", damage it, or allow it to deteriorate or not maintain reasonable care of it. This applies to the tenant sub-tenant or anyone living with him.

An official of the Rentals Administration explained the procedure: "If a tenant proves objectionable, the landlord can get a form on which he states his reasons for wishing to evict the tenant. This is all he has to do. We communicate with the tenant and arrange for each party to state his side of the case.

If the landlord's complaints are justified, the lease will be put under provincial law. This means the landlord can terminate the tenant after giving a month's notice—if the rent is paid by the month—or a week's notice if it is paid by the week—just as he did before there were any rental regulations.

"The lease is thus removed from the rent control's regulations which require a landlord to give six months' notice".

Every effort has been made by the Rentals Administration to expedite the disposal of these applications. Landlords can be assured that decisions will be made within a week after the application is filed with us.

Tenants may also be evicted under provincial law for being in arrears of rent or not adhering to the terms of the lease.

Americans See Canadian Work

New York, April 27 (CP)—Sterling silver, china, glassware and straw work from British Columbia, and table mats from Quebec are doing their part in bringing the people of Canada and the United States together, an exhibit of Canadian handicrafts which is displaying fabrics and other articles from every province of the Dominion is to open tomorrow at "Hands Across the Border."

The exhibition has been assembled by the Canadian Council of the Canadian Handicraft Guild and is under the joint sponsorship of the Canadian, American Committees on International Relations (American Section) and the American Craftsmen's Educational Council. It will be on display at the Craftsmen's gallery, "America House," in midtown New York.

The display is part of the program for the development of the arts under the Canadian Handicraft Guild, which has many specialized craft guilds for particular arts such as pottery and weaving. Each association has its requirements and develops finer techniques in finished work. Its chief concern is to train and educate their artists and to show that handicrafts are on the same level as painting and sculpture. They hope to bring the arts of Canada and the United States, and other countries in the future, closer through education, meetings, exhibits and interchanges of ideas by students.

The exhibition was organized by Mrs. O. D. Vaughan of Toronto, head of the exhibition committee. While in New York she is in charge of Miss Wanda Nellies, also of Toronto, shop secretary and a director.

SUPERPORTS BOMB AIRFIELDS

Guam, April 27 (AP)—A force of 900 to 250 Superfortresses bombed airfields of the Japanese home islands of Kyushu and Shikoku, dropping their explosives from westerly altitudes through overcast, Gen. Arnold announced today.

The strike, aimed at bases from which the Japanese have staged air attacks on American ground positions and shipping at Okinawa, marked the first B-29 raid on Shikoku.

JERSEY GIANTS RUN STRING OF VICTORIES TO SIX

For First Time Team Trotted Out Route-Going Pitcher

By The Associated Press

The International League baseball season is young yet, but as far as Jersey City's ravaged Little Giants are concerned, there is no time like the present for running up a comfortable early lead.

Gabby Hartnett's high-flying pacemakers stretched their unbeaten string to six yesterday, and appeared more convincing than ever as they downed Montreal Royals at Roosevelt Stadium, 7-1. Furthermore, the Jay-Cees trotted out a route-going pitcher for the first time this season in Mike Mallia. The latter, who won seven and lost nine for the Jerseymen in 1944, gave up seven hits but walked seven and contributed a big, big run given a lot of batting help by Lee Layton, who had four-for-five, including a homer.

Montreal's defeat left the idle Baltimore Orioles in sole possession of second place in the standings.

The hapless Buck Bloom suffered their fifth straight loss when they were belted by Newark, 8-7. Karl Drews, who recently pitched a 10-inning one-hitter for the Bears, gave up a dozen safeties in the 7 innings he worked for the eventual victors. Bill Rebe hit a homer for Newark while Babe came thru with four singles.

Churchill Hopes His Optimism Will Not Be Mocked by Events

London, April 26 —(Reuters)— Prime Minister Churchill, asked today to make a statement on German rocket attacks against England, replied briefly in the House of Commons when he replied:

"Yes Sir, they have ceased."

He was less emphatic when asked for an assurance that there was no likelihood of their resumption.

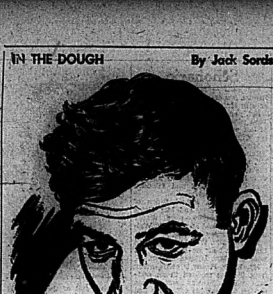
"It is my duty to record facts rather than to indulge in prophesy but I have recorded such facts with very considerable joy," he added, which, I trust, will not be brought to mockery by events," he said.

Congratulations for stopping the attacks came up to the R.A.F., anti-aircraft gunners and the Royal Navy, he said in reply to a further question, but refrained from the words when he said:

"You must not forget that it was the British army . . ."

He added that there also was some of the credit, the brunt of which fell on London, would certainly be published.

METHOD OF GREETING WORRIES REDS



Moscow, April 26 — (AP)—While the world awaited an announcement of a line-up of American and British officials to greet Stalin, word reached a little about a Russian custom of embracing on such occasions as meeting.

An engineer questioned near Red Square said that no stalker where the link-up takes place "it will be the only the greatest moment of our epoch."

"The only thing that worries me," he said, "is that we Russians unruly kiss one another. This may seem strange to American eyes. I suppose everything will be all right on such an occasion."

Montreal, April 27. (CP) — North Bay is intent upon making a bid for recognition in the Canadian Junior Hockey picture. Their publicist in the matter is none other than Bruce Hutton, of Nugget, Jessup, recently returned to the Sports World from the Armed Services.

According to what Britt says, hockey fans in Ontario's north are living for the day when the Northern Ontario Hockey Association will be a separate branch of the O.H.A. and not a part of the O.H.A. The Nugget Sports editor points out that North Bay never had so much success in baseball until the Northern Baseball Association was formed apart from the Ontario Baseball Association.

A recent beef concerned the $1,500 grants made to each branch of the O.H.A., for minor hockey in the coming season. Not being an affiliated branch in their own right, the N.O.H.A. will see only what part of the $1,500 the O.H.A. gets that the latter body see fit to bestow upon their affiliate.

To date, the Juvenile League in North Bay has never received any financial aid from the C.A.H.A. or the O.H.A. and says Britt, the N.O.H.A. affiliates are so expansive, they are entitled to a full share of minor hockey betterment. The argument seems sound. Ontario's northern cities have produced a lot of good hockey from talent to date.

Perhaps the big drawback in getting separate affiliation is the fact that there are no artificial ice rinks in the district. That was the main reason the Chicago Black Hawks did not set up a Junior A farm team in North Bay—a real sore affront.

There still is a possibility that the Chibawks will give North Bay hockey a boost—as soon as the city has an indoor rink. And that would spell the start of a separate branch for Northern Ontario, separate grants and all the trimmings.

"Our bank rolls will get stronger
Yet we won't need another job."
"If this series lasts much longer
Twill be the owners who will sob
Because no teams can get much stronger
When they've passed out on the job".

CONNIE MACK MAY HAVE DARK HORSE OF LOOP

Rookie Hal Peck Carrying on the Power Showed in American Association

By JACK HAND

(AP Sports Writer)

Connie Mack may have the American League "dark horse" in his fellow Pact ball stable if Rookie Hal Peck and the veteran Philadelphia Athletics can hold their early spring form.

That for second place with the Yankees, idle on account of a seven-run rally in the fourth inning for a 7-5 victory against New York yesterday, Mr. Mack had reason to think "this might be the year."

Peck's .367 batting average must be pleasant music for the 83-year-old shrewd baseball man who paid $50,000 cash and players to Milwaukee for the outfielder last fall. The Brooklyn Dodgers turned him down once after he batted off a couple of home runs and singled as rain fell on him, .348 batting average in the American Association made the Dodger scouts buzzing around Milwaukee last summer.

It was Peck who started the big inning yesterday with a single and he followed it with another and had that grave in the tie-breaking tally next time around.

St. Louis Browns showed signs of their first real batting assault after piled and batted his way to a 4 - 2 edge over Cleveland in the first of a scheduled doubleheader. The second tilt was rained out.

Meanwhile, Detroit's Hal Newhouser stayed with Washington, 4-1, in a game witnessed by newly-elected Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Johnny Niggeling did the honors for the Senators, scattering six hits and chiming in with a double and single.

Bob Gil continued to get top grade pitching from his New York clients staff, this time Hank Borowy, the man who spun a five-hit shutout in Washington Monday, but he was hit either way could have made the difference but Gil's double put Borowy in the hole early to produce one run and Ernie Lombardi's third homer of the year had made the left field stands for the other.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, April 27 — (AP)—Best baseball news of the week is the resumption of the Kentucky Derby which this year is reported by Matt Winn of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Lieut. Joe Miller, now stationed in Utah, wrote Col. Matt Winn explaining that he and Mrs. Miller had been married in Las Vegas and won — in 1936 — and had celebrated their anniversary at the Derby each year although this year he would the Colonel please proclaim a Derby Day, race or no race, so he could know when to celebrate their 10th anniversary. The American Legion has 975 movie prints in circulation throughout the world, mostly for the benefit of service men — no sooner had Ike Williams been crowned N.B.A. lightweight champ than the twice-retired Sammy Angott announced another comeback, but he will only fight as a welter.

One thing that is holding up the holiday golf tournaments at Jeff Heath is that Roger Peckinpaugh, who does the trading, can't make up his mind about what he wants . . . San Francisco isn't the only California spot feeling the Derby effect that fired fight mess. A boxer now operating around Los Angeles is reported: "Never fight I've had here the gamblers have wanted to know how much I was ruined. I told them, 'When I box, everyone concerned gets a run for their money; even the gamblers, as I go out to win.'"

TWO DERBY HOPEFULS

True Enough

When newspaperman gather around the—ahem!—samovar, they oftentimes tell better stories than you're apt to get under their byline. One such is told of Walter Fenton, assistant city editor of The New York Times, who died suddenly last week. Covering a Brooklyn beat for the paper, Fenton was on hand in 1913, Fenton was on his way home early one morning when he saw an enemy coming from a burning tenement house. He was, and out of the blazing building, carrying a less than six persons to safety. And next day he sauntered briefly from the city editor for allowing himself to be interviewed by the story of his heroism. All the other papers had got the story by phoning the fire department.

Selfishness, Organized—

Al Hitchon, who switched his sporting affections from basketball to softball in recent years, was named president of the Belleville and District Men's Softball League the other night. Retiring President Joe Hannah had his own troubles in securing the league's executive for 1945, but once Prexy Al agreed to occupy the chair the ball commenced to roll in a hurry. Included with the result a strong executive was formed with Ken Harden accepting the secretary-treasurer's job. The latter should make Coach Max Peoples of the RAOC Wanderers quite happy. Max not only has a corner on the better golfers in the city, but now has two fellow-workers at the RAOC, among the top principal executive positions. The local softball league has been assured of at least a certain dozen of the "Marines". Point Anne "Colts" are expected as a new entry from No. Repair Depot. This is a far cry from the 1944 season which never found enough application for affiliation.

Past President Joe Hannah brought the first suggestion for the league meeting when he proposed that the league sponsor a junior team in the event no sponsor was forthcoming. If any sport is to survive the future of such sporting activities must be protected in the fostering of that junior organization which is unorganized boys. Unfortunately in Belleville the sporting element seem to feel minor sports should pay dividends almost over night. Such is the case, however, with such a program has to be set up and functioned continually in order to provide replenishment for the higher brackets as seniors and intermediates retire.

Last year Belleville sent a team to the Junior O.A.A. and was beaten only by these kids are deserving of some financial support in 1945.

This and That—

He thinks, however, there are a great many good little men in the area, including a crack amateur scrapper bantamweight, named Nokeo Ung. The latter won 38 bouts and three most satisfactory home runs. The one which gave him a total of the month of August in 1938, breaking Babe Ruth's production record for a 30-day span; the one he made off Mort Cooper which gave the 1941 American League All-Stars a 5-1 victory over the National League, and the one he hit off Bob Feller in 1942 to obtain the pennant for the Tigers . . . LESSON NO. 667

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

We accumulate jitters galore at the scene of some players, by jove. For a bid with their backs to the door; they use less with their backs to the glove.

An opening one bid promises a definite minimum of nine, and the other. If the hand holds less than the minimum in points, that is not a good opening of one.

It is so if the first bidder is the dealer. It is also true if the dealer passes and the opening bid is by the second player.

Nor is it any different if the first two players pass and the opening is by the third player. And you can say the same if the first three players pass and the opening is by the fourth playfor.

In other words, it makes no difference whether you are guntling in the south, spinning in the west, stooping in the north, or standing on your head in the east. You need the same for an opening one bid.

The basic minimum needs for an opening suit bid of one is five suit tricks, three in the suit, six high cards, two of which are sure tricks and a bettable suit. And that applies in any position.

Some players have fallen into the habit of opening with less if the first two players have passed. It upsets all the standards for responses. If you like that, it's your funeral.

Suppose your partner has dealt and passed. Would you have enough for an opening bid of one with this hand:

♠A 6
♥9 7 4 2
♦A 10 4
♣10 6 5 3

The answer is no. You are shy a high card and a trick for a sound one opening. If it is not good in one spot, it is not good in another. Nor can a hand take more tricks because partner has passed.

Furthermore, you can put this in your fatshowl: You can take just as many tricks whether you are vulnerable or not scared.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, The napkin situation is really getting serious, William.

I have managed to notice it, pop said, and ma said, Well you would if you had the laundry problem on your shoulders the way I have. Sometimes it's 2 full weeks before the laundry man brings the things back, and there's simply not enough napkins in the house to last 2 weeks the way you and Benny abuse napkins. So I have an idea, and I hope you'll be sensible about it, she said.

I'm sure I shall, my dear, pop said, and ma said, The hardest meal of all on napking is breakfast, because an egg stain or a jam stain on a napkin simply finishes it.

I dont see how and I'll give up eggs, pop said, and ma said, I'm not asking you to do that, for land sakes.

Then I'll give up napkins, pop said, and ma said, I'm not asking you to do that either. Now William I realize that you have an obsession against paper napkins that almost amounts to a superstition, and you'll even walk out on a restaurant if you see they're serving paper napkins, but I think I ought to put paper napkins on the table at least breakfast, and I think you ought to be reasonable about it, she said.

I wont make the slightest objection, pop said, and ma said, Well, that's very understanding of you, William.

I'll simply eat my breakfast around at the drugstore, pop said, I know they have paper napkins around there, but there's a nonrainer where you can either take them or leave them alone, and I'd rather laugh at a container full of paper napkins than have one thrust on me. When do we begin, my dear? he said, and ma said, Oh never, you crazy silly thing, I'll manage somehow.

Which she probably will.

PITCH-AND-TOSS STYLE OF HOCKEY LIKELY TO GO

Art Ross and Frank Boucher Propose Many Changes In Hockey Lines, Rules

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Out of the restless minds of two of modern hockey's most constructive thinkers, radical new proposals emerged today that may revolutionize the game of ice hockey.

Climaxing a season that brought many innovations, Lester Patrick, play in National and Minor leagues, Conn Smythe, owner of New York Rangers and Manager Art Ross of Boston Bruins are the brains behind a new deal for hockey designed to eliminate the slam-bang, pitch-and-toss style that has spiraled since the war started.

This "pet panacea," approved in principle at the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Association and submitted by Boucher in an interview with The Canadian Press, includes removal of the red centre line and reduction of the area between blue lines from 60 to 30 feet.

Action on the proposals is expected to be taken at the June meeting of the Joint CAHA-NHL rules committee.

Other points on the Ross-Boucher agenda are:-

1. Elimination of minor penalty shot and penalty shot like add extension of goal line the width of the ice.

2. Inclusion of centre ice area as a starting point for icing the puck violations. That is, if an attacking team shoots the puck across the defending team's blue line from anywhere outside the line and it crosses the new extended goal line the puck will be considered "iced."

3. Extension of behind-the-nets area to 10 feet from back of nets to backboard. Under present rules the area is measured from goal line to backboards.

Boucher, 56-year-old hockey "career man" who centred Bill and Bun Cook on one of the National League's great forward lines, said he and Ross worked out these innovations when they became convinced that "the five-man attack apparently is here to stay."

"Thus there are 11 men in the end zone while an attack is in progress," said Boucher. "Under present conditions the area is too small to permit head-up position."

The minor penalty shot had outlived its usefulness. Offences requiring such a penalty would be included in the major penalty shot rule and the goal line extended to replace the penalty shot line.

Discussing what he termed the present "bottleneck" behind the goal, he said the Art Ross net-enlarged some years ago by the 60-year-old Boston manager — in some cases reduced area behind nets from 10 to seven feet. But the proposal to give 10-foot clearance could be altered if the distance was too far for goal judges.

SAN FRANCISCO SPOTLIGHT

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

San Francisco, April 27 (CP) — Berlin was crumbling into ruins, Hitler's mountain chalet had been blown to pieces, Allied forces were strangling the last breath from the Germans and the Americans were slaughtering Japanese in the Pacific.

In San Francisco guests attending the World Security Conference found copies of the Morning chronicle at their doors locked, sleepily at the front page, blinked, looked again and wondered what was wrong.

Then it dawned on them—the spotlight had shifted from Washington. There was a newspaper front page, without the flaring headlines and stories of war. For the first time in more than five years the paper had been published with the war news relegated to inside pages.

A small box, under the heading "history made in—" was in brief, explained that on this historic Wednesday, April 26, five years, seven months and 26 days since the war started, the paper decided to give the momentous security conference first place.

It was not because the war news was not thrilling, but because the spotlight was turned on the efforts of the United Nations to make future wars impossible.

There was one concession, however, to the war's right to first page play. The announcement ended with four brief bulletins on the latest front line news.

But they cannot miss the most colorful of all groups, the golden and white burnoosed Arabians headed by Prince Abdulla El Faisal, son of King Ibn Saud. The Prince with three of his brother Princes go about with black clad guards whose robes conceal wicked-looking jewel-hilted knives in golden sheaths.

Next in color and interest are the Russian military attaches, their breasts aflame with battle ribbons, their flaring breeches tucked into high boots.

Conference City Impressions: Beautiful flowers shedding their fragrance from stalls on every street, from hotel lobby stores and from the hair of almost all the women . . . slovenly, slovenly screaming night and day as police escort dignitaries about their affairs . . . black storm sprouting like a huge mushroom hats because so many diplomats wear them.

CHAPTER 4

"I seen what was what when them bucks riz up-a-shootin' their muzzle-loaders. But that mule outrun their lead, scamperin' back to Dagger Wash. Saved my scalp that time. 'Nother time though 'twas nip an' tuck. I was drivin' me a four-hoss stage then. Humdingin' outfit. Changin' horses three times, I used to make 'er to Jimtown in half a day; half a day back likewise. That was travelin' some them days. So folks begun callin' me Halfaday Hank. She's stuck, the Halfaday has, yet 'taint propriate no more.

"I makes the trip in a hour with this gas wagon when she's actin' civilized. How come your ma and your pa didn't trail 'long with you, Miz—Mind if I call you Miz Lou, short for your second name which same is prettiest? . . . Okay. Miz 'tis. . . . By golly, see a couple of antelopes 'way yander t'hell and gone?

"Naw, you ain't lookin' right place. They gone over the hump now. You ain't got the plainsman's eyes yet, Miz Lou. Forty years ago, even twenty, antelopes 'round here was thicker'n fleas on a hound pup Nowadays—wal, the country sure has got civilized up amazin'. Plumb spoilt, too. If you likes what once used to was you're lucky old Sol opened up his ranch for towerists. Pretty nateral yet, 'way back to behint them mountains where Sol's place is at. Used to be outlaws an' wild bunch riders holin' up in there. Sol Perriwell'll tell you lies by the hour claimin' he was boss of the wild bunch hisself. But by heifers, Sol was always too danged lazy for that o' business.

"His boy ain't no lover o' work either. Say, that reminds me. You figgerin' to get married if you was to meet up with some likely young idjut, Miz Lou? A feller like young Tony Perriwell? His name's Anthony Thomas, but shucks his ma might ha' knowed he'd be 'Tony' when folks ain't callin' him 'Wuthless' or something else.

"Queer how fellers like Tony always ties on the best gals. Often the richest ones, too. Od Sol, he's got ambition for Tony, sayin' no boy ever 'mounted to shuck till after he's hitched up with a runnin' mate as'll make him steady down."

Abruptly Nancy's wandering attention came to a focus. She fastened a suddenly frosty eye upon the garrulous old stage driver—far and away the most unique character she had ever seen—as he reached into his hip pocket for a long plug of tobacco. He gnawed off a generous portion and rolled it into his right cheek.

"Wal, Sol's a-figgerin' strong a'ready on makin' a match 'tween his kid and the rich towerist, Miz Marcia Louise—what was the rest of the handle?"

"A match?" said Nancy very sharply.

A more observant individual might have noticed the kindling fires in her blue, blue eyes. Not so Halfaday Hank.

"I was askin' what was your last name," he remarked. "Heck, it don't matter none. . . Sol, he told me confidential—like how this was Tony's idear in the first place. Ye—ah, Tony would think o' tyin' onto the richer'n-all-get-out visitor from 'way back east. But Sol's more'n agreeable to such a match. Maybeso it might make a man outa—"

"Mr. Hank!" cried the girl, exasperated. "Please, let's talk about something else."

Hank tooled his car around a curve and shifted to second gear along a narrow road running up a deep canyon with a laughing stream in its depths.

"Sorry. I put my foot in it, Miz Lou," he apologized.

"That's all right. Perhaps I should thank you for warning me, Mr. Hank." Nancy smiled with her lips but her eyes were devoid of mirth. No longer was this strange new world bright and shining. That which she had left home to escape was waiting for her even at this far-off destination.

Was she never to escape matchmakers? How she hated them! Would either her stepmother or this scheming old Sol be so eager to tie her to some masculine biped of their own selection if she were poor? If she were a working girl? Emphatically no!

"Oh, darn it!" said Nancy. "I won't go near his old ranch."

Halfaday Hank bit off something he was saying to squint around at her. "Whose ranch? I wasn't speakin' o' no ranch. I was tellin' you 'bout them hoss thieves we strung up on this yere pass. It's knowed as Noose-law Pass to this day, Miz Lou, and here we be to it."

Nancy scarcely noticed the primitive beauty of the saddlelike swale between two great mountains where the winding road levelled out and the coughing car caught its breath again. Nor did she notice that the stage was soon rolling down the opposite face of the range into a wide valley where mountains beyond threw long and slanting shadows across dull gray sagebrush. The car chugged across a wobbly bridge spanning a tumbling stream, and arrived at a group of weather-beaten buildings atop a sagebrush hill.

"Jimtown," announced Halfaday Hank, driving past a frame livery stable, a blacksmith shop and garage, a pool hall, and three other false-fronted frame buildings on liquor. Three autos were parked on this main street and four saddle horses stood patiently at a hitchrail. Back from the dusty street were a few cottages.

"Suppertime and everybody's feedin' their faces," continued the stage driver. "Wal, here we be," stopping before a frame shack at the extreme farther end of the town. "See that sign, 'Halfaday Hank's Stage Station'?"

Nancy stepped down from the stage, and while Halfaday Hank got out her small suitcase she opened her handbag to pay the man. The shadows were already gone, twilight fading to dusk, the red glow of sunset dying on the mountain tops. As the chill of night nipped through her light coat, Nancy couldn't help feeling a sense of desolation, as if she were lost and alone, actually cut off from all the world.

"Shucks, the T Slash rig ain't here yet," muttered the stage driver. "But it'll be 'long d'rectly 'cause they was sure expectin' you, Miz Lou. Me, I gotta be driftin' back to Dagger Wash. This trip was special, you know."

A door squeaking open behind Nancy so startled her that she spun about in alarm. But it was only a young girl who had stepped out of the stage station. A young girl in a cheap suit, near-silk stockings and run-over, high-heeled shoes. Her blue feather hat perched jauntily on her blond, recently marcelled hair, and she was vigorously chewing gum. But after one long, appraising look at Nancy Eleanor Smith, a look which missed nothing, her jaws ceased worrying the gum, and the smoldering resentment, the open hostility the girl displayed struck Nancy with the force of a physical blow.

"Why, hullo there, Bobbie," said the voice of Halfaday Hank. "Say, you still hangin' 'round here? Old Sol's flivver didn't come in to get you, hey? . . . Miz Lou, this is Roberta Rowland. . . Bobbie, this is Miz Marcia Louise Farnsworth. Got that name right oncet again, didn't I, Miz Lou?"

Bobbie—Miss Roberta Rowland—unbent to the extent of nodding and, unfortunately for one who seemed determined to appear aloof at the motion her hat fell off. She stooped to get it and rose with her face very red, to snap at Nancy, "Why don't you laugh, darn you?"

Halfaday Hank was saying, "I brung Bobbie over this mornin' on my reg'lar trip. She came from down country some place. She's a hasher goin'—"

"Maid!" corrected Bobbie shortly.

"—goin' out to the T Slash. Answerin' an ad for help of the ranch, wasn't you Bobbie?"

"You got it right, old funny face," said Bobbie. "I've set here half a day waitin' and nobody ain't come yet. . . She going there, too?" indicating Nancy.

"You bet-cher boots, she is," declared Hank. "She's a guest and a most gosh-powerful important one . . . It'll be five bucks, Miz Lou, fer the trip out."

"Hank," said Nancy tersely, "Isn't there some other guest ranch where I could go?"

"Wh—why, no'm thar ain't. Not in this neck o' the woods. What's upsot you?" Halfaday Hank took the bill which the girl was mechanically extending in his direction.

"You wouldn't understand," she answered in a flat tone. "I—I think I'll go back to Dagger Wash."

The stage driver, however, had already climbed into his dust-painted car and the sudden roar of its engine prevented his hearing Nancy's announcement. In another moment the car was rolling away on the back trail.

Again that chilling sense of isolation, loneliness and frustration assailed Nancy Eleanor Smith. She shivered. Whereupon Bobbie said scornfully. "Ain't scairt, are you, tenderfoot? Come in and set down. Or maybe we'd better go eat. I ain't et since last night. Still, I couldn't buy a meal at the beanery. Spent my last nickel today for this permanent wave."

Nancy spun around to face the girl. "Why you poor—"

"I don't want none of your pity! One look and I seen how all your life you'd had everything I ain't never had. You'll think I'm goofy, but the minute I seen you I thought, 'Gee whiz! if only I could be like her! Clothes I could be proud of, and a wrist watch like I never befores seen, and havin' people wait on me 'stead of me jumpin' to wait on them.' Well, somethin' down inside me kinder boiled over. Sorry now I was snootie. . Did you ever long with a kind of gosh-awful hunger for things you never could have?"

"Yes," said Nancy. "I've longed for—"

She stopped. On the spur of the moment an idea struck her, fantastic, wild, crazy. Perhaps here was a heaven-sent chance to upset the matchmaking plans of Sol Perriwell and his son!

If this idea worked out, Nancy Eleanor Smith would have to do jobs she never had done before. But she'd be free to do as she pleased in her hours off; free of designing old meddlers and matchmakers! With her nerves tingling, her voice thrilling with anticipation, she said, "Let's go inside, Bobbie. Quick, before we're seen. I want to talk to you."

So completely satisfied with himself was Anthony Thomas Perriwell that he had quite convinced himself that all mirrors lied. In the depths of a lookingglass Tony always imagined he saw some one as strikingly handsome as a matinee idol. Actually he saw the reflection of a spindling youth with curly black hair and popeyes. The rest of young Anthony's face gave the impression of never having been finished.

As to his value to the world, Lanky Lem, veteran foreman of the T Slash, had long ago summed that up in one succinct phrase: "The damned cub ain't worth powder and lead to blow him to hell."

Naturally life on a remote ranch was very dull and tiresome to a man of Tony's temperament and ambitions. But a few remarks from Old Sol, who read society news in New York papers, concerning the status of the expected guest, had tremendously stimulated the young man's interest. So much so that the evening of Nancy Eleanor Smith's arrival at Jimtown found Tony driving from the T Slash to meet a million dollars in the person of Miss Marcia Farnsworth.

Tony's vehicle was an ancient flivver which he held in wholehearted contempt. The car developed tw new leaks in the radiator and at the very worst place for such a calamity, a mile from water, the hot engine refused further service.

Anthony told the flivver exactly what he thought of it and further reminded it that once, for a very short time, he had possessed a real automobile. That entire incident was still painful to young Tony. His father had not had sufficient funds in the bank to take care of the check Tony tendered as down payment on the "swell" car. And the bank cashier had been downright nasty. Something was wrong with the signature, and Tony had had the devil's own time making an explanation.

Nevertheless, after he had recovered from the scare, and for once Tony had really been scared, he continued to practice artistic penmanship. His mastery of a deck of cards had already progressed to a point where it was flawless. Why not master completely a simple thing like a pen?

There was a water bucket in the back end of the flivver and, more fortunate still, a can of something one poured into a radiator to plug up leaks. So, only an hour late, Anthony James Perriwell arrived at Halfaday Hank's stage station in Jimtown.

The flivver's dim headlights picked out two young women waiting on a bench outside this scarecrow building. Tony swept off his huge white stetson and addressed himself to the girl he believed to be the Farnsworth heiress.

"You're Miss Farnsworth? Pardon me for being late. Couldn't be helped, yet I'm so sorry. I'm Anthony Thomas Perriwell. Meeting guests is not my usual chore but this was a special occasion." Bowing gallantly, he extended his hand.

Nancy Eleanor Smith, standing neglected and ignored beyond the dim shafts of light, believed correctly that Tony must have rehearsed this glib-tongued speech. She noted how the young man held the slim hand of Roberta Rowland much longer than necessary; his popeyes riveted upon the jewel-studded watch now ornamenting her wrist.

She heard Roberta play up to the role assigned her in a far more realistic manner than she had judged the girl capable.

"Why how-do-you-do, Mr. Perriwell? Is there any reason we can't start for the ranch at once?"

"No. But it's so late perhaps you'd rather have sup—dinner in town, Miss Farnsworth?"

Nancy held her breath. Roberta Rowland had told her she had walked around Jimtown several times this afternoon. If any one who had seen her previously saw her again this evening, the startling change in her clothing could not escape notice. And the temptation to have a good meal must be great to a girl who had not eaten for twenty-four hours, yet—

Miss Farnsworth was equal to the occasion. "Let's eat when we hit the ranch."

"O. K.," returned Tony. He picked up Nancy Eleanor Smith's travelling bag, piloted Roberta Rowland to the chugging flivver, helped her to the front seat, climbed in himself and remarked, "We can get acquainted on the way out, Miss Farnsworth. . . . And say, am I glad I took it on myself to drive in to meet you!"

Abruptly his tone changed to one of annoyance, "Hey? who're you and what do you want?"

Nancy had snatched up Roberta's straw suitcase and was climbing into the rear seat of the car. She said tartly, "I'm the new maid, mister. I been waiting here since the stage got in 'round noon for somebody to haul me out to the T Slash."

"Uh?" grunted Tony. "Ma did advertise for a hired girl. But confound it, can't you wait till tomorrow when Stutterin' Jake'll make his reg'lar trip from the ranch to Jimtown? . . . Naturally Farnsworth and I don't want to be embarrassed by having a—uh—a servant riding—"

District Farmers View with Concern Flooded Fields

With a total of two and a quarter inches of rain having fallen within the past three days and intermittent showers still continuing, district farmers are viewing with increasing concern their low fields now covered under fields now covered under inches of water.

Seventy five per cent of the spring seeding is now completed but farmers state it will be days or possibly weeks before remaining ground is ready for cultivation, while there is also possibility of considerable damage being done to seeding already completed.

"Farmers are rapidly getting into the state of mind they were last year," stated Mr. H. Lynn Fair, county agricultural representative, "It is now close to May 1st when ordinarily seeding should be completed. I would very much hate to see the rain continue."

Damage caused by flooding conditions was termed by Mr. Fair to be very problematical and hard to assess with an estimate of damage aready done being only prophesy. Early sown grain looks good, is of good length and color and would now appear as the best bet for crop returns this fall. Cold weather of the last two weeks has hampered growth with grain being in for this period not yet up. In fact there has been very little growth of any kind during the past two weeks.

Estimate of damage to orchards by recent frosts had not yet been completed, according to Mr. Fair. However cool weather had served to retard bud development on apple trees and blossoms were not yet out at the time of the frost and very little damage is expected. Cherry and plum trees are earlier, however, and blossoms may have been damaged by frost. If so they will be barren this year.

The share of three new mines, Citralam Malartic Mines Limited, Godhawk Porcupine Mines Limited and Porcupine Peninsular Gold Mines Limited, were listed today and they sold at 34 cents, 82 cents and 35 cents respectively.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, April 27 — (AP)—Demand for rails, liquors and scattered aircrafts helped rally today's stock market fractions to more than 2 points. Dealings were moderate throughout. Gains were reduced here and there near the fourth hour.

Prominent on the upside were Union Pacific, Southwest Pacific, Northern Pacific, Illinois Central, Southern Railway, Schenley, Distillers Corp., Stewart Warner, Lockheed, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck Chrysler, Studebaker, Western Union "A", Continental Can and Dow Chemical.

Two Powerful Searchlights Used In Demonstration

Appearing in the interests of the Eighth Victory Loan campaign, two giant 60-inch coastal type searchlights, each of 800 millions candlepower, were demonstrated in Belleville on Thursday evening by a Toronto military unit which is touring the province during the current loan drive.

Shortly after eight-thirty the two lights were turned on with their beams penetrating through the low-hanging clouds to play fantastic patterns across the sky. The lights demonstrated for approximately 1 hour, operators throwing their beams in criss-cross patterns across the sky and onto downtown buildings. One of the lights was spotted on the Armouries lawn, while the other was placed on Panter's park near the Corbin Lock plant.

It was expected that planes would appear over the city for the lights to demonstrate exactly how enemy planes are "coned" during a bombing raid, but adverse weather conditions apparently prevented flying operations.

Although of a portable variety the searchlights demonstrating in the city were placed aboard army trucks for easy transportation to various centres in the province. The lights were electrically operated with a dynamo on a second truck supplying the power.

The ease with which the lights are manipulated by the operator was indicated as with one hand the man in charge swung the concentrated beam to drive deeply into the dense cloud formation. The lights have a 360-degree swinging arc and will operate from horizontal to vertical.

Three Men Held For Car Theft

Arrested in Thurlow Township when found in possession of a stolen motor car, three men are being held here by Provincial Police pending return to Toronto where the coupe was reported stolen. O.P.P. authorities stated the trio of men gave their names as Leslie Irwin, Toronto, Fred Greene of St Catharines and Clifford Bell of Waterloo. The car found in their possession belongs to a Mr. Stanley Bogam of Toronto and is a Buick coupe. Licence plates of the vehicle had been changed, police say.

The apprehension of the trio came about yesterday when farmers along the third concession of Thurlow Township observed a black coupe being parked in a clump of bushes off the road and men apparently attempting to hide themselves. Provincial Police were notified by anxious farmers with the arrest of the men following in short order.

Before being returned to Toronto to face car theft the trio of men will be taken to Oshawa for questioning regarding a bank robbery that was reported at Port Perry last Wednesday night. During the bank robbery, however, four men were reported to have taken part in the holding up of a bank manager in that town.

CORE OF BERLIN'S

square miles—s the battle roared into its seventh day.

While some civilians scampered through the Russian lines for safety, Soviet dispatches said others fought side by side with their soldiers. Some units of the trapped German garrison of possibly 500,000 however, fought with the guns of S.S. Troopers at their backs.

Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st. White Russian Army pressed in from the north, capturing the great Goerlitzer rail depot, while tanks of Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st. Ukrainian Army attacked from the south, with only a 4½ mile gap between them.

German accounts said the Russians had rolled to the edge of Alexander Platz, one of Berlin's main commercial centres, where a fierce battle raged for the central police and Gestapo headquarters.

ARMY'S DEMAND FOR TIRES HEAVY

No Increase for Civilian Use to Any Large Extent is Possible

Ottawa, April 27 (CP)—Canada's tire production is closely integrated with that of the United States and Great Britain and is planned to meet requirements determined by the Combined Production Board Munitions Department officials said today.

At Washington last night it was announced by the Combined Production Board that a mission had been sent to Britain to plan concentration of tire production on critically-needed sizes and types.

Munitions Minister Howe and senior officials of his department have said recently that continued demands for a large number of tires for army vehicles makes it impossible to increase to any large extent the output of tires for civilian purposes.

The War Today—
Military Resurgence and Vast Political Change Seen in Balkans

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

If you'll take your war map and, with a crayon, fill in the area from which the Germans have been driven by the towering tidal wave sweeping westward out of Russia, you'll see that you have virtually a solid block which includes all but a tiny corner of the Balkan Peninsula.

That's of the greatest importance. It signifies that the fiery Balkanfor centuries the cockpit of southeastern Europe and the whelping-ground of wars — are undergoing a mighty change along with the rest of the continent. For we have there not only a military resurgence which has reclaimed the lands ravaged by he Huns, but a vast political change.

Russia Is Regnant

And if you happen to choose a first crayon for your map work, you will with this color marry interpreted the phenomenon. That is to say, Red Russia is the bogside back of this development in the Balkans which, by and large, now fall within the Soviet sphere of influence.

Marshal Tito's forces have all but flung the Germans out of Yugoslavia, strategical keystone of the whole Balkan Peninsula, and have even crossed the old Yugoslav-Italian frontier in the valley of the Drava, they're thrusting towards Austria itself, which we learn today American troops penetrated along with the Russians.

Co-Operation

One of the most remarkable aspects of this situation is that the Yugoslavs and the Bulgarians are co-operating in the military operations. A couple of years ago such a partnership would have been unbelievable, for Bulgaria — bad ind of the Balkans — long been a lone wolf, on the outs with most of the neighbors. Russians, too, is in the fold, and Albania, once more free of Germans and Italian tyrants, has a "popular front" government which gives signs of being well within the Russian orbit.

Yugoslav Menace

Hitler's Death Decree

The offensive of the Yugoslavs-long famous as among the best of the — world's fighting men — has grown with success until it has become a real menace to Hitler's stinky back-door. Coincidentally the arrival of Yugoslav troops on the Italian frontier, we have reports of a powerful insurrection of patriots in northern Italy. The resolute citizens are said to have captured the great city of Milan, from which the broken and frightened Mussolini is rumored to have fled in disgust and disguise to Como near the Swiss border.

Thus we see that the military interests — and perhaps the political leanings — of this whole vast area of the Balkans and Italy are binding to merge. And of course both Hungary and Austria can be included in this field.

Politico-Military Picture

The politico-military picture in Yugoslavia is fascinating. Marshal Tito, who is both soldier and political leader, is hand and glove with Moscow. That represents a striking change of atmosphere from what I found there in 1936. At that time Prince Paul, a cousin of the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia, was regent for the young monarch, the minority of King Peter.

Prince Paul had refused to recognize the Soviet government and was reputed to have influenced the Communist party, whereby hangs a tale. The Prince was closely related to the Russian Royal Family, and it was whispered that he had ambitions to fill the bejewelled throne of the Czars if fate turned the Communists out. That being the case, he could scarcely be popular in Moscow. Paul now is a refugee, and King Peter now is in Britain may never see his capital again.

So far as concerns Bulgaria, her people naturally lean towards their brother Slavs in Russia. Romania isn't so happy over developments, but her lent nevertheless is pitched on the Plain of Moscow.

Goering Resigns As Chief of Air Force is Report

London, April 27 — (CP) — A German announcement that Herr. mann Goering had resigned as chief of the now-important German air force because of "an acute heart condition" was followed today by a Moscow report that he had fled by air to an unknown destination.

The Moscow report asserted the portly Reichsmarshal — who once boasted that the Allies could never bomb Berlin — was said to have taken with him his wife, and loot valued at $20,000,000. The Russians said the Germans doubtless had proclaimed Goering's resignation to hide the fact of his sudden disappearance.

Long ranked as the No. 2 Nazi and heir to Hitler's power, Goering asked Hitler to be "relieved of his command as chief of the Luftwaffe at a time when my strength is needed" and the "Fuehrer has granted his request," a German broadcast said last night.

The radio announcement said he had been replaced by Gen. Ritter Von Grein, who was promoted to Field Marshal. Von Grein once was reported head of the German air force in Russia.

Many Allied quarters believe Hitler already has taken refuge in his Alpine retreat, but German broadcasts steadily assert that both he and Propaganda Minister Goebbels remain in the capital.

Broadcasting material for German newspapers one today, the German agency D.N.B. said both were supervising "every detail of the struggle."

HIMMLER OFFERS "UNCONDITIONAL" SURRENDER TO WESTERN ALLIES BUT NOT TO RUSSIA

7th Army Captures Augsburg, Third City of Bavaria

1st and 3rd Armies Close On Munich, Home of Nazism

By AUSTIN BRALSFORD

Paris, April 28 (AP)—The U.S. 7th Army captured Augsburg, third city of Bavaria, today and with the French 1st and US. 3rd Armies closed on Munich, less than thirty miles from forward units.

Germany was cut in two in the centre and the Russians reported new junctions with American forces on the Elbe and Mulde.

The iron band between the southern and northern German pockets was perhaps fifty miles wide.

U.S. 3rd. Army tanks beat down the Danube Valley toward an imminent new meeting with the Russians west of Vienna in a drive that will encircle Czechoslovakia and trisect Germany. The armies were in radio contact.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's 8th. Division drove within 31 miles of Munich from the north, entering Rohrbach. The U.S. 7th. Army captured Augsburg, 22 miles northwest, and moved within 36 miles of Munich in the area beyond Landsberg to the south of Augsburg.

The French 1st. Army drove to the Austrian frontier at Pussen, 50 miles northeast of Munich, and threatened the Nazi citadel with wide encircling moves.

There was little change overnight in the 1st. Canadian Army positions in northwest Germany, William Stoneman of Reuters, war correspondent, reported. He said a Canadian patrol entered Leeuwarden—key to the defence of the ports of Emden and Wilhelmshaven—had been tightened slightly.

Broadcasts said the Germans were length heard by approaching 3rd Army units said the revolt in the city was being carried out by the "free section of Bavarian Group. The radio repeatedly asked the Allies to send headquarters of Field Marshal Kesselring at Pullach, six miles south of Munich.

The revolt was said to have started around dawn.

One broadcast said Gen. Bliter Von Epp, Governor of Bavaria, had joined with the Nazis and seized power, deciding to break off the fight as "senseless." Epp in the past has been described as an anti-Nazi and the broadcasts asserted repeatedly that the government was anti-Nazi regarded as False.

Official after official paraded into microphones in south Germany and branded the Munich wave broadcasts as "fakes by criminals, traitors and swindlers."

Reports from western Holland said the civilian population had but enough food and supply for the remaining 100,000 Germans holed up there as well as the civilian population in dire straits.

Ned Nordness, Associated Press war correspondent, said the fighting around Oldenburg — where the Germans are battling to hold open an escape route — "was as tough as that around Falaise in Normandy last summer. Casualties are heavy on Nordness: "We're never allied so many Germans before." They are coming ashore at us in waves and are dying practically at the muzzles of our guns."

The British 2nd Army had cleared half the dock area of fallen Bremen, while others Tommies plunged northward toward Bremerhaven on the North Sea coast.

JUNCTION FREES THREE ARMIES FOR OTHER JOBS

Still Much Fighting Before War in Europe Can be Considered To be Over

Paris, April 28 — (AP)—The historic junction of American and Russian forces in Germany left at least three Armies temporarily out of jobs today but there still was much fighting to be done before the war in Europe could be considered over.

From line commanders believe organized resistance may wind up a matter of weeks. But Allied supreme headquarters, officially pessimistic, says it can last for several months.

The fighting in Germany now has split the country into Northern and southern fronts.

In the north, Berlin is falling but several Baltic ports remain to be overrun, as well as Denmark and Norway. In the south two major pockets are shaping up — one embracing the country's so-called Redoubt redoubt, the second in Czechoslovakia, open to the American and Russian troops in Austria, possibly in a few days, will then meet these pockets a fact.

Speculation was running through Allied military circles here as to whether the armies which met this week-end at Berlin would be shifted to one of the remaining fighting fronts.

One juncture brought face to face the U. S. 1st Army and at least one army of the 1st Ukrainian Group. In the area north of the first meeting site the U.S. 1st Army is also at Mandstill along the Elbe, waiting the imminent arrival of other Americans.

Questions Being Asked

In Paris, such questions as these were being asked concerning these armies:

Would they take new positions facing the Red Army, or would they be pulled out of the line and flown to Berlin to help guard the Russians and Americans alike — in the final shattering blow in the Pacific?

Lt.-Gen. Kurt Dittmar, widely quoted Nazi military commentator, predicts that the war will be over by the end of June, after surrendering of the U. S. 9th Army he declared that Hitler was in Berlin and would die there.

When Berlin falls it will be over," he said, asserting that even after Hitler is dead there will be nothing to hold together the remaining Nazi forces.

Dittmar said that the last so-called Bavarian redoubt was a myth.

Berlin, however, with a host of perhaps 200 nominal divisions left to fight for Germany's capital of which is up to strength — the biggest single force is in that southern Berlin sector, is the area where fighting is the most intense.

Mussolini Arrested By Partisans Near Nesso, Lake Como

(By RICHARD HAEGICHENS)

London, April 28. (AP)—Swiss dispatches reported last night that Benito Mussolini, "yellow with fear and fury", has been arrested in Northern Italy by Italian patriots after being under strict guard in Germany and with his wife and eight confederates. There was no Allied confirmation of this report.

Capture of Mussolini, who in command with Hitler dreamed of establishing an Axis world of conquest, "Mussolini Island" in the "Fifth Milan" radio and also was reported for the second time in Swiss press dispatches from the Swiss-Italian frontier.

An Italian Socialist party spokesman was quoted by the Milan radio as demanding that Mussolini be turned over to the Italian People's Tribunal for trial.

Mussolini arrived at the Swiss border with a convoy of Italian Army motorcycles at 3.45 a.m., Thursday, Berne reported.

"In the first car were Mussolini and his wife, Rachel", the Swiss radio said. "In the second car was the wife of Pavolini, Minister of the Interior, and three were also eight other Italian officials whose names were not known."

A Milan newspaper reported one of the officials was Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist Party, and that he, too, had been seized by Partisans.

"After discussion with Swiss customs officers, they were told that entry into Switzerland had been refused," the Swiss radio said.

KING CALLS FOR SPEEDY ACTION ON PEACE CHARTER

Canadian Prime Minister Assures Delegates Dominion Desires Peace

San Francisco, April 28 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King opened a call for speedy action in drafting a world security charter at the United Nations conference on international organization here yesterday and assured delegates of 46 other states that Canada "would do all in their power to prevent another war, with its horrors of despotism and barbarism."

This is one of the preliminary difficulties now confronting the commission of White Russia and Ukraine, two of the members of the proposed United Nations organization cleared away, and the Polish issue moved into the background by the unanimous admission for the Polish people, the conference continues work today with two full commissions sitting.

Calms Fires on Committee

Canada also was elected on the 14-member executive committee which is responsible for the business of the conference and membership, which may provide prestige for possible election to the Security Council of the projected United Nations organization.

Mr. King drew rounds of applause with his short utterances from the floodlit rostrum of the Opera House, as he called on the delegates to "make our deliberations to the rapid movement of events."

His reference presumably was to the progress of the war and particularly to the junction of the eastern and western Allied armies in Germany announced by Washington earlier.

If a new isolationism is not to develop, Mr. King said, all states large and small must share responsibility for maintaining peace. Everything must not be left to the large powers.

He said that Canada would offer no special recommendations to the Dumbarton Oaks draft but would make its viewpoint known from time to time. In the Canadian delegation with Francis Forde, Deputy Prime Minister, are Canadians from every area of commonwealth.

The main members of the Canadian delegation sat in front row seats near the rostrum and heard Mr. King's address. Mr. Mackenzie King anticipated when a group of Americans set out in a jeep at 10 a.m.

This was the story as told by Robertson:

Churchill Neither Confirms Nor Denies Reports but Says Only Unconditional Surrender to Big '3' Would Be Accepted

Socialist Wins In Chelmsford

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 28 (C.P. Cable) — Defeat of the government candidate in the Conservative stronghold of Chelmsford on the eve of military victory in Europe has thrown political circles into a flurry of speculation over the result of a possible pointer to the way the political wind is blowing through Britain as the country prepares for a general election.

The by-election in Chelmsford was the first in England in which soldiers serving overseas have been able to vote. Commentators of all parties today conceded the Conservatives have suffered their greatest reverse since the 1935 general election.

Then the Conservatives held Chelmsford with a majority of 16,000. Now the numerically tiny Common Wealth party—standing on an avowed Socialist platform — has carried it off with a majority of more than 4,000.

Other important points about the result were:

The poll—87 per cent of the electorate—was the largest of the war.

The Common Wealth candidate, backed by Prime Minister Churchill as belonging to a party of "novices" opposed to the Conservative government nominee, Pfl. Lt. Brian Cook, M.C., who had been contesting government defeat in by-elections within the last fortnight.

No Tendency in London Circles to Discount Possible Authenticity of Reports

San Francisco, April 28 — (Reuters)— It has been authoritatively learned here that a message from Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler has been received by the British and United States governments guaranteeing German unconditional surrender to the Western Allies but not to Russia.

The move is regarded here as a last-minute attempt to split the unity of the Big Three. It is understood to have the backing of the German High Command, but not that of Hitler and the section of the Nazi Hierarchy that has remained loyal to him.

London, April 28 —(CP)— Heinrich Himmler was reported today to have offered unconditional surrender to Great Britain and the United States, but Prime Minister Churchill in a special statement declared that only unconditional surrender to all three big powers would be accepted by the Allies.

The Prime Minister neither confirmed nor denied reports that surrender had been offered to the two Western Allies, but not to Russia.

Mr. Churchill declared:

"It has been reported that unconditional surrender was offered by Himmler to Britain and the United States only. Further that Britain and the United States have replied saying they will not accept, except on behalf of all the Allies including Russia.

"No doubt at a time like this all kinds of reports of proposals for German surrender from various parts of the German Reich are rife, if these are in harmony with the enemy's desperate situation.

"His Majesty's government have no information to give about any of them at this moment. But it must be emphasized that only unconditional surrender to all the three major powers will be entertained, and that the closest accord prevails between the three powers."

Press Features Reports

Unofficial reports of a German unconditional surrender offer to Britain and the United States were published prominently in the British press today.

(The Allied-controlled Luxembourg radio, as heard by the Federal Communications Commission, said Heinrich Himmler had offered surrender.

("Here is a special message", the broadcast said. "Copy of the following message has been conveyed to the foreign ministers of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

"Heinrich Himmler has sent a message in which he authorizes the unconditional surrender of Germany to the United States and Great Britain. The governments of the United States and Great Britain state have replied that unconditional surrender will be accepted only if the offer is addressed to 'all the Allies.'

There was no tendency in London to discount the possible authenticity of the reports.

The British Press emphasized that Mackenzie King—differences he had said now are resolved—Mr. Hepburn said he made the mistake of blaming Mr. King personally for Canada's troubles. The people, not the prime minister, were to blame for the lazy days of peace."

Hon. Angus Macdonald, former Navy Minister who has announced he will not seek re-election for Dominion riding in the June 11 federal election, spoke briefly. Of federal election, spoke briefly. Of plan to return to other pursuits." Mr. Macdonald was Premier of Nova Scotia before becoming Navy Minister.

Hepburn Explains Why He Returned To Lead Liberals

Kingston, April 28 (CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn told an election meeting last night he returned to lead the Ontario Liberal party to frustrate what he termed Premier Drew's policy of fomenting racial disunity.

"That policy may stand in the way of the continuing unity and welfare of Canada's problem of finding "jobs for all. We have not yet scratched the surface of Canada's economic, agricultural or industrial possibilities.

Of his breach with Prime Minister Mackenzie King—differences he had said now are resolved—Mr. Hepburn said he made the mistake of blaming Mr. King personally for Canada's troubles. The people, not the prime minister, were to blame for the lazy days of peace."

Hon. Angus Macdonald, former Navy Minister who has announced he will not seek re-election for Dominion riding in the June 11 federal election, spoke briefly. Of federal election, spoke briefly. Of plan to return to other pursuits."

REVOLT BY NAZI TROOPS AT MUNICH IS REPORTED

Win Control of City's Radio Station Long Enough to Broadcast Call to Soldiers

London, April 28 — (CP)—German soldiers revolted today to overthrow Hitlerism, birthplace of Nazism and scene of another revolt in 1923—the Munich home cellar putsch.

Anti-Nazi troops, attempting to seize the Bavarian government in the wake of reports of Hitler's power von control of the city's radio station long enough to broadcast a call to German troops to lay down their arms.

Leaders of the attempted coup declared in their broadcast that Gen. Hitler Von Epp, long a staunch Nazi and Governor of Bavaria, had decided to break off the fight against the Allied armies.

Paul Gisler, Gauleiter of Munich broadcasting station, said, after the revolt apparently was almost stifled, declared "a party of deserters who are still attempting to overthrow the Reich and use it for their dirty boer ness."

This "traitorous element" under a Captain Wemecke "has been made harmless," Gisler said.

He declared that the Nazis still had not fully regained control, Gisler admitted that there "were at last yesterday be disturbed during the next hours, days and weeks by the remnants of the revolt."

The insurrectionists broadcast their appeal earlier under the name of the "free Bavarian Movement."

RUSSIANS CRASH INTO LAST PART OF NAZI-HELD BERLIN

Other Troops Smash Westward to Isolate Enemy-Held Ruhr Area

London, April 28 —(CP)— Russia's conquering armies crashed into the last German-held fourth of Berlin today advancing block by block against crumbling resistance as other Soviet troops swept westward to the Elbe to isolate the last enemy-held Baltic ports.

The German high command reported that a relief army was "knocking hard" on the ruined and flame-swept city after breaking out of a Russian trap in the suburbs. However, such an escape appeared highly improbable since the Soviets moved more than 100 miles of new area for a twin offensive toward Mecklenburg and other ports and cities, and toward a second link-up with American troops on the middle Elbe.

While the Reds hammered out gains of a mile and more around the city's bomb-purvieved inner core of 40 square miles, fading German radios concealed the situation with "critical" and said the battle of Berlin would decide the war.

Nazis Ignored

Nazi propaganda insisted that Hitler was still in the surrounded capital, but Moscow declared that he was cut off with the fall of Tempelhof airdrome, the iron bank and ordered the Nazis to send a power, deciding to break off the fight as "senseless." Epp in the past has been described as an anti-Nazi and the broadcasts asserted repeatedly that the government was anti-Nazi regarded as False.

Official after official paraded into microphones in south Germany and branded the Munich wave broadcasts as "fakes by criminals, traitors and swindlers."

U.S. Officer and Russian Infantrymen Pound Each Other on Back

By DON WHITEHEAD

With the U. S. 9th Division, April 28 — (Delayed) — (AP) — An American infantry officer and a Russian private sqUirmed across a girder of a blown bridge in the Elbe River today and then brought each the back and shook hands to seal an historic meeting of Gen. Hodges United States 1st Army with Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army Group.

"Put it there," were the first words Lt. Robert L. Wilson, 22, son of Mrs. Robert Wilson of Los Angeles, called to his Red Army friend in the bizarre meeting at 4:40 p. m. over the waters of the Elbe at Torgau, 28 miles northeast of Leipzig.

It was one of at least three contacts the Russians made for men of the 69th Division.

Just who was the first individual to meet the Russians was not clear, but Lt. Wilson and Sergeant Robertson got a big share of the credit because he was the first to bring back proof to his division headquarters. The proof was a Russian major, captain, lieutenant and private.

One of the first to meet the Russians — if not the first was Lieut. Col. Kosenko of Houston, Texas. (Hal Boyle, another AP correspondent, said Kotzebue was the first.)

The happy Russians, beaming at the meeting, soon brought it to the crowded command post of the 69th Division, for a celebration of the event. Each made a speech which was interpreted for the throng.

"This is a great day in the meeting of two nations," said Maj. Anatoli Lavrov of Konev's Ukrainian Guards Division. "We extend warmest greetings and congratulations on the destruction of Nazism. We hope this meeting will be the basis for a long time of friendship."

Capt. Vassili Petrov Nedov added: "This will be the world's day for a long time. This is a great holiday for the whole world."

This linkup with the Russians was one of the strangest stories of the war. Lt. Wilson got a big share of the credit because he was the first to bring back proof to his division headquarters. The proof was a Russian major, captain, lieutenant and private.

5TH DAY SALES FOR VICTORY LOAN $76,603,400

Cumulative Total for Five Days of 3-Week's Campaign $356,827,250

Ottawa, April 28 — (CP) — Total sales of Eighth Victory Loan bonds Friday amounted to $76,603,400, bringing to $356,827,250 the cumulative total for the first five days of the Canadian war finance campaign, the $1,250,000,000, campaign headquarters announced today.

The five day total compared with $76,734,700 for the same day of the campaign last year, when the cumulative total compared with $356,827,250 at the same stage of the last loan.

Headquarters said continued chill, with frosts in many areas of Canada dampened public rallies and canvassing.

Individual sales Friday totalled $14,000,000 compared to $14,000,000 for the fifth day of the seventh loan while the cumulative total for the first five days of the campaign is 150 against $160,050,250.

Five days' canvassing brought the Canadian army's bond sales up to 96 per cent of the official quota, a total of $17,319,900. That was before the fifth day's sales figures overseas had been tabulated. Leadership in the group continues with Nova Scotia whose quota demands remained the same with 100 per cent subscribed. Next is Ontario; M.D. 3 (Kingston and Ottawa) climbed over the top, and M.D. 11 (Alberta) reached 9 as cent. Eight others stand at 80 per cent or higher.

Nine more ships over-purchased their quotas, with H.M.C.S. Midland doubling its objective of $700,

Parents Receive Word Their Son Safe in England

Prisoner of war in Germany for more than two years, Warrant Officer Donald Dall is now safe in England according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dall, 36 North Front Street. The prison camp in which WO Dall was interned had been liberated by the American forces last week but until last evening no work of his safety had been received in Belleville.

Word of their son's safety was received by Mr. and Mrs. Dall during a telephone conversation, the message indicating he had been liberated and was safely in England.

"I am so happy I can hardly think," stated Mrs. Dall to the Ontario Intelligencer this morning. "I am not worried any longer."

Still no word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, regarding the safety of their son Flying Officer Bill Stephenson, who has been a prisoner of war since he had his plane shot down in Africa at the start of the Allied El Alamein push which ultimately drove Rommel's forces out of Africa.

"He's all right Dad," was Mrs. Stephenson's confident statement as she informed this newspaper she still had hope.

The War Today— Junction of Armies is Great Moment But it Isn't the End of the War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Shortly after the historic junction of the Allied forces on the Elbe Germany was announced in the capital of the Big Three, a keen follower of the war-news remarked cheerily to your columnist: "Well, this looks like the end."

Unfortunately that's a wrong conclusion, and one which can lead to much disappointment. That joining up of the western Allies and the Red Army is a great moment which certainly will register on Allied and German minds alike as signalling an early victory — but it isn't the end of the war.

True, if we had the luck to capture or kill Hitler, that might result in a collapse of his followers. But barring this, the indications are that we must keep on until the remaining German pockets of resistance—the North Sea ports, Denmark, Holland, Norway, Hitler's Alpine fortress — have been cleared out by hard fighting.

As the Allies proceed with the kill we shall, I believe, see a startling transformation of the great fighting fronts to which we've become so used that they seem part of our maps. This change will be worth watching. Instead of the most unusual if indeed it isn't unique.

For instance, we shall see the interminably long Russian battleline has run from north to south, facing the Germans. Those lines have surged back and forth, but always they have appeared more or less perpendicular on the map. Similarly, since the Western Allies reached the Rhenish theatre, the fronts have run north and south.

The junction of the Allies in the heart of Germany has produced a perpendicular German corridor. The Allied fronts are now forming into two approximately "horizontal" fronts, one facing north and the other south. Checkerboard Czechoslovakia surrounded. Each will be half Russian and half Western Allies.

The northern front will move towards the sea. The southern front will sweep south against Hitler's redoubt in the Alps.

The two most important immediate objectives are therefore the capture of Berlin and the splitting of the Nazi area in the Alpine retreat. The military value of Berlin already has been nullified, while some 500,000 fanatical Nazi troops continue to battle fiercely in the centre of the capital, the Russians have them surrounded and all communications thus are severed. However, the psychological value of Berlin is immense, and its fall cannot but be a terrific blow to German morale. That will give the Japs a nasty shock when they get that matter.

The finish is dying hard—but it is in its death throes.

Order Stipulates All Cheese Must Be Kept for 90 Days at Controlled Temp.

According to an Order-in-Council appearing in the Canada Gazette and approved some time ago at the request of the Department of Health, all cheese in the future must be kept for 90 days in controlled temperature storage before being offered for sale.

It will also be the law for anyone to offer for sale for consumption any cheese which has not been kept for the required 90 days—at 58 degrees for the first ten days and at not more than 45 degrees for the remainder of the period. The new regulations have not made public until it appeared in the current issue of the Canada Gazette.

The order as printed in the Canada Gazette is as follows:

(1)—Every manufacturer or cheese made by the Cheddar or other process from raw or pasteurized milk that yields a hard-pressed cheese shall mark or brand within 24-hours after removal from the press every merchandising unit of such cheese correctly and distinctly with the date of manufacture including the day, month and year when such cheese was put into the press.

(2)—No person shall cut any Cheddar cheese or other hard-pressed cheese made from raw or pasteurized milk for sale for consumption as such in Canada within a maturing period of 90 days from the date of manufacture, nor shall he cut the first ten days of said maturing period at a higher temperature of storage shall be

KING CALLS FOR

The chairmanship question was settled by making the foreign secretaries of the new sponsoring powers — Britain, The United States, Russia and China — revolving chairmen who will preside in turn at the plenary meetings. V. Molotov, Russian Foreign Minister, will take the chair at this morning's session, Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary will preside this afternoon.

JUNCTION FREES

The greater part of the remainder of Germany's fighting strength is cut off in the northern or Baltic port. There also are 30 or more divisions at the long-bypassed Atlantic ports.

By EDWARD W. HIGGS
V-E Day Press Aboard

Washington, April 28 (AP)—Military experts here, figuring V-E Day will weeks ahead, nevertheless believe Gen. Eisenhower's formal proclamation will come before all fighting ends in Germany.

Unless there is an unexpected German capitulation,[2] said War Department officials who are in a position to know but don't want to be named, Eisenhower will wait until the major pockets of Nazi fighting are liquidated.

One official estimated this will require no more than six weeks.

Military planners, however, do not expect the mop-up of the smaller pockets to delay the Supreme Commander's decision to proclaim V-E Day. It probably will come when the German forces in central Europe are annihilated.

The task of erasing the major pockets probably already has been assigned to various Anglo-American and Russian units through consultation between Eisenhower and the Russian central military headquarters.

Operation Lies Marked.

On the basis of present operations, Eisenhower already has begun separating the forces probably will form the base of Lieber's drive from Baltic to the Elbe river, up the Elbe and inside rivers, along the western border of Czechoslovakia and down the Danube to the vicinity of Linz and Salzburg in the Alps.

This would assign to the Russians the job of mopping up the Germans in northeast Germany, western Czechoslovakia, the part of eastern and Yugoslavia. British, American, Canadian and French armies would take on the remainder.

The co-ordination between Eisenhower and Russian headquarters probably will be broadened by liaison between similar Allied and Russian units in the field. Presumably, the two forces will exchange officers to keep each informed of outstanding this local issue.

U.S. OFFICER

"Our company commanders sent us out this morning to chase civilians off the roads. They were pilgrims. Most of them were running away from the Russians . . . among them were many killed during days of war who escaped from prison camps.

"We could hear small arms fire very close and they told us the Russians were just across the river.

"We left our jeep and went down to the river bank. There we forged up a big white flag so they wouldn't shoot at us . . .

"Near the bridge was a very large castle with a high tower.

"I climbed there with the lower and waved the flag. They stopped firing for a while.

"Then yelled, 'American, Tovarish, Kamerad.'

"Then were yelling at me from across the river and fired two flares but I didn't see any flares do fire back.

"I left the flag flying and went down and found a German who had been a prisoner of the Germans. He translated at the Russians to stop firing and I saw one Russian start across the bridge which was partly blown.

Distinct Types Of Adolescents Club is Told

"Adolescent psychology" was the topic of the address heard by members of the local Y's-Men's Club as they listened to Rev. Grant Spalling of Christ Church at their regular weekly dinner meeting at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday evening.

There are two distinct types of adolescents, the introvert and the extrovert, according to the speaker. He termed the introvert as sedentary and hard to handle while in contrast, the extrovert was easy to get along with. The adolescent asked to take orders and could be better handled, by distinct suggestion.

Despite his outward attitude of cockiness-ness, the adolescent was troubled with emotional instability which was greatly dependent upon older people. In many instances they need a confidante outside the circle of the home family. For a father to be a confidante to his own son was the mark of highest success. Frank discussion of the problem at hand was needed but the adolescent must be his own decision.

Children of this age were imbued with a creative activity which should be "thunted" along useful channels. This was the reason for hobby shops in vocational schools, and the fascinating delinquency racket. Mr. Spalling stated that in many instances parents were being wrongfully blamed for the conduct of their children. Parents must provide a proper background for their children, but they are only one controlling factor. School, church and other playmates are also contributing factors in a child's development.

Club appreciation to the speaker was expressed by "Mac" Macklem, who stated the topic was extremely timely in view of the work of the club with the younger generation. President "Bud" Trill presided over the meeting while Al. Sherk led in the singsong with Jack Wilson acting as file collector.

Kinsmen Fags Reach Soldiers In Far off India

Although it took several months to arrive, Sergt. Allen Dempsey writes from far off India to thank the Kinsmen Fag Fund for some good Canadian pipe tobacco he received recently. "Although it was mailed from Montreal in December I only received my Old Virginia tobacco today, but it was a treat I can assure you," wrote Allen, who is with the R.C.A.F., stationed at Bombay, India. Also from India, Sgt. J. R. Cowan wrote to say his shipment of Canadian cigarettes from the Kinsmen Fag Fund are arriving with regularity. "Among our first shipments of parcels in India was a cartoon of cigarettes from the Belleville-Kinsmen", added Sgt. Cowan.

Similarly from the various European fronts come replies from local lads expressing appreciation for cigarettes received. This is one more particularity true coming from the Canadian boys now fighting in Germany where it is a practically impossible to procure good smokes, reported Chairman Hunter LaBarr.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual shipments of 200 cigarettes through the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week included:

"After Long Journeys"

There has just taken place a scene which will live in history and will no doubt be perpetuated in art — the forces of the United Nations, representing men from as far east as the far-eastern bounds of Russia in Asia and from the Pacific coast of the North American Continent met on German soil when they formally met and stood as conquerors over the world's greatest military and political tyranny now tottering in ruins. These Russians and Western Allies have proved that though they met in East and West is West, the twain have met in one of the greatest achievements of the world's greatest alliance. Two fronts have come together, obliterating Nazi Germany. All the very men who were the Allies met and shook hands the armies of liberation came together, there is no unoccupied German soil. The Allies have girdled Germany and also cut that country in two and they have united the Allied Nations in very truth. From the East and from the West they set out with one goal, now almost achieved — final victory over Germany, full and complete.

It was a day of great enthusiasm and high spirits among the three great peoples, United States, Britain and Russia and also for the smaller nations who see the signs of the end of German aggression.

Prime Minister Churchill's words will be preserved in history for all time as they record this great fact, which has given the coup de grace to the aggressor. Allied unity is a fact so impressive and powerful. He said:

"After long journeys, toils and victories, across the land and oceans, across so many deadly battlefields, the armies of the great Allies have traversed Germany and have joined hands together. Now their task will be the destruction of all the remnants of German military resistance, routing out of Nazi power and the subjugation of the Hitler regime.

"For these purposes ample forces are available and we meet in true and victorious comradeship and with the inflexible resolve to fulfill our purpose and our duty. Let all march forward upon the foe."

United States President Truman in his announcement said impressively "this is not the hour of final victory in Europe, but the hour draws near, the hour for which all the American people, all the British people and all the free world has been looking and has prayed so long." And he added "the Anglo-American armies under the command of General Eisenhower have met the Soviet armies they intended to meet—in the heart of Nazi Germany. The enemy has been cut in two."

In Mr. Truman's words "the last faint, desperate hope of Hitler and his gangster government has been extinguished." Mr. Truman gave his great predecessor in office, who did not live to see the day, the credit that this great triumph of Allied arms and Allied strategy is "which is the tribute to the courage and determination Franklin Roosevelt as no words could ever speak and that could be accomplished only by the patience and the courage of the fighting soldiers and sailors of the United Nations." The Allied purpose will be carried through to the final Allied triumph over Germany and of Japan and until that time there will be no relaxation of effort at home.

Marshal Stalin's order of the day to the Russian armies contained the announcement in that striking form now so well known to the world, "In the name of the Soviet Government I address you commanders and men of the Red Army and of the armies of our Allies.

"The victorious armies of the Allied Powers waging a war of liberation in Europe have routed the German troops and linked up on the territory of Germany.

"Our task and our duty are to complete the destruction of the enemy, to force him to lay down his arms and surrender unconditionally.

"The Red Army will fulfill to the end this task and this duty to our people and to all freedom-loving peoples.

"I greet the valorous troops of our Allies who are now standing on the territory of Germany to join to shoulder with the Soviet troops and who are full of determination to carry out their duty to the end."

President Truman pointed out the significance of the event, "The junction of our forces at this moment signalizes to ourselves and to the world that the collaboration of our nations in the cause of peace and freedom is an effective collaboration which can surmount the greatest difficulties of the most complex campaign in military history and succeed. Nations which can plan and fight together shoulder to shoulder in the face of such obstacles of distance and of language and of communications as we have overcome, can live together and can work together in the common labor of the organization of the world for peace."

This event is important as fact and symbol, gives a great lift to the spirit of the San Francisco conference now meeting in the expectation of reaching a permanent organization which will effectively outlaw war and bring in an era of undisturbed peace with power and strength to prevent war.

How to Maintain Car

(Automobile La Patrie)

The length of the war has allowed us to estimate the resistance and endurance of our automobiles. In peacetime we willingly changed cars with the first chassis squeak or piston slap. The frenzy got about that it was more economical to change cars every year than to have one given yearly repairs. Depreciation after three or four years arbitrarily reduced the commercial value of a car, irrespective of its condition. Times have changed! A price-ceiling had to be imposed to prevent used cars from being sold at prices which were formerly paid for brand-new ones. Motorists have learned to keep his machine up. He has discovered that the replacement of used parts, the frequent greasing, give a motor new vigor; he has learned to take care of his car. But it is a fact that the war has profoundly changed the general attitude toward the automobile. We will again become careless and wasteful.

Worst Spot in Hun Inferno

(London Times)

All of Germany today is like a landscape in hell, but the worst spot in the inferno must be the hiding place where the leaders fight like rats in a hole, each blaming the other for the awful punishment that has caught up with them all. . . . The evil that these men did will live long after them. They have had power to destroy a great part of Europe, and it will take generations to clear away the rubble they have left where Germany once stood. But already they are just part of the debris. Killed or not, they are dead; replacing one another or not; they do not count for anything in the grand denouement of the drama they set in motion. The stage is filled with other figures. Colossus has made a feeble scarecrow, flapping in the dust of those dead cities which are the true Nazi Valhalla.

Way to Handle Them

(Baltimore Sun)

There might be an extreme difficulty in defining in a legal sense the crimes with which the war criminals were charged. If the other rules of normal trials—strictness as to the competence of witnesses and of evidence, for instance—were followed, the difficulties might be insuperable. This is not, of course, in any way to criticize normal trial procedures. It is simply to say that they were not worked out with the idea of settling cases like Hitler's. What can be done with such cases is to put them before some form of military court, with its summary procedures and its freedom from red tape; or a mere sentence of banishment or execution is possible, without the formality of trial, as in the case of Napoleon. Those questions are, of course, under study in the Allied governments. An early decision ought to be announced.

Capital Closeups

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 26.—(CP)—A mild-mannered, graying man with wind-burned face and a genial smile sat in the cozy panelled office of the Agriculture Minister a few stones' here the other day, and talked about tasty dishes of lizards and snakes.

He was Charles F. Mountford, 46, Australian explorer, ethnologist, archeologist and leading world authority on the aborigines of that land. He himself of his native country.

He has lived and lived a total of 30,000 miles through the central Australian desert gathering material and studying the customs and lore of these stone Age Survivors, and among other things has learned to appreciate their taste in food. Mountford has written a book on eating fare he relished with an easy comfortable feeling, as one of his native helpers dug out a mess of grubs — staple Aborigine food — from under the bark of a dead tree.

"They were roasted and then served in an earthen dish, each smelling at a grimacing superior. "Well, you can't offend the natives and so I ate them. I found I did not; they were very tasty, resembling the crustacean of the sea-bed. I will say though that their appearance left much to be desired."

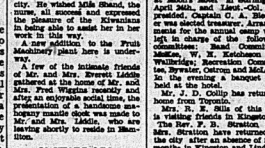
He said the grubs were about the size of a man's thumb and white and green, and "looked very wormlike, are as delicate as chicken breast.

Canada's Lawyer: Re-establishment affair by Lawyer Bowen, Belleville Solicitor-General caused a mild sensation in the Commons on April 9th to find out just who the job included.

It was found that the new incumbent, slim, dark Joseph Jean, 46, of Montreal, is the first lawyer of No. 1 lawyer for Canada. He might conceivably have a Dominion appeal to the Privy Council, but he is also the junior law officer of the Crown, responsible to and assistant to the Justice Minister. That's his main function. Solicitor-General is senior law officer.

Mr. Jean's predecessor was Hon. Maurice Dupre, fatally injured in a railway crash in 1942. Mr. Dupre was in the cabinet as minister without portfolio.

Mr. Jean's appointment as Assistant Minister of Vincent Bennett, defeated in 1935.



One Meat Meal: A party of Canadian food and agricultural experts recently returned from Washington, where they had a meal without the meat shortage. And with them from Ottawa, Hon. Brooke Claxton, assuring of the United States capital. All the menus offered shrimp and prime ribs.

"We walked from our plane to the hotel, and found there a private room at 8.30 as we landed and we found three guests of honor in the one official. "It was the same at every meeting and we met many of the food people and asked them what they were hearing about. They took it for granted we'd eat meat.

He added that it was explained that in the United States hotels and restaurants often had good selections of meat, but the average American home was feeling the pinch.

Buns and Buns on the transport coming up to Okinawa. He and a few others got up a Marine quartet and none grown concert on deck every afternoon.

They would sit on a hatch in the stern and sing and sing pretty soon there would be scores of Marines and sailors packed around them. Shakespearean tragedy was never made the trip to war almost like a Hollywood musical.

Buns' singing partner was Pfc. Johnny Marturello of Des Moines, Ia. Johnny plays the accordion. He is now in bed and like all who have that fair for the accordion. He sings too, but the name of his singer his name is "Frank Mot-so-hora."

Buns says Johnny wrote the song himself. It is a lovely thing. He sent it to the Ol Publishing Company in Tin Pan Alley whatever it is in the States and I feel positive it will be a great success if it would become a hit.

Buns has a sentimental song called "Why Do I Have To Be Here Alone?" Johnny wrote it for his girl back home. She has the grace to admits they are "on the outs."

Johnny and Buns met in Camp Lee and his accordion followed two days later. Now in his off moments, he sits at the side of the road and plays for hours. He says the day that the Marines have rounded up. They seem to like it.

Johnny has a lot of trouble with his accordion. It's always in the tropical climates. Parts would warp and buckle. Johnny says he is continually had to take the thing apart and dry and clean it.

But it was worth the trouble. It had kept Johnny from getting too homesick and with it along with him from home just for his own personal use. The accordion would probably be ruined by the climate, but he didn't care.

"I can always get a new accordion," Johnny said, "but I can't get a new me."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CREDIT FOR A GOOD TEE

I challenged real or pursuits in nutrition authorities, in an article entitled "Allied Supplies in the Vitamins," to furnish a sample diet or menu which supplies all the vitamins in the proper proportions. The genius of the author of the Canadian nutrition officer serving in a great Army hospital, Italy, I would do well to look at Nutritionist analyses office on diets and see how they check with the yardstick, the National Research Council's recommended daily allowances.

This officer knows what he is talking about. He is serving from a directive of the War Department on the policy of the Surgeon General of the U. S. Army.

"The basic ration (or menu) has been analyzed and pronounced scientifically adequate by both Army and Navy nutritionists and outstanding nutritionists. That should be no question as to the adequacy of the ration from a dietary standpoint.

Up to this point the outlook is not at all bright—it is begins to look as though I'll have to eat my words again.

"Provided the ration is used as issued, without substitutions, it is made of the prescribed quantities of common foods, fresh vegetables, evaporated milk or drink-mix, fresh fruit, dried fruit, canned fruit and juices, and fresh meat.

Canterbury Blends Ancient, Modern

Canterbury, England, April 26 (Reuters)—The ancient city of Canterbury's ancient character with modern needs, if reconstruction requirements in the aim of a post-war rebuilding plan prepared by the city counsel by Charles Holden town-planning consultant, and City surveyor H. J. Rowe.

Provision is made for an inner-ring road to relieve the High Street of through traffic which has no call to pass through the city, for by-pass shopping and business areas generally. Into this circular road will flow new roads from London, Whitstable and other towns.

The main street through Canterbury will be widened from the eastern end and a new and pedestrian street will be constructed between the main street and ancient Westgate Street, thus enabling one-way traffic to operate. Between the two will be four connecting cross-ways. A new shopping centre to the site St. George's Street area which is now occupied by coal, with protection assured for the best view of the famous cathedral while the reconstruction of buildings opened up.

Under the replanning scheme, blighted property would be set on obscure sites will be brought into productive use. This is to carry out the required work in the first 10 or 15 years after the war.

Nursing and National Health

I—HISTORY OF NURSING—from Early Times to Florence Nightingale

Nursing is regarded as an essential public service. Nursing is to be included in the social and general health schemes for Canada. The spirit of nursing is as old as the spirit of mother-love.

Down through the ages; the care of the sick, the poor and the aged has been considered a religious duty and a charitable work. From earliest days, women have been assigned the nursing duties in the home. Gradually, nursing has been looked upon as a duty taken for granted, although men have shared in nursing and first-aid work.

With the advent of Christianity, the care of the sick became one of the many duties of the deaconesses of the early Christian church. The Christian deaconesses assumed the responsibility for what nursing service was carried out under such auspices. No technical preparation was considered necessary for such work.

Then came the Dark Ages, which were truly dark for the hospitals. The classification of the hospitals was abandoned, and in many lands left England without provision for care of the sick. Several hundreds of hospitals were closed. Those required for a time, however, by the authorities reopened the hospitals and established new ones.

Deterioration of the religious orders proceeded rapidly. Segregated had hospital work became that the authorities were reduced even to the point of holding prisoners to enter the hospitals to serve as the attendants. Such was the condition when the first important and conditions were generally deplorable and at a very low ebb. We are not surprised to read that "Nursing was at its worst and no hospitals! no charities!

There was a great revival of learning in the arts and sciences in the 17th and 18th centuries, which expanded into a general humanitarian movement. Many reforms were brought about, and in the public conscience that the sick were being neglected. The medical profession assisted in this movement to a considerable extent, but women had little share in these intellectual opportunities.

It was not until the mid-nineteenth century that the social reformers and scientists began to take a hand. Florence Nightingale had the most effect on nursing. It was in this period that Miss Florence Nightingale, with 38 nurses, established the first training school for the nursing field. Nursing, at this period, was no longer a religious and philanthropic work of the sick poor, but was a field for the educated. The heroic work of Miss Nightingale in the Crimea led to drastic changes in the nursing service of the British army. Later, however, she continued her crusade for improved nursing conditions in civilian hospitals. Her great ambition was to establish a training school for nurses, and in 1860 the Nightingale School was opened in St. Thomas' Hospital, London. In this school the modern system of nursing and hospitals was founded and became the pattern for our early Canadian hospital training schools. The fundamentals of nurse education set down at this time by Miss Nightingale are the basis of the present system. The modern nursing school of this century is built, and the idea of humanitarian service which is the foundation of nursing, was taught and practised by Florence Nightingale.

DIVINE SARAH

Sarah Bernhardt (stage name of Rosine Bernard), famous French actress, is known as "The Divine Sarah."

This title is believed to have been bestowed upon her by Oscar Wilde after she played the part of the Queen in that dramatist's "Salome" in London in 1679. Wilde later wrote to Sarah, "Divine," herself author and critic.

"Were I king I would give half of my kingdom, the half of my scepter, the half of my crown, to know that Sarah Bernhardt I reigned over all the known all over the world."

The name of that "Divine Sarah" did become "known all over the world" for she was one of the most famous actress of her day and earned about $6,000,000 during her stage career.

The phrase may have been suggested by a more euphonious one in Shakespeare. In "Othello" the Moor speaks of his wife as "the divine Desdemona."

Sarah Bernhardt was born in Paris 1844. Although of Jewess descent, she was baptized a Christian when a child and was educated in a convent. There is a curious local tradition that she was born and spent her childhood in the village of Richelieu, Cedar County, Iowa, and that she several times secretly visited that place when touring the United States.

At one period of her life she attracted considerable attention for her work on the sculptured stage. On the stage she played men's as well as women's parts, and she played the role of Shakespearean tragedy of that name.

She had a career of many times. While in the United States in 1913 she was in an accident that developed blood poisoning and necessitated the amputation of a leg in 1915. Although on a crutch and a peg-leg and continued her stage career until a short time before her death in 1922. Her last appearance on the American stage was in Brooklyn in 1918, when she played in a benefit performance for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Marine Gets Jap Pyjamas for Wife

This is another of the articles written by Ensk. Pyle before he was killed in action on the Island of Okinawa.—(Delayed)— One of these days Mrs. Leland Taylor of Jackson, Miss., is going to be the envy of all her friends. For she is about to come into possession of four pairs of the most beautiful Japanese pyjamas you ever saw.

Found in Cave.

These are daytime pyjamas of drawing room proportions. It is said that some American hostesses wear a cute oriental negligee.

Mrs. Taylor's husband, who is a Marine corporal and known as "Pop," found these pyjamas in a victims basket hidden in a cave. They are stunning. You look at it soft to the touch.

Pop carries the basket around on his arm from place to place until he can get a chance to ship them home.

One morning I wandered down to our mortar pitscon and ran into a young fellow with whom I have a great deal in common. We are both from Mississippi and we both have mosquito trouble.

The fellow's name is and was Pfc Dick Trauth. Both his eyes were swollen almost shut from mosquito bites. As I looked at mine I felt swollen shut every morning. We both have very funny

Dick still is just a boy. He's seen 18 summers but in the last couple of year overseas. He's a veteran of the Marines and is only 17 years old. He has one brother in the Marines and another in the Army in Germany.

Dick writes letters to movie stars and not long ago he got back a picture of Shirley Temple, autographed "To a swell Marine." I had asked her to do. Dick is very shy and quiet and I had a feeling he must be terribly homesick.

IDENTIFICATION DISC

Aids as two bottles of milk in the refrigerator. When putting away the morning's fresh supply throw a used jar ring over the bottle left from the previous day so that you will know for sure which one to use first.

CRYSTAL CLEAR

For easy and satisfactory washing of windows, use ammonia, not soap. Soap is a film and leaves streaks; but it makes windows streak-proof. Use a tablespoonful of liquid ammonia to a gallon of warm water, wash the windows thoroughly, then rinse clean. Dishes wash, enamels and give a final polish with newspaper. (The newspaper will still be good enough for waste-paper salvage.)

READY FOR THE FILL

Check up on the preserves cupboard is being housecleaned is the logical time for checking over bottles and sealers for this year's canning. Match up tops put aside; sealers with chipped edge and see that all are clean and ready for big days ahead.

If you have clear glass doors in your kitchen cabinet and don't care for them, they can be made very attractive by using floral cretonne and then pasting with a suitable color on the inside of the glass over the backs of the doors.

A GARDEN SMALL

I'm looking for a garden small
Where pulse bloom,
All walled in with hollyhocks
Just like a room.
And on the trellis by the gate
The rose in smile and hod,
Each petal, oh, so delicate
That blow is proof of God.

I'm looking for a garden small
Where friends may meet,
May sit and talk and rest awhile
On the garden seat.
Where bees hum by the china vase
Mod thrush is full of gold and blue,
And in the small cool garden,
Are lilies of every hue.

I'm looking for a garden small
Where I may be tended
By a mother, he is making it very nicely. He doesn't want me to suffer from childbearing and says he'd rather my would adopt one. And he's afraid too the baby will put us too much in debt.

I've told mother about it and she suggests I come home for a visit, and that I shouldn't worry about it because it would affect my baby's health. My husband has been transferred up to now, but will probably have to go into the service before long.

Twenty-One.

If your husband is a normal man, the first sight of that baby will make him feel he's the happiest man in the world. And I hope he will be a good sport and drop his present attitude in regard to the coming of his child. The baby may be a blessing in disguise, as he doesn't have to go through the hell that awaits you. It's very poor specimen of a man who is ready to his wife when she is expecting a baby.

Your mother's suggestion that you pay her a visit, to escape the hysterics of the boy-husband, is sensible. Try that, and perhaps by you are discontented and give way to your feelings; you're apt to have an unhappy, fretful child on your hands. For the baby's sake be cheerful.

Grandparents Disapprove of Love's Young Dream

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Some words they had said consistency is a jewel, but what would the old folks think of a child's grandparents? When they feel happy they almost their elopement, and Grandma wasn't quite 16, grandpa was 17. Their parents wouldn't consent, so grandma, locked in her room, climbed down the back porch into their arms and away they went in his buggy, drove most of the night and were married—that they've lived happily ever after.

Now they've a baby girl with my fiancee, their granddaughter, because at 18 she wants to marry me. I'm 21, have been through war overseas, and am home until a leg wound is healed. No nerves, no battle fatigue, nothing like that wrong with me. Yet they say we're too young. Another kick is I've been in the Army; what the mischief would happen to people if someone didn't go in the Army. We're thinking seriously of doing the same thing as Grampa and Grandma—eloping. Have we your blessing?

Joe.

Indeed, you have my blessing, and doubtless the grandparents will give you theirs too, when you return and say "With such a happy marriage in the family as yours, we felt we couldn't do better than follow your example". This will also answer Alexandra B.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Husband Would Rather They Weren't Asked a Child.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married a year now and have been extremely happy. We like practically the same things and are devoted to one another. My husband is 35 years of age and I am 31.

When we were first married we made an agreement that we would not have children until he was better situated financially. But now that I've told him I'm to become a mother, he is making it very mis-erable for me. He doesn't want me to suffer from childbearing and says he'd rather my would adopt one. And he's afraid too the baby will put us too much in debt.

I've told mother about it and she suggests I come home for a visit, and that I shouldn't worry about it because it would affect my baby's health. My husband has been transferred up to now, but will probably have to go into the service before long.

Twenty-One.

If your husband is a normal man, the first sight of that baby will make him feel he's the happiest man in the world. And I hope he will be a good sport and drop his present attitude in regard to the coming of his child. The baby may be a blessing in disguise, as he doesn't have to go through the hell that awaits you. It's very poor specimen of a man who is ready to his wife when she is expecting a baby.

Indeed, you have my blessing, and doubtless the grandparents will give you theirs too, when you return and say "With such a happy marriage in the family as yours, we felt we couldn't do better than follow your example". This will also answer Alexandra B.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 20 and have been going with a boy for five years now. He has just come back from overseas after two years absence. We are engaged and want to be married.

His parents object because we are of different religions and are trying to break us up. We are both very unhappy.

He is willing to get my church and be married but he's afraid if they find out his parents will have nothing more to do with him. And now that he is wounded he may be discharged from the service.

J. A. H.

It seems strange that religion, which tries to teach its adherents brotherly love should break up so many families and be responsible for so much bitterness and hatred. I'm sure your parents will look around them they will see that there are many, many cases of unhappiness in married life.

In marriage, tolerance rather than bigotry has made the road easy.

When Love Flies Out of the Window and Youth is Gone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Life (and money) is what you make it. True, if both husband and wife work together. But it's better if I were the quarrelsome type and ruined Cain, if I wasn't interest in others?—but that's not my way. All I want is a real home and a kind word now and then from a husband not aware of me.

To fill one's life full to overflowing with endless duties is a good bed medicine in a case like this. Then, something the miracle happens. The absorbed and neglected husband finds he needs a real person in his home, not a shadowy, ghostlike creature who fills about the house.

And those days it's easier to forget one's personal worries in working for the Red Cross, caring for children in the day nurseries whose mothers are doing war work, helping out as a nurse's aide in hospitals. To let one's self be interested, forget of appreciation get you down is the fatal thing.

She's Planning to Marry a Young Man Who Still Takes Out Old Girl Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past two years I've been going steady with a boy, who is now in the service, and we are planning to marry on his next furlough. He has been home several times, and when he comes he takes out a girl who is a former sweetheart. This always upsets me, and his reason is that he wants to find out whether he really loves me or not. But, don't you think when a man tells a girl he loves her and wants to marry her, he ought to know what he's doing?

Do not advise me to ask him to make a choice between this other girl and me, or pay no attention to it?

Unhappy

It strikes me as pretty indifferent and lovemaking for an engaged man to take out another girl just to test his affection for his fiancee. You're only human to feel as you do. I'm sorry this had to happen.

If this young man is drifting toward the other girl, there really is not anything to be done. Be a good sport, and save your face by taking an interest in someone else. After sometime has elapsed you may find you don't even come back to him, when you leave the door open.

the SHOUT
-THAT BECAME A WHISPER...

We've looked forward a long time to celebrating the installation of our millionth telephone. Now the great day has come and gone, with only a brief press notice to mark its passing. There are more important things to do just now. Besides, we won't be really happy until we can take care of every one of the more than 70,000 further applicants who today are waiting for telephones.

It may surprise you that 215,000 more Bell telephones are in service now than when war began. With telephone manufacturers practically 100% on war orders, how was it done?

First, by using up all our reserve stock. And second, by making maximum use of reconditioned equipment. We have thus been able to meet—fully and on time—every essential war demand for telephone service. Only materials left over after these needs are met can be used to look after our "waiting list".

These unfilled orders are our constant concern. They involve much more than installing telephone sets. The job calls for additional wire, and cable, and intricate exchange apparatus, and all the other elements of a complete telephone system. And this, in turn, is just one part of the whole construction program we will undertake once men and materials are available.

It means lots of work ahead not only for every present Bell employee, whether at home or in the services, but for additional workers, too.

G. W. PROCTOR
Manager.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, April 26 — (CP) — The proposal made by Maple Leaf Gardens' astute president, Conn Smythe, this week suggesting that the Gardens become the permanent home of the Memorial Cup playoffs as well as a Hall of Fame, for the Canadian game of hockey, certainly has brought a blast from Maurice (Winnipeg Free Press) Smith.

Says Smithy, based on the fact that the Gardens had drawn 54,000 fans averaging over 13,000 per game, it is no wonder that Toronto's new ring management in Canada would be pleased to challenge the title under the same conditions.

Says Smithy: "The C.A.H.A. doesn't fall for that one," Smithy concludes. "Kingston, Ont., has already been established as Canada's hockey shrine. Why change it?"

We hope the Kingston hockey hall of fame controversy isn't revived again!

Post-war Planning:

First the Dominion Government's apparent interest in a sport-minded nation, one member of parliament has come up with a suggestion that really sounds good. Talking to a Toronto air club meeting the other day, a Toronto M. P. envisioned the day in the not-so-far future when all the Canadian Rockies would be developed as one of the world's great winter playgrounds.

The Rockies certainly contain some of the finest skiing terrain in the world and its development would be one part of making a sport-minded nation as well as giving Canada some well-deserved publicity.

The program envisioned by this particular law-maker included erection of a chain of hotels suitable for winter and summer climbing, cutting of ski trails, adequate mapping and marking and building of bush roads.

More power to such a plan.

As Server:

Eastern Canada's police games will be longer by the name. Constable John Boyd, one of Toronto's finest police athletes, has retired from competition.

The big, congenial Irish constable was regarded as the toughest man with the heaviest and captained the tug-of-war team for 18 years. In all the service, we all feel he deserves a rest. Though everybody will be glad to forward to seeing the lad cop sitting in the stands come July.

Singh Demands Morgan Bout, Is Accomodated

It was directly following "Toar" Morgan's victory in the ring at the Hume Arena last Wednesday night that Nanjo Singh, who claims he has been a serious condition booking in the sport of the ring, that unpredictable Hindu, vowed vengeance against the popular Morgan.

"If he wants to be a hero in the eyes of Canadians, now that he's five here, get him into the ring with me and I'll show the lads how what a 'fakir he is," screamed Singh into the surprised ear of Promoter Fred Tunney.

Being in the wrestling business for these many years back Mr. Tunney has heard such threats oft more than one occasion and particularly from Singh, who claims he fears no man. Sending it would be a popular bout in Belleville Promoter Tunney today signed the turbulent Hindu to a contract to meet Morgan in the main bout here next Wednesday. To make sure the patrons would get their money's worth Mr. Tunney added a codicil to the agreement wherein the bout would be a 90-minute time limit affair. Morgan was more than willing to sign as he hopes to take Singh on. Canadian naturalization papers in the near future and thereby become eligible to challenge for the British Empire championship. It all adds up to a great bout. Of course there'll be preliminaries that will include several new faces to the local wrestling clientele.

CUBAN PITCHER HELPING LITTLE GIANTS IN LOOP

Adrian Zabala Becomes First Three-Game Winner of Ball Season

By The Associated Press

Lt. Adrian Zabala, Cuban pitcher with Jersey City of the International-Association, gave some big attractiveness, he may yet hook up again with the parent club, Manager Adolpho Luque, coach for the parent club New York Giants of the National League.

Zabala yesterday became the first three-game winner in the International circuit as the pacemaking little Giants stretched their unbeaten streak to seven with a 6-4 triumph over Montreal.

Last year, Adrian was with Luque's Cienfuegos team in the Cuban winter league, winning five and losing five.

Relief baseman Bunka joined the Buffalo squad yesterday and immediately made his presence felt by smacking out a home run as the Bisons snapped the five-game losing streak with an 8-2 decision over Rochester. Bunka was farmed back to their initial wit this season by contributing five misplays.

Manager Ben Chapman's Baltimore Orioles were not enough to stave off defeat at the hands of the Rochester Red Wings, who clicked, 8-5. Jack Mandarich lost, Baltimore was able to cling to second place.

The scheduled Toronto at Syracuse clash was rained out.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Opl. Danny Webb of Montreal, who has had a busy middle ring engagements since arriving in England as a Canadian soldier, has been virtually banned from the sport under an order of Canadian military headquarters. It was announced in London last night by the British Boxing Board of Control.

No reason was given publicly by the Canadian military authorities but it was said the Montreal Negro could not participate in any more professional engagements until official permission is granted by the Canadian Army. It was stated in London that Webb had been anxious to make some ring money so he could continue medical studies.

In the first outdoor race of his U.S. tour, Haakon Lidman of Sweden yesterday easily won the 120-yard high hurdles at the Penn relay carnival, Philadelphia, finishing in front of Fortune Gordien of Christenson of the U. S. Army in 14.4 seconds.

After their draw two weeks ago at Boston, Sal Bartolo, N.B.A. featherweight champion, and Gus Moll of Montreal, were signed yesterday for a second non-title 10-rounder at the Boston Garden May 4.

Shortstop of the Red Sox farm team last season, Steve Kovalowski left his home town, Niagara Falls, Ont., yesterday to rejoin the Scranton, Pa., club in the Eastern League after a delay due to wartime border regulations.

Defenders of the Dominion senior basketball honors, Hayes Hillock of Merritton, Ont., expect to leave shortly for Vancouver to engage Laurier in the 1946 final series with a squad numbering only eight players. Bob Gauchat and Sal Sepia may be missing from the team because of school examinations.

The first of two games for the Canadian junior Women's basketball title last night at Toronto saw Bloordale defeat the Y.W.C.A. 35-15 victory against Verdun, Que., United. Mary Bedran of the winners collected 16 points on her own account.

Sound Principle.

While attending the annual Ontario Baseball Association conclave at Toronto last week we were astounded to learn the interest that is being taken in minor baseball promotion throughout Ontario.

For instance Dr. H. J. McCann, the guiding light of minor league baseball for the T.A.M.A. informed us that sponsored as Junior and juvenile ball clubs in Toronto last season and in 1946 intend to increase this number to 180. Out in Peterborough they have promoted minor league now has 200 teen-aged lads signed and they will play 40 games each. Jerry Gerbie Cec Perdue has visions of the revival of the C.O.B.L. in the not too distant future.

In Cobourg the Kiwanis Club is sponsoring two juvenile baseball teams this summer and hope to link up in a league with similar clubs in Port Hope and Bowmanville. Now the question arises what is Belleville doing to keep abreast with the revival of baseball that is sweeping the province from Windsor to Cornwall?

Getting back to Dr. McCann, we contacted him regarding the future of minor baseball (the backbone of the game) in Ontario. "It is my firm belief we should organize an Ontario Minor Baseball Association, separate and apart from the O.B.A. Elect men to office who are interested in the minors and in baseball as a recreation for our growing boys," suggested Dr. McCann, as he referred to the action made by the O.M.H.A. He added that such an association would affiliate as a separate body with the O.B.A., but run its own legislation. Unfortunately, the O.B.A. has promised this idea to the O.B.A. meeting the Niagara Peninsula and Inter-County groups flatly rejected the proposal, doubtless because it was a locally brain-child. However, we feel the proposal has its merits and would like to hear from the game in Eastern Ontario. As a matter of fact there is already a committee on to call interested parties together at Cobourg next month to study the merits of organizing an Eastern Ontario Baseball Association to stand on its own feet.

Three Good Ones.

Navy Lt. Bill Dickey says the three easiest Yankee pitchers to catch were Vernon Gomez, Red Ruffing and Herb Pennock. "Any one of the three could put the ball just about where I wanted it," explains Bill, "and all I had to do was catch it." If a runner could maintain the best time ever made in the 440-yard dash for four quarters, he would produce a mile in 3:16 1-5 . . . Frank Mancuso catcher for the Browns and younger brother of the veteran Gus, tells how Gus informed him a couple of months ago that he had decided to retire . . . "There's just one club that I would like to play with," explained Gus, "and that's the 'put 'em on Red Sox' . . . That night Gus had a call from the Phillies . . . "I'm not going," he told them, "there's a fair salary," said the elder Mancuso, "and I also mentioned what I had received from the Giants last season—about $7,000. Then I got a big raise dropped the phone when the man on the other end said he'd see me a contract at that figure. And whadda ya know? One hour after I mailed the Phil contract I got an offer from the Red Sox"... Pete Gray, the one-armed Brownwears a fielder's glove devoid of padding and holds it precariously with the tips of his fingers, almost the entire portion of his palm being bare when he catches a thrown or batted ball.

Remember When.

Kid Chocolate, negro featherweight, won his 16th fight 15 years ago tonight in Toronto, defeating Jimmy Goodrich of New York in a slow 10-round bout. The Kid had to be repeatedly warned several times to keep up some fighting and the championship in 1924 and in later years went to Detroit.

What's Cookin'

On Wednesday night when Toar Morgan hopped the ropes at the Hume Arena to help avert what might have resulted in an impromptu referee being seriously injured, little did he imagine that Nanjo Singh, the principal in the picture, would make an issue of the matter. However, Singh took the matter in his own hands and Fred Promoter Frank Tunney to "get that adopted Canadian for me." Morgan was just as eager to the match so now Maree Tunney has a natural for next week's grappling show top spot.

Post-War Headaches.

A longer spring training season in Florida and California for major league clubs will follow the lifting of the ban on the southern camps, in the opinion of General Manager Jack Zeller of the Tigers. "It will take two months or more of training to weed out the big leaguers that have got back from the fronts," Zeller explained. He pointed out that the Tigers alone have 21 on the National Defence List, nearly 40 of whom at one time or another played with the club. Whether big league players now in the service will be able to resume their diamond careers with approximately the same skill he before, according to Zeller, depends a lot on their military service. Those who have continued playing having better chances.

Wrong End:

Ray (Sandlot) Dumont reports that former sports editing Charles (Chief) Love of the Whitby, Ont., Eagle has sent a pair of wooden shoes from Holland to Ray's Historic Baseball Congress to be awarded to the first player to hit a home run in the National Sandlot tournament next August...Should not they be the kind that have to be tossed out by a mile on an attempted steal, or would that belong to the wooden head dept?

TANKS NEARING RANGOON

Pyu, 36 miles south of Toungoo, was the next main objective as the armor rolled along the axis of the Mandalay-Rangoon railway through disorganized Japanese resistance.

LESSON NO. 88
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

My hand was not an opening. I passed. Partner passed. I had nothing, but we would have reached and made an easy game. When next I got a hand like that, I opened it. Not me. We got to game and that was when we took an awful set.

Long after, we are going there will be bridge players looking for that by the spring room. They will be calling over some of the boys in the room. "Say, Joe, Like sticking themselves for not betting on any game."

Of the million different hands in a card pack, some are not good enough to open. As a general one of these will get a prompt bid from the set. That's what makes a wildcat wild.

However, suppose you try to guess what unsound openings will result in profit. Your partner will then be guessing which of your openings are sound. That makes him either a better wildcat, or a sap.

So, get yourself in some kind of a settled mood. Are you going to prefer a sound opening even if it is about a grim hand and then? Or would you prefer to be an unsound opener with occasional results?

Come; then a letter of this let about this hand:

♠ A J 4 2 ♥ 6 5 ♦ K 7 4 ♣ Q 10 7 3

♠ 8 5 ♥ A K 10 7 3 2 ♦ 8 ♣ K 9 6 5

This is not a good opening. It looks another sure trick. It lacks another high card. It lacks tactical value. Then, an opening bid hand could get your pair into plenty of trouble.

But it seems that the player who held this hand passed. For which he should be praised. And yet it was discovered later that a game could have been made by their pair.

So a cumbersome player finishes my book in his face to show that I say it is not an opening bid. And adds: "Any man in his right mind would open a hand like that."

Which only proves my points that. They even think they can make a profit playing the punchboards.

Yanks Close in On Two Airfields In South Okinawa

Guam, April 36—(AP)—Pursuing a retreating enemy on Okinawa island, the U. S. 24th Corps today closed in on two airfields — Machinato and Yonabaru — captive of which appears imminent.

Abandoned in caves and bunkers found with pack saddles indicate that the Japanese are falling back to their second defence line in disorder.

A small force of Japanese planes attacked Okinawa forces, Admiral Nimitz announced in today's communiqus. One interseweper knocked down three.

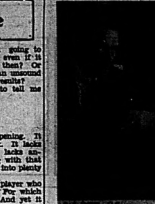
(Tokyo radio was heard in San Francisco claiming Japanese warships had sunk two U. S. cruisers, damaged a third, and sunk four large transports in "devastating attacks" on naval forces around Okinawa, yesterday.)

The Japanese air force has made no sizeable attack on U. S. forces at Okinawa for several days, their mainland staging bases in southern Kyushu having been under steady bombardment by American warplanes, carrier planes and Superfortress fighters, it was officially reported here.

Hilling in good weather, at medium altitude, from 100 to 150 Superforts again struck at Kyushu's main airfields today. It was the third raid in 48 hours and the 10th in the past month.

Capture of three key hills in the centre of Okinawa's defence-in-depth front places American troops in a dominating position for the drive on the two airbases.

There's Singing, Dancing and Music As Yanks and Reds Celebrate Historic Junction of Allies



By DON WHITEHEAD

With the 1st Ukrainian Army Head of the Elbe, April 26 —(Delayed)—(AP)—There was singing and dancing and music on the banks of the Elbe today as troops of the United States 1st Army and jubilant troops of Marshal Ivan Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army celebrated the historic junction symbolizing the defeat of Nazi Germany.

Americans and Russians slapped each other on the back, gave each other bear hugs, and, in the warm sunshine drinking champagne from huge jugs and toasting the great occasion of the meeting of the two armies yesterday.

Not in all this long war have there been scenes such as those enacted on the town of Torgau on the west bank of the Elbe and across the river in the Red Army encampment where Russian and American troops saw each other for the first time, and began to get acquainted despite the handicaps of language.

It was enough that they were allies and had whipped the enemy to open the way for the joining of armies in weird Torgau. Parts of the city are still deserted and deadly. In other sections Russian and American troops mingled, and informed friendships within a few minutes of meeting.

AT THE CAPITOL. — John Carradine and J. Carroll Naish meet for a showdown in the PRC spy melodrama "Waterfront," coming next to the Capitol. On the same program "Janie," starring Joyce Reynolds and Robert Hutton.

AT THE McCARTHY — Betty Field, lovely heroine of Lester Cowan's challenging film, "Tomorrow, The World!", next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Little Benny's Note Book

After lunch my cousin Artie brought around his Young Airplane Bilder set and we started to make a P-38, and we got one of the sides in the middle, and pop came home early on account of Saturday, saying, Well, by golliss, I see there's a couple of master mechanics in the house.

Sure, pop, only we need a little help, I said, and Artie said, You're just in time to show us what we're doing wrong with the P-38. Undo with.

I'll do better than that, I'll show you what you're not doing right, pop said.

And he sat down on the floor with us and looked at the blue print and after a while he says, I see what's together, saying. Well, there's something radically wrong here, the set must be defective.

It cant be, because my father did it, I said, and pop said, he did, heh? Well, these things take a little time, that's what makes them intriting, he said.

So he tried some more, making it look worse instead of better, and he said, When I was a boy ago we used to go in for making box kites. Now that's a real test of ingenuity, with no blue print to make it easy for you. If you boys forgas around and find some flat pieces of wood and some light cloth, I'll show you how to make a box kite that will really fly, he said.

Aw O, pop, we want to do this P-38, I said, and pop said, If it was a cargo plane I'd be glad to show you how to put it together, but with the world just about ready to blow up in our faces today this is no time to attach so much importance to a fighter plane. Others ought to be good flat sticks down the cellar, he said.

Well, Sunday pop, we dont want to make a box kite, I said, and Artie said, Box kites are old-fashion Uncle Will, and pop said, Well, the fact is, boys, there are always a lot of odd jobs waiting for me to do around the house on Saturdays. What he actualy really did being to get in back of his newspaper and stay there.

Greco Unable To Find Range Against Taylor

Jacksonville, Fla., April 26 (CP)—Three months' layoff from the ring warfare left Johnny Greco of Montreal unable to find the range speedily last night against shifty Chuck Taylor of Pittsburgh, but when the Canadian welterweight champion regained his punching eye he has little difficulty in pounding out a technical knockout in 1:05 of the fifth round of a schedule 10-round bout.

Greco weighed 140, Taylor 146. Taylor came out fast and collaborated Greco—himself a noted hook master—for two rounds.

But Greco rallied in the third and started to throw his heavy artillery. The third and fourth were to Greco by wide margins. In the fifth a flurry of powerful lefts to the jaw and two hard rights to the head of Taylor caused referee Jack Sharkey former world heavyweight champion, to stop the bout and raise Greco's mitt.

A crowd of 6,500 paid an estimated $6,500 to see the bout.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 26 —(CP)— The King, who had little success on the turf last year, got away to an early triumph as this season's Newmarket racing opened and the racing fan's eye on the watch for such things, awaited in into an onset of complete victory in Europe within a few days.

Great cheering broke out when the Royal colt, Rising Light, an 8-1 shot whose father is named Sir Hyperion, romped home first in the 1¼-mile Craven Stakes to beat the heavy favorite, Lord Milford's Sun Rower, and the turgid, Lord Derby's Wayside Inn was third.

Rising Light was the King's first runner of the season, and represents a contrast to last year when His Majesty's first success came at the last meeting in the fall. The colt entered in the classic 2,000 Guineas, Derby and St. Leger, has Sun Honey beaten for pace and stamina from the moment rising ground was reached and finished strongly with no urging by jockey Doug Smith.

Before the race Rising Light, who was unplaced in his only race last season, was 10-1 shot for the Derby. Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, the King's trainer who saw Rising Light's triumph, said the colt was a "stayer" and that "it certainly would be wonderful to win the Derby with him this year of all years."

Stanley Cotton, former British Open golf champion a few days ago played the first golf over the Royal Cinque Ports championship course at Deal since Dunkerque. While he was playing a flight of dragons' teeth, barbed wire and mine fields many explosions rolled across the sea from the Dunkerque area and the suggestion was advanced the Germans were blowing up stores.

The links are in fair shape although bomb craters, grenade and mortar holes and marks of tracked vehicles pock the fairways, tees and greens—and the Germans provided three new bunkers with shells from long-range guns at Cap Gris Nez before they were overrun by the Canadians.

Cotton said he was looking over the course prior to reconstruction. He recently went into a golf course architecture business. "A lot remains to be done but there is no reason why within 18 months the course should not be the best in the world," he said.

Eton has its "David and Goliath" play, but these two are friendly. They are Robin Brooks, barely five feet tall, and William Clench, six feet, seven inches, who will be partners in the Public Schools rackets championships.

Brooks is captain of squash and lawn tennis at Eton with the second-string to him in both games. Clench is Eton rackets captain with Brooks as his second-in-command.

P.O. Bill McCourt of (St Berkshire Ave.) Turnolo veteran of many years in Germany is going back to Canada—because of a hockey injury. Tail-gunner of a Halifax bomber he helped his team win the district championships.

Injured big wrist in the game and was unable to play again.

STAY WITH THEM TO THE LAST DITCH

FUGITIVE ON A DUDE RANCH

STEPHEN PAYNE

CHAPTER 5

"You'll take Bobbie along," said Robert Rowland firmly. "I won't ride with you. Why, you—" The girl's temper was rising, but she checked herself in time.

Before Tony could frame an answer a horseman suddenly loomed up beside the car. Nancy, seating herself, saw a chunky man, his face so shadowed by a floppy black hat that no part of it could be seen, else heard him say:

"Why, hello, Tony! How come you drivin' the T Slash gal was you goin'? Don't tell me you've gone to work for a change. . . . Was they just these two wantin' me here? No sense? Halladay didn't bring no man over from Deager Wash?"

Tony muttered ungraciously, "I don't know. What's on your mind right now, Sheriff Crowder?"

"Got a wire from 'way back yonder," the man drawled him. "Somethin' to arrest a feller name of Donald Sturgis an' accomplice with Wm. F. Waller, Ain't neither of you girls seen a feller name of Donald Sturgis?"

Nancy was too astonished to reply. A wire to the sheriff from Wm. F. Waller meant it had come from her brother! Was "Donald Sturgis? What could it possibly mean?

Roberta must have been astonished too, for she forgot her part in saying, "We ain't seen the guy, Slope."

"His ain't out to the ranch, then?" the sheriff conversed grunted. "No, he ain't at the ranch, I'll bet you know. If we hear of him, Orrington, Chico—"

The flivver trumbled in every sprawling plint as it chugged up the valley. Above the din Nancy could hear only snatches of what Anthony Thomas Perriwell was telling the girl he believed to be Marcia Louise Perriwell. "Well, that's straying down from the movie-colony range kissed her face and she smiled into the darkness at the Wyoming night. Someday Tony was going to wake up with a headache. Oh! a terrific headache.

They had reached a fork a half-mile back when the flivver stopped. Tony swore aloud, got out, leaned over the engine, and announced in profound disgust, "Out of water again. . . . Hey, you in the back seat, get that bucket and follow that cow trail that runs up along the ridge to a spring. It's about a mile. Bring back a bucket of water. . . . Well, what you waitin' for? Rattle your hocks."

"Rattle your hocks," said Nancy. "Why don't you send the rich girl? Why pick on me?" As an afterthought she added, "Huh!"

"You and her are different," snapped Tony. "Don't give me any more of your tit either. Maybe you ain't vice to just who you're talkin' to, but I'm not from the T Slash. Get that water or you won't get a job."

With her handbag in one hand, the bucket in the other, Nancy stepped from the flivver. "About a mile to the spring?" she asked. "Which fork do I take?"

"It's ten miles, miley. So if you've got a notion of having to stranded here you'll change your mind."

"Good-bye, Mister Mind Reader," retorted Nancy. Dropping the bucket, she trudged along the road, calling back, "I'm not—I ain't scairt of a ten-mile jaunt!"

"Gosh! Ain't she spunky!" gasped Roberta Rowland.

Nancy crouched still lower and the two cowboys, loping through the dust, failed to see her. They spent only a few minutes searching, then dashed away to begin rounding up cattle.

With the other possessions, that if she strayed from the road in this strange, new and seemingly uninhabited land, she'd be lost. So she held doggedly to the rutted trail. After what seemed an interminable stretch of time she found her feet dragging in the dust.

What time was it? She didn't know. With the other possessions she had loaned her wrist watch to Roberta Rowland. The only thing Nancy had retained was her handbag which contained her pocket money, but not nearly as much as there had been. To carry out the deception properly Roberta Rowland needed funds as well as clothes, and now she had Nancy's.

On and on and on. The tired girl began to hope the flivver with its obnoxious driver would overtake her; began thus to hope, knowing in the end she will think not. Long before the gasping car had coughed its dying cough, Nancy had realized its most urgent need was not water but oil.

Tony had descended from the giant hogback and now found herself rounding the corner. She had followed a lane with a barbed wire fence at her right, a buck and pole fence at her left.

The sudden "tip—yip, ki—yi—coco!" of a coyote pack which seemed very near sent cold shivers over her. Scarcely had the weird notes died away, when nearby cattle set up clamorous bawling. Above this din, Nancy heard a human voice, strident and disgruntled:

"Aw, shut it off, you damn dumb Mlltis!"

Men somewhere near! They'd help Nancy to reach the T Slash. Hurrying over a low hill she came suddenly upon the cattle. The lane was alive with them, and the moment the animals caught sight of the girl they took fright. Clouds of hoofs, dust lifting in the still air to envelope all almost another Nancy Eleanor Burke. Ahead of the rapidly moving herd angry men were shouting, "Get back there! What's eating on you, you—" More cursing of the cattle.

At the buck and pole fence at her left seemed sure to offer more security than the one of barbed wire, she crawled under the bottom pole and crouched down in the heavy sagebrush.

But the damage had already been done. With a rending crash, the cattle smashed through the fences on either side of the lane, and went lumbering across the fields to the right and left, bellowing as they ran.

Nancy heard one cowpuncher call to another, "Ain't mad I could chew bob-wire. Say Shorty, afore we start roundin' 'em up, let's take a look-see for whatever scairt them dogies."

The second rider answered, "If I can drop my rope on whatever it is I'm goin' to drag the thing hide often his carcass!"

Nancy crouched still lower and the two cowboys, loping through the dust, failed to see her. They spent only a few minutes searching, then dashed away to begin rounding up cattle.

Nancy brushed dust from Roberta Rowland's dress and went on along the lane. Would she ever, ever reach the T Slash? Suddenly A truck had swung around a curve and was coming toward her. It was going in the wrong direction for her purpose, but she planted herself in the middle of the road, right hand outstretched in a traffic cop when the headlights showed full upon her.

Donald Sturgis stepped on the brake of the small truck, and then while staring as though hypnotized at the girl in the road.

"Is it you?" he said. "Is it it!"

"Is who?" asked Nancy walking forward the right of the cab.

Don Sturgis slid to the ground on the opposite side of the truck and walked around into the glare of his headlights.

"Take a good look at me, Mister said to Nancy. "I've sprouted some swell whiskers, and my duds are considerable used up. But I'm the same guy you helped fix an inner tube at Cappy's."

Nancy's astonished features betrayed wild pleasure. Her voice thrilled with the same emotion. "You are! The mechanic at Cappy's garage! I never, never expected—you're living out here?"

"Well, I landed today at the T Slash ranch. Bummed my way, I mean," Sturgis grinned, and Nancy noted his ragged trousers and his cut-at-the-elbows shirt. But most of all she noted his dazzling eyes and cheery grin.

"Made great time considering my limited experience as a hobo," he went on. "Rode the last freight, which do get up and ramble nowadays. Al Dwight's boy, too, I was lucky. Ran into a ranchman who was kind enough to give me a lift. Only 'bout miles from his ranch to the T Slash where I got a job.

"But get in the cab and sit down, girl. I can't get over how amazing this is. What a break for me, too! I'm dying to ask a flock of questions."

"So am I!" Nancy climbed into the truck. Oh! how good to sit on a cushion, and have a back for one's back. The tall young man slid in behind the wheel and closed the doors.

"Now we're cozy, and by jiminy crickets, it's the T Slash flivver has cracked up, as stuttering Jake and Ike Riddle and Mike Perriwell all said it probably would with Tony at the wheel. If they didn't seem to have lots of confidence in Tony in Tony in'll probably do the weather. And Farnsworth good to be kept waiting for once."

STORY GAL 2

In the darkness of the cab he could not see the sharp look Nancy gave him. "Do you know her?" she asked. "What's your name?"

Soldiers Wear Field Jackets For First Time

Manila, April 28 (AP)—United States troops inched forward Friday on three major Philippine fronts—Baguio, Balete and central Luzon—and raced ahead against little opposition in a fourth sector, the approaches to Davao, on Mindanao Island.

They smashed forward slightly against the continuing strong resistance of the Japanese from central Luzon on the Cagayan Valley on the northern end of the island.

The better part of two divisions of doughboys in the glow fight for the liberation of two central Luzon provinces from the Japanese drave in water supply. The Japanese have been holding the dam area since the fall of Manila.

American assault forces which made a landing on the west coast Island Thursday began a mop up of the enemy around the city of Dumaguete.

Moscow Observes Link-up of Armies In Gaudy Manner

Moscow, April 28 — (AP)—Joyous Moscow hailed the meeting of the Russian and American armies with one of the gaudiest celebrations in its history last night.

Great guns thundered in the streets, gunners fired rockets from the revolving turrets of tank mounts in the hotels and restaurants, and by order of Premier Stalin 324 guns fired an earth-shaking, 24-volley salute.

Muscovites heard the news over public loudspeakers in the streets.

At 7.35, Marshal Stalin broadcast his address to the armies. Then Moscow heard the historic announcement of Prime Minister Churchill, who spoke in English. Next there was a broadcast translation of President Truman's speech.

Goose Bay Sends Planes to Pacific Newfoundland Keeps Vital War Role

Although Mr. Churchill has pronounced the job of heavy bomber nearly done in Europe, it is definitely known that Fortresses and Liberators will roar through Newfoundland's great Goose and Gander airbases to the Pacific until the Japanese are beaten. In view of the newly photographed Goose Bay airbase shown above is from a scene in "Atlantic Crossroads," relates the dramatic story of Newfoundland's war past and present, and is a tribute to the island's gallant people. The film shows how Newfoundland preserved Canada's maritime safety and in a survey of the country's post-war industry, reveals how Canada, as Newfoundland's closest neighbor, has co-operate with her in times of peace.

Newfoundland will remain the world-spotlight for some time to come. Until Japan is conquered Fortresses and Liberators will sweep from the runways of her strategic airfield at Goose Bay, in Labrador, and Gander, on the island itself, to the Pacific. With talk of recession in the air, the post-war commercial use of Newfoundland bases is the subject of considerable speculation. Finally, the future of Newfoundland itself—a small country facing a big economic problem — may prove a test case for Federation of Democracies.

The Canada Carries On production of the National Film Board near headline screen news for Canadians in Newfoundland. They present camerawork by plane over the country to shoot "Atlantic Crossroads," a full length feature-length which describes her achievement in policing the islands and ferrying bombers to Europe, and gives a photographic picture of the country's industry, revealing what it has to offer commercially to Canada and the United Nations.

The war news in "Atlantic Crossroads" appears in scenes of the ranger photographed Goose and Gander airbases and section pictures of submarine warfare which sends was heard but Mole seen by hometown Canadians in the early, dark days of the "Battle of the Atlantic." Special war interest is accompanied by showing the naval importance of St. John's. Newfoundland's capital city has become a naval base of great importance to Great Britain as Gibraltar and of as much strategic value to the United States as Hawaii.

"Atlantic Crossroads" contains post-war news in its screen survey of the traditional Newfoundland seafaring industry. Canadians, who eat comparatively little fish and may eat more if meat shortages are prolonged after the war, will be interested to see weathermen "fleets" of salmon and herring catching schooners. They will learn that plans are afoot to build numerous quickfreeze plants to speed the shipment of fish to foreign markets.

Scenes of the Belle Island iron mines, financed by Canadian capital, of the Buchan copper mine, of sealing and shipbuilding, one of which supplies newsprint for the paper "London Times," complete the review of Newfoundland's industry.

Newfoundland's gallant part in the war, her sturdy people pleasing for tomorrow, shown on the screen in close-up and panorama, make "Atlantic Crossroads" a challenging and informative film to Canadians.

Crowds gathered at the Porte d'Arlier railway station cried "death to Petain" and "down with Petain" as the Marshal's train passed slowly through on the way to Paris, the broadcast said. His train crossed the border Thursday from Switzerland.

The radio also transmitted an order by Gen. Clark, 15th Army Group commander, directing the Partisans to maintain order and "avoid indiscriminate acts of violence." Clark was quoted as saying "several days probably will elapse before Allied troops reach liberated zones."

GARAND RIFLE HAILED WAR'S NO. 1 WEAPON

Lt.-Gen. Charlton Says Canadian-Born Inventor's Rifle Greatest Battle Implement Ever Devised

Washington, April 26 — (CP) — One would expect Lt.-Gen. Patton, famed for his swift armored operations in command of the U.-S. Army, to consider tanks the most important weapon in action on the Western Front.

But Patton recently told U. S. Ordnance Chief, MAJ.-Gen. Levin Campbell: "In my opinion, the M1 (Garand) rifle is the greatest battle implement ever devised."

That's the comments of many military men regarding the "United States Rifle, .30 Caliber, M1," which is the standard shoulder weapon for all the "U. S. Army in 1936 after its inventor had labored 16 years on its perfection.

The inventor, modest, 56-year-old John C. Garand, was born at St. Remi, a village near Montreal. For some years he has been a United States citizen, and now is engaged as chief engineer at the Springfield, Mass., government arsenal.

Characteristic of shaggy-haired Mr. Garand is the way in which he has given over full domestic and foreign rights to his invention to his adopted country. He holds a civilian post which returns him a salary of something less than $10,000 a year, while the U. S. Government retains the patent on his life's work, and hence is saved some millions of dollars annually in royalty fees.

The fame which he shuns came late to Mr. Garand. When his mother died, John, one of 12 children, went with his father to Jewett City, Conn., where father and children found employment in local textile mills. The Garand boys became rifle enthusiasts as members of a small shooting club, and soon became expert marksmen.

An Inventive Mind.

John's inventive turn of mind turned first to mill devices and then motor-cycle engines, though little profit accrued from either. Then he developed a new type of machine-gun, and although it was tested immediately accepted by the U. S. Army, ordnance experts saw his value as an advanced gunsmith and gave him a job at the Springfield armory, where, in various capacities, he has since remained. Then came acceptance of his rifle — after nearly two decades of work.

After years of experimentation, the first working model of the Garand rifle—which was to replace in the hands of the U. S. soldiers the old 1903 Springfield — was assembled in 1933. Its principle was similar to that of the colt automatic pistol invented in 1896 by J. M. Browning, but Mr. Garand was the first to employ the principle effectively in a service rifle.

In effect, the new rifle works thus: gas generated by the explosive powder in the weapon's barrel is used not only to send the fired bullet toward its mark but also to eject the used cartridge case and push another cartridge into place in the firing-chamber. The gun therefore is semi-automatic, requiring merely a squeeze of the trigger between shots, instead of additional bolt-manipulation. Firing its bullets from eight cartridge clips, the Garand theoretically can get away considerably more than 100 rounds a minute. In practice a moderately - trained infantryman can fire 30 well-aimed shots a minute. The Garand has 73 parts, 35 fewer than the Springfield it replaced, and its recoil is considerably lighter.

Just what improvements the Inventor has made in his rifle since it was accepted is something the enemy must find out for himself—and lethal experience.

And self-effacing Mr. Garand—who has been described as the Canadian doing more than any other one man to win the war—works on at Springfield.

LEAVES $250,000 TO YOUNG COUSIN

Stevenage, England, April 26 (CP) — Thirteen-year-old Hannah Fryer of this Hertfordshire town hardly knew her elderly cousin, Miss Cotton Browne, but when Miss Browne died the schoolgirl was richer by $250,000.

Miss Browne, well known as being fond of children, left the bulk of her estate to the girl after stipulating that $4.50 should be paid to each of the 370 refugee children seeking shelter from bomb-danger-zone London in her parish.

Canucks Popular With Mahrattas

Regina, April 26 — (CP) — To Mahratta Indians of this war there will be tales of men from a distant cold land called Canada, where they ski, manage vicious like otters, Ontario and Saskatchewan and, for the Mahrattas, do dead with.

The foretaste of these stories is in a newspaper called "Sandesh" printed in the Mahratta language for 3,000 Indian troops serving there. An article from this paper, translated by Sgt. F. H. Preston of Regina who spent seven months in Italy instructing a Mahratta battalion.

Sandesh noted that Sgt. Preston had gone to the Mahrattas to instruct in mortars with two companies, Lt. C. J. C. Wilson of Colne and Sgt. J. W. Pollock of Melfort, Sask., stayed for six months and when the time came to leave, fell at their feet "leaving their home and relations."

The common language, indifferently spoken by both sides, was Italian. The Canadians picked up some Indian words and were able to make the Indians understand in Urdu. The Indians gathered some English phrases and the instruction went swimmingly.

The Canadians used to take their meals at an English mess but gradually they changed to eating with the Indians, whose cook eagerly learned to make Canadian dishes. Mahrattas went with their instructors on visits to Canadian units.

Said Sandhe of the Canadians:

"They are paid on the Canadian system, but being away from their unit, receive their mail very late. In spite of this, they are quite happy and satisfied in this new mode of living.

"If ever again they are attached to the Indians, their foremost wish is to rejoin the Mahratta battalion and it is the wish of both parties that they may receive permission to wear the Mahrattas' signs and badges."

Kesselring's Private Train Taken at Cham

With the U.S. 3rd. Army in Austria, April 26 (Delayed) (AP) — Field Marshal Kesselring's private train has been captured in Cham near the Czechoslovak frontier and the commander of South Germany and reported today in virtually-surrounded Regensburg, under guns of the 3rd. Army.

The officer in charge of the 18-car train said it was en route to Regensburg to bring out Kesselring. He said he was not certain whether the field marshal still was there.

The Americans captured 80 Messerschmitts on the big airport at Cham. While they were mopping up the field, three more planes landed and the surrendering pilots said they were out of gasoline.

During the 11th. Armored Division's spectacular dash into Austria, the Americans saw more grim evidence of German atrocities. Ditches lining the road along one stretch were filled with grotesque, emaciated bodies of prisoners who had collapsed and been shot in a march from the Flossenburg concentration camp toward Munich. The correspondent counted 100 bodies clad in prison stripes within half a mile of a roadway winding up a mountainside.

Americans Run Weirdest And Most Exclusive Ferry

By WES GALLAGHER

Arneburg, Germany, April 27 (AP) — The western front stalemated along the Elbe in this sector yesterday, with American boats running the world's weirdest and most exclusive ferry up and down the "front lines" picking and choosing from among the prisoners they wanted to take from the opposite bank.

First choice of the ferry service went to escaped American prisoners of war, second choice to British and third to French, Belgian and Netherlands escapers. Last place went to the German soldiers who were lined up patiently trying to get across the Elbe to an American prison camp.

No German below the rank of a captain had a chance to climb aboard the tiny motor launch S. S. Arneburg, which flew the red flag in case Russians should appear unexpectedly.

A German girl swam across the river by slacks but was sent back at the launch to await the 2nd Army's arrival. She asked for a gun to kill herself.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They have nagging backache and never ease. Often they blame it on rheumatism. But it may be faulty kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are failing to do their work as nature intended, poisons may remain to cause backache, headache and dizziness. If you don't get rest, try Doan's Pills. Doan's are for kidneys only. Used the world over for half a century. Ask your neighbor!

NEW SURRENDER OFFER REPORTED "ON ITS WAY" ITALIAN CAMPAIGN NEAR END SAYS GEN. CLARK

25 Enemy Divisions Torn to Pieces In 22-day Offensive

Milan, Venice and Genoa Captured by Allied Troops

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Rome, April 30 — (AP) — Gen. Mark Clark, Allied Army Group commander, today announced the virtual end of the long and bloody campaign in Italy.

Declaring that the German army in its Italy have "been virtually eliminated as a military force," he said 25 enemy divisions have been torn to pieces in the 22-day offensive of the Allied 5th and British 8th armies.

He said the Germans "can no longer effectively resist our armies," but added that scattered fighting may continue.

Gen. Clark said more than 190,000 prisoners had been captured and that many more were being taken along with tremendous quantities of arms and equipment. The Allied offensive began April 9.

Practically Ceased

"The military power of Germany in Italy has practically ceased even though scattered fighting may continue as enemies seek to escape," armies are mopped up," the 15th Army Group commander said.

During the last three weeks 5th Army troops have slashed their way to the Swiss border and the 8th Army has pushed "if not already crossed, the Piave river and is approaching a junction with the Tagliamento river."

Three of Northern Italy's greatest cities, Milan, Venice and Genoa, were in Allied hands as the 5th and 8th armies closed on them on several fronts in a continuing roar of the Germans.

Starting in 1942.

With Gen. Clark's statement the bitter campaign, unique in history, was brought almost to its conclusion. Never before had an army succeeded in driving through the difficult mountain terrain of Italy from the south to the north of the campaign started in September, 1943, with landings in Calabria and at Salerno.

The 5th and Allied while other American troops dashed to the important port of Genoa. Liberated two days earlier by Italian patriots, British troops captured historic Venice.

(A Belgrade broadcast recorded by the Soviet Communication Commission said Yugoslav Partisan troops had entered the port of Trieste.)

An Allied communique today said the German army in Italy was "completely north of Lake Garda, near the Brenner Pass, but said the enemy lines were disorganized.

The thrust in northern Italy swept ahead so rapidly that it was difficult to maintain communications.

Numbers Range Roads

Allied night bombers ranged the roads in the area of Lake Garda and Lake Como, the latter a mountain forces which have taken refuge in the foothills of the Alps. Vehicles and personnel were also attacked.

South of Venice, the town of Chioggia was taken and the German garrison there encountered by the body. Another battalion surrendered en masse west of the Venetian Lagoon.

The important industrial port of Mestre on the mainland opposite Venice also was in Allied hands.

Fifty reported some miles south of road to the Austrian border, black with the smoking hulks of German transport.

Close to Revolution

There was little doubt that the two German armies which Allied troops held in Italy for so long were close to final dissolution.

The 8th Army, after capturing Venice, turned its forces to the left and, ancient 17 miles eastward to the Piave River, in the mouth of which only 10 miles from the Yugoslav border.

From the river, the 8th was in position to round the head of the Adriatic Sea on a 75-mile highway to Trieste.

Allied headquarters announced that negotiations were in progress for the surrender of the Fascist Ligurian Army of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who capture was officially disclosed yesterday.

MUSSOLINI, 17 FASCISTS SLAIN BY PATRIOTS

Spat Upon and Cursed as They Hung by Heels in Milan Square

By GEORGE FALMER

Milan, April 30 (AP)—Spat upon and cursed, the body of Benito Mussolini was on display in the ceneyeful wrath of the Italian people for whom he had promised a place in the sun, but whom he had led instead to defeat and misery.

The former dictator's mistress, Claretta Petacci, and 17 Fascist leaders were shot to death by Italian Patriots at Gullano De Mezzegrra, near Como, Saturday.

Later, prisoner was Mussolini's war minister, Rudolfo Graziani. Mussolini and his followers were attempting to flee to Switzerland, Graziani declared. He sought to give himself up.

There was no formal trial, and after the executions at 4:10 pm. the bodies were piled into a truck and brought to Milan for public exhibition.

Hung by Heels.

Yesterday the corpse of the 61-year-old former dictator was hung by the heels in the Piazo Quindici Martiri in Milan. By his side was the body of his mistress.

Around their necks and breast, Fascists had strung placards which bore the bodies of five other Fascist leaders.

Thousands of Milanese gathered and shoved against the Partisans guarding the bodies. Some succeeded in breaking through and spitting upon Il Duce's body. Others struck with the clip of his automatic pistol futs the lifeless form. Another punched the once-chosen leader.

Shot Through Head.

Mussolini's was shot through the head by the Partisans after he was captured Friday by a sergeant approaching the Swiss border. His and his fellow Fascist leaders were fleeing in a truck convoy.

Mussolini was garbed in a civilian overcoat, coat and was driving north when the sergeant spotted 60,000 Mussolini aid.

He spent Friday night in a cell at San Domingo prison in Como. He was reported in a state of great agitation, and made attempts to bribe up guards.

"Why is no one here to defend me?" he was quoted as saying.

Later he is reported to have told the men who ordered him shot, "Save my life and I will give you anything."

He died shouting "No! No!" to the firing squad, which witnesses recorded. The bullet that killed him entered his left cheek in the manner prescribed by Italian tradition for dishonored persons.

Reds Do Not Molest Civilians When German Towns Taken Says Spokesman

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

Turgau, Germany, April 29 (C.P. Cable) — This was a Red Army day behind the United States 1st. Army. Vodka and cheers from civilians were reluctantly petering out as Russian soldiers moved in, and those who spilled over into the American lines still were the centre of interest.

Curious doughboys and a horde of correspondents were busy seeking the answers to the 864 question which ranged from international affairs to guns and rations. The Russians were collecting with some answers but there is still plenty of mystery about the Red Army.

You drive through wrecked Turgau, where American police have you on with the information: "Two blocks to the Russian front," and you find a startling Soviet troops—a couple of platoons of grinning infantrymen on the west bank of the Elbe where the bridge was. Only two armies was made last Wednesday.

The Russians will talk for hours but they don't tell you how you were or what you have learned.

Marshal Konev's 1st. Ukrainian Army men, however, are particularly anxious to explain how good their artillery is.

"It's the queen of the army," said sturdy Private Prikop of Odessa, who wears the silver medal for gallantry on his khaki battle smock.

FALL OF CAPITAL IMMINENT SAYS MOSCOW REPORT

Russian Tanks Smash Into Tiergarten, Berlin's Central Park And Under Den Linden

London, April 30 (CP)—The German-controlled Oslo radio today said Russian tanks have smashed into the Tiergarten, Berlin's central park converted into an underground fortress, and that the honour guards at the fall of the capital was imminent.

The newspaper Pravda said the Russians were fighting in the ruins of Unter Den Linden, the spacious avenue in the heart of Berlin that connects with the Tiergarten.

The Hamburg radio, chief Nazi transmitter still broadcasting in Germany, announced Hamburg had hard battle for Berlin reached its climax.

Moscow dispatches said Marshals Gregory Zhukov and Ivan S. Konev, commanding Red armies at Berlin, were going all-out for a May victory and had thrown in maximum artillery and air power to the battle for the capital's defences in the centre of the city.

The Soviet dispatches from Berlin said the Nazis were hemmed in a pocket that was made roughly of the Tiergarten, the Reichstag district just to its north, the Wilhelmstrasse government section just west and the crowded commercial districts centred on Unter Den Linden running east from the Tiergarten.

Wave of Suicides.

A wave of suicides and desertions prohibited the once-powerful capital's defenders and the Russians announced that 2,000 German garrison into a flame-swept 18-square mile pocket—all that remained to Germany's capital of 4,300 square miles.

In the latter beating beat of hundreds of fires, Russia's Stalingrad veterans clashed over piles of Nazi dead and waded through seas of shattered glass to within half a mile of Hitler's impregnable air and to the northern fringe of the Tiergarten, whence the enemy guns were directed the battle.

Their great Anhalter rail depot near the central Potsdamer Plas was captured, the district of Moabit (in the district of Wilmersdorf was seized up to Berliner Strasse and Berlin Spandau Canal. Another of German soldiers captured—making a total of more than 4,000.

"The situation in Berlin has again deteriorated," the Germans radio admitted, "and tonight the city is under more than a heap of rubble." Captured 4,000 Prisoners.

Southeast of the city, the Red Army finished liquidating the encircled enemy group, capturing 40,000 Moscow said.

Signs at Headquarters Hostilities' End Likely Only Matter of Days

By AUSTEN DEALMEAR

Paris, April 30 — (AP)—The U.S. 9th Army established contact today with Russian forces west of cities Berlin, widening the corridor between the shrinking northern and southern enemy pockets to 30 miles.

Five divisions of the U. S. 9th Army, probably 70,000 men in all, were engaged in a stiff battle in the fringes of Berlin.

The enemy resisted with a curtain of steel, hurled from batteries of anti-aircraft guns, levelled as field artillery.

The 9th Army met the Russians south of Magdeburg. The U. S. 1st Army previously had linked up with Marshal Stalin's forces to Torgau and Reisa on the Elbe to the Leipzig-Dresden area to the southeast, headquarters at Allied Supreme Headquarters announced tonight.

In Europe would last—at most—only a matter of days. Big-hunking Nazi survivors were reported seeking peace with the Western Allies drove swiftly into the south-central part of Germany, Austria, advancing almost 40 will in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, one of the last remaining German mouthpieces, Admiral Doenitz, reported approaching Linz on the Danube from the west and that Russian forces in Vienna, Budabin was driving on that city of 131,000 from the east. The armies established radio contact last week but have been operating under partial security blackout. Linz a favorite haunt of Hitler, is on the last route from Czechoslovakia and lie heavy industries into the redoubt.

Berlin Almost Captured.

Berlin was almost entirely in Russian hands, Hamburg was menaced greatly by a British 2nd Army thrust 15 miles into the 30 miles southeast of that second largest German city. The Russians closed toward Lubeck, 15 miles with the Western Allies. Field Marshal Alexander's armies in Italy were turning the German retreat in the Brenner Pass region of European defenses into a rout at positions 136 miles across the Alps from Gen. Eisenhower's armies.

Mussolini was dead; his turn was reviled in captured Milan, largest city in Italy.

The U. S. 2nd Army swung across the Iser river and beat toward Salzburg and Berchtesgaden.

Near Munich, the Army captured the notorious Dachau concentration camp, the extermination factory established by the Nazis, and freed 32,000 captives. Another camp was captured at Landsberg and 27,000 Allied prisoners were set free.

Accelerated Pace.

Gen. Eisenhower of the last of Germany's armed forces continued at an accelerated pace. On Saturday, the Allies of the West captured 1,291,798 prisoners, a total of 1,291,798 and an aggregate since D-Day of 4,281,661.

More than 136,000 German soldiers have surrendered in the last week to the Allies in Italy and the French troops under General Eisenhower's command.

CANUCKS MENACE PORT OF EMDEN IN NEW ADVANCE

Bridgehead Across Leda and Ems River at Leer Expanding Steadily

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With the 1st Canadian Army, April 30—(CP Cable)—Some fighting continued in the port of Leer, but the Canadian bridgehead there across the Leda and Ems River was well-held and expanding steadily.

The enemy's defensive line stretching from Enoden-Wilhelmshaven Peninsula between the Ems and Weser Rivers was authoritatively considered to have been turned at the point of its right flank.

The Canadians have sgvanced north and east of Leer, about 12 miles southeast of Emden, and on large-scale counter-attack has developed there yet.

Key objectives, once Gen. Crerar forces have established a firm bridgehead, will be Emden, Aurich and Wilhelmshaven.

Could Split Hulls.

Speedy seizure of Aurich, 13 miles northeast of Emden and 12 miles west of Wilhelmshaven, would split German defences from the Weser and land Peninsula and make it posible to destroy them sectionally.

Polish armor — clearing the area between its Kusten Canal bridgehead immediately east of the West River and the 4th Canadian Armoured Division's Kusten bridgehead —reached Leer from the east the Elisabethfehn canal, a six-mile water-course, linking the Kusten with the Leda River to the north.

The 4th Canadian armoured was closing in on Red Zwischenahn, nine miles east of Oldenburg, and was engaged in heavy fighting. Another 4th has cut the railway running west from Oldenburg at two points. The enemy has committed armor and 88-calibre anti-tank guns in the defence of this sector and several sharp clashes have been reported.

Compression Aid.

Still farther eastward, the 2nd. Canadian Corps was compressing Indis arc about Oldenburg, with infantry supported by more than half a mile all along their line.

The Canadians also were developing a large thrust north of the Delmenhorst - Oldenburg railway apparently aimed northwest toward Vegesack, on the Weser River halfway between Bremen and Kuflieh. Overnight these forces occupied the villags of Neuenlande.

2 MORE PROBLEMS BESET DELEGATES AT CONFERENCE

Russia Has Consistently Opposed Entry of Argentine Into United Nations

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

San Francisco, April 30—(CP)—Two more problems had arisen today to beset delegates to the United Nations Security Conference, they were: Russia's demand for recognition of the Lublin-Warsaw Polish government and the proposed admission of Argentina to the United Nations.

Russia has consistently opposed the entry of Argentine but there appeared little hope that she would swallow these objections if the Lublin group was recognized as suitable for membership in the conference there.

The expectation here is that there will be no departure from the Atlantic Charter declaration that no Polish government not organized in the spirit of the Yalta Declaration, which called for the reconstruction of national unity, including democratic leaders from emigre element in London. Britain and the United States already recognize the Moscow-sponsored Lublin group.

If a solution has been reached at informal conference of the foreign ministers of the "Big Four" some time today it will be at the meeting's session of the executive committee of 14, with their decision referred to the plenary session this afternoon for ratification.

Meeting May Reopen

Another report circulating here is that a proposal will be made formally by Canada, that the present conference seeks only to erect a framework of an international organization for the maintenance of peace and security.

The details could be written in later by a technical subcommittee commission which might labor six months or a year and make its findings the basis of a second assembly of the organization.

Such a procedure would tend to avoid the possibility of hasty decisions made by a conference working under the pressure of historic events in Europe, which must distract the attention of many of the top-ranking delegates here.

There are numerous aspects of world organization which must be fitted into this set-up, such as the British Commonwealth of nations, the food and agriculture organization

RUMORS OF PEACE ON SATURDAY PROVE UNFOUNDED

False Alarm Starts Peace Celebrations In Many Parts of the World

(By The Associated Press)

Reports that Heinrich Himmler, apparently acting as Hitler's successor from Russian hands, had offered to surrender unconditionally to the United States and Britain, raised hopes for peace while they swept the world during the weekend.

The Himmler reports, published in both Britain and the United States, said the Gestapo chief had asked unconditional surrender because Hitler was dying and had made his bid through a Stockholm private citizen. Prime Minister Churchill took cognizance of the report by issuing a special statement declaring that no surrender offer from Himmler or anyone else made jointly to Britain, the United States and Russia.

Following publication of these developments in the United States, Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, and vice-chairman of the American World Security Conference delegation in San Francisco, authorized the statement Saturday night that Germany had surrendered and that he expected a formal announcement momentarily.

Hopes stirred by the Connally statement were blasted a short time later when President Truman in Washington and Gen. Dwight D. Gen. Eisenhower at Allied Supreme Headquarters in Paris declared reports of a German surrender unfounded.

The sequence of events late Saturday leading up to the peace reports and the denial is as follows:

Checked with Eisenhower

The president said he had checked the report with Gen. Eisenhower in Paris and from the generals headquarters direct came Eisenhower's statement at 10 p. m. that he had received no information of a German surrender.

Five minutes later, informed of the Truman statement, Sen. Connally permitted himself to say that the word of the surrender report in San Francisco. He reiterated he expected an announcement momentarily" and added that his information was from an authoritative source.

In Moscow broadcast relayed through London, at 11:30 p.m. the official Russian news agency, Tass, confirmed that Heinrich Himmler had made a surrender offer to the United States and Britain and that the Anglo-western Allies had turned it down because Russia was not included.

Moscow broadcast at 11:43 a.m. that the Swedish Foreign Office disclosed that Himmler's offer was made through a Stockholm private citizen and the newspaper, Dagens Nyheter, identified this person as Count Folke Bernadotte, Vice-Chairman of Sweden's Red Cross, who had made many "mercy trips" to Germany.

RUMORS—Page 14)

British Cabinet Ministers Ready For Developments

London Expects V-E Day Announcement at An Hour

London, April 30 — (AP) — A new surrender offer from Heinrich Himmler, presumably to all three major powers, was understood to be "on its way" today.

Cabinet ministers who ordered no stand by as swiftly-moving developments pointed to Germany's collapse.

This capital was outwardly calm, even though a V-E Day announcement was expected at any hour. There was more ministerial activity in Whitehall than there had been in some time.

There were indications that only details of Germany's surrender remained to be worked out. There was concern whether Himmler or any other ranking Nazi leader could give valid evidence that German pockets on the Atlantic coast and in Norway would lay down their arms.

It was possible that uncertainty over the temper of commanders such as Col.-Gen. George Lindeman in Norway, was holding up an agreement on details.

Much Speculation

The Press Association said "there is no longer any doubt that armistice moves are in progress and moving swiftly."

Speculation centred around the possibility that May Day might be chosen for a victory announcement.

It was felt here, however, that before this event comes Premier Stalin may announce the capture of Berlin — that the Russians are determined to claim this prize before the Nazis will be allowed to give up.

This may take a few days, since Moscow is always cautious in announcing the capture of any major city.

Many people saw significance in the two reports that Prime Minister Churchill may make a statement in the House of Commons tomorrow and the Russian announcement that the Moscow blackout will be lifted tonight.

London newspapers carried headlines saying: "Hitler dying; war may end today."

8TH VICTORY LOAN GOING ALONG AT GOOD PACE

First Week's Total Well Ahead of Last Loan at Same Period

Ottawa, April 30 (CP) — Canada's 8th Victory Loan drive for a minimum of $1,500,000 went into its second week today at a pace exceeding that of the Dominion's Seventh War Loan drive last fall.

Latest figures up to Sunday announced by National Finance Committee headquarters gave the national total as $432,008,000 compared with $428,884,350 for the first week of canvassing in the last campaign. The total sales Saturday touched $23,860,750, against $6,000,000 for the same day of the seventh loan drive.

The largest single purchaser during the weekend was the Sun Life Assurance Company with a $30,000,000 subscription. Other "special names" subscribers included Ontario Paper Co., Ltd., Thorold, to claim the prize before the Nazis collapse, Quebec North Shore Paper Co., $2,000,000, and Canada Packers, $2,000,000.

Individual Sales Higher

First week's tabulations in the 8th Victory Loan drive firm improvement too in individual sales, which have an objective of $675,000,000 half for sat dent of canvassing, more than $23,000,000 better than the pace of the individual cividen at the same stage of the drive last fall.

Large centres contributed to the gain, but the biggest climb was registered by Alberta, where the payroll and general canvass total reached $17,140,500, compared with $14,339,650 for the seventh loan. The Royal Canadian Navy produced the first atlantic command of any of the services to top its quota, returning $1,000,000, or 101 per cent.

The Navy's Pacific command did even better subscribing $439,800 for 130 per cent.

Fifty Boxcars Loaded with Bodies Found Inside of Dachau Prison Camp

By HOWARD COWAN

Dachau, Germany, April 30. (AP) —The U. S. 7th Army yesterday captured the infamous Dachau prison camp, where more than 32,000 captives.

Two columns of infantry riding tanks, bulldozers and long iron prongs, rolled in with smoke-rolled in from the northwest and northsprized the S.S. Guards in the extermination camp without a shot or bunch hour.

Fifty of the S.S. men were taken, prisoner and dossea slain.

The American troops, assisted only by "trusties" working outside the prison, found and released the survivors. Poles, Frenchmen and Russians clutched S.S. weapons and turned them against their captors.

Officials said the Nazis recently moved several distinguished inmates, including Marshal Stalin's son, Jacob Dzhugashvili, captured by the Russian front in 1941; former Premier Charles Reynaud, his wife and his wife, and the German anti-Nazi Protestant leader, Pastor Martin Niemoeller.

The fate of prisoners remaining claimed to be the son of Leon Blum.

Fifty boxcars loaded with bodies were found inside the camps, some with gas chambers and torture rooms.

Prisoners who said they had had access to the records and inner workings of the camp said 9,000 internees died of hunger or disease in the first three months of 1945 alone, months and that 14,000 more had died in the last 12 months.

Typhus cases were scattered throughout the camp. The water supply of the city was reported contaminated from 6,000 graves on high ground, which drains into the Amper River.

Not a dozen's throw from a train-loaded of corpses lay the bleeding bodies of 16 S.S. men shot down as they fled the tommy-gunning

PARKED MOTORCYCLE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Considerable damage to a parked motorcycle in front of the local Canadian Department Store on Front Street was caused Saturday afternoon when presumably as the result of a carelessly dropped cigarette butt the vehicle suddenly blazed up. The cycle was owned by an airman stationed at the Trenton Air Station, it was reported by firemen who answered the alarm.

SGT. GERALD O'BRIEN ONE-MAN FIRE SQUAD

Sergeant Gerald "Warpy" O'Brien, former member of the Belleville Fire Department, who has been with the Royal Canadian Air Force fire prevention squad for the past four years, found his training a handy thing on Saturday afternoon.

For "Warpy" who is spending a furlough at home became a one-man fire department when a RCAF motorcycle suddenly burst into flames as it coasted Front Street.

As the flames licked about the machine, and a sailing crowd lined the pavement watching the afternoon promenading, "Warpy" dashed into a nearby store, secured a fire extinguisher, and soon had the contents of the machine playing on the burning machine.

There was little for the City Fire Department to do a minute or two later, as "Warpy's" one-man method in extinguishing the blaze.

NOT MAN WANTED

Police officials at Perth asked police throughout Eastern Ontario to be on the lookout for a red-headed, short, stocky man wanted in that community on a charge of indecent assault. Late Saturday night C.N.R. special police observed a man alighting from a west-bound freight train and placed him under arrest before turning the man over to the O.P.P. He gave his name as Frederick Booth, 47, a Toronto painter. Held on a nominal charge of vagrancy, O.P.P. officials here today state Booth was not the person wanted in Perth, but he would be charged with trespassing on railway property.

GRIST MILL ENTERED

Believed to be the work of juveniles, some person broke and entered the Shannonville grist mill at Shannonville over the weekend, but nothing of value is reported to have been taken. The break-in was reported by Harry Mumby, proprietor of the grist mill, who placed his complaint in the hands of the Provincial Police. Investigations revealed entrance was made through a window, and that the intruders ransacked the building from within.

He was recently awarded the distinguished Flying Cross for his work as a fighting intruder pilot and soon expects his discharge from the R.C.A.F. Prior to his enlistment he worked at Valley at the local Bank of Montreal.

ARTICLES TAKEN FROM PARKED CAR

Thought by police to have been the work of a young juvenile and a Red Cross parcel of yarn owned by two Foxboro women, were taken from a car parked near the footbridge gasoline station during Saturday afternoon. Upon returning to their car the two women discovered their parcels missing and immediately advised police who early in the evening found the parcels near a building immediately to the north of the lower bridge. All groceries were recovered with the exception of a couple of oranges and other edibles, and a thermos flask was left with the parcels.

MARMORA

Wife and Two Children Safe in Bratislava

Marmora, April 30. — Ferdinand Pasek and employee of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited in this community, for years, has just received word from his daughter in the United States, that his wife and two children are alive and well at his native village in the province of Bratislava, Czechoslovakia. This is the first news which has reached him of the members of his family in Czechoslovakia for over six years and was received by him from New Jersey, through the services of the Red Cross. Mr. Pasek has two daughters in the United States and a son who enlisted in the United States Army, but was killed in Italy last November and has been in the hospital ever since.

37 Sworn in Special Officers For V-E Day

Thirty-seven members of reserve army units here were sworn in as special constables to augment the regular Belleville Police Force if and when V-E-Day arrives on Saturday night. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnap, Chief Walter Probert and Police Inspector Hayes.

The reserve armyists, it is pointed out by the crown attorney's department are not to be taken to military police by the general public. They are to be used only as special constables. In the near future they will be issued special arm bands with the word 'police' imposed in the white letters.

The action of calling the reservists for special duty followed quickly on the heels of the rumor, later proved false, on Saturday evening, that the Germans had surrendered unconditionally to the Allied Armies.

Chief Walter Probert today requested all residents of the city who own automobiles and are in the habit of driving them downtown, to leave their cars at home or in a secluded parking space when V-E Day arrives.

"This will facilitate to a great extent the work of the police and will assist in minimizing any traffic congestion which may occur".

Members of the police department "stood to" on Saturday night after the receipt of the first report that the Germans had surrendered. Both the regular force and the newly deputized 'specials' waited orders for some time after the final news was received in case other important word came through. It is expected that additional members of the reserve army here will be deputized for the special police duty.

C.S. Rutherford Northumberland Liberal Candidate

Lieutenant Colonel Charles S. Rutherford, V.C., M.C., M.M., Colborne, former Progressive-Conservative of the Ontario Legislature, member of the Veterans' Guard of Canada and now staff officer at the Military Staff College at R.M.C., Kingston, was chosen as Liberal candidate for the Federal riding of Northumberland at a convention held at Warkworth on Friday night. William A. Fraser, Trenton, who represented the riding in the last three parliaments, was forced to withdraw through pressure of business.

The candidate chosen at the convention has resided in Colborne practically all his life, enlisting as a private in the 21st Grand Trunk War with the 5th C.M.R. and won the coveted award of the Victoria Cross on August 26th, 1916. When the Second Great War broke out he again offered his services and joined the Veterans' Guard of Canada and was sent to Jamaica where he remained until being brought back for duty at the Staff College. Hon. James A. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, was the principal speaker at the convention and promised farmers a floor price for their products if the King government was returned to power at the election on June 11th. Chas. Quinn Nominated.

At the same convention Charles Quinn, Castleman-former Reeve of Cramahe Township and at present President of the County Federation of Agriculture was chosen Liberal candidate for the provincial riding of Northumberland in the election to be held on June 4th.

Neighbors Assist In Planting Farm When Owner Ill

True rural community spirit and the desire of farmers to assist a neighbor in distress was demonstrated completely demonstrated than in the Stirling district during Spring when neighbors turned out to complete the planting when illness overtook one who was confined to hospital.

Early in the morning Mr. Lorne Gunning, R.R. 4, Stirling, resident of the Stirling-Campbellford road district was forced to enter the Belleville Hospital where he was confined for one week prior to undergoing a serious operation.

Mr. Gunning was forced to divide her time between the hospital and home and there were no other members of the family to see to the planting. But the chores and seeding operations did not suffer.

When fields on the Gunning farm were ready for cultivation eight neighbors with tractors turned out to prepare the land, while five others with seed drills followed to do seeding operations. All fields on the farm planned for cultivation this Spring were sowed in the one day, it is reported.

H.J. Sheridan, C.N.R. Engineer, On Retired List

Although he wore the broad smile that all railway men know him by, there was sadness in his heart when thirty - six - year - veteran Sheridan climbed down off the Canadian National Railway engine for the last time Sunday evening, after 43 years of service.

"Hank" Sheridan has railroaded with the old Grand Trunk and more recently with the Canadian National and of this period he had been a classed engineer for nearly 36 years.

Kindly-eyed, and a bit gruff, the engine hauling crack No. 15, the Montreal-Chicago flyer, into the Belleville C.N.R. station, Mr. Sheridan climbed down off the mammoth "steel horse" to be welcomed by fellow employees as he made his final trip on this schedule. Today Engineer Sheridan is retired from railway service having entered the superannuated list.

Entered Service in 1901.

He entered the service of the old Grand Trunk on Dec. 10th, 1900, and for nearly 44 years has the type engines by hand to learn his first job. Starting as a fireman on a classed engineer on Nov. 1924, he left and has been driving the main lines of the C.N.R. ever since. "Hank" Sheridan has seen drastic changes introduced in the modern railway operations as the tall gentle ex-engineer climbed from steam locomotives in his first year of railroading, followed by steady advancement until yesterday he guided into Belleville a modern streamline, train capable of rolling over the steel rails at well over the 100 miles an hour speed. But presently at 7.31 p.m. when he brought the big 15 to a stop, Engineer Sheridan, climbed down from his engine, and gazed longingly at the big machine before turning and walking away realizing he would "never pull the throttle" again.

Sons Serve Overseas.

Happily married Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan have four children, two sons and two daughters. Both sons have served with the R.C.A.F., Flt. Lt. Sheridan, D.F.C., having recently returned from overseas after winning high honors during his 18 months flying tour of Germany. Sergt. John J. Sheridan, the other son, was recently honorably discharged from the R.C.A.F. after serving three years in the service. Mrs. Allan Shoniker, Trenton, is one older daughter, while the baby of the family is Miss Jerry at home. Mr. Sheridan will retire to his garden in which he has been working and "just enjoy myself," he said today at his residence, 226 Bleecker Avenue.

CANADIAN SCENE LOOKS GOOD TO WAR'S VETERANS

Men Back From Fighting Fronts Compare Peaceful Dominion With Destruction In Old World Lands

Winnipeg (CP) — Canadian hospitality stands high in the thoughts of Winnipeg veterans home on leave after five years of war. And to many, Canada seems little changed. From the time of disembarkation at New York until arrival in Winnipeg the welcome was "something to remember," as one veteran put it.

Major Leonard De Pencier, who went overseas in 1939 with the 19th Field Battery and is a veteran of Sicily and Italy, said the welcome the boys received was "fine." He found little difference with things in Canada since 1939, except that people appeared more prosperous. But Major De Pencier is anxious to return overseas to the Western Front preferably.

He said: "It's too darn lonely here without my friends, most of whom are overseas."

Canadian hospitality also impressed Sgt. A. H. Williams who served in Italy with the Strathcona Horse.

"It was wonderful," he said. He paid tribute to women's war services auxiliaries. "They are doing a wonderful work." He believed the five-year-men should be permitted to stay home.

"People in Canada, hardly know there is a war on, but that is the way we want it," said Gunner L. V. Bolduc. He explained: "We would not want our families to suffer like the people we have seen. It was good to see the children so well dressed and not barefoot in the snow like the kids in Italy."

Abundance of Food

The abundance of food in Canada was pleasing to Gunner Bourque. "That's something," he said. "We really go for it. The stores really looked good."

Five years had brought many modern improvements to Canada he found.

"It was something to see all the modern, nice new homes in Winnipeg. A contrast to the battered homes overseas."

Sgt. Ed. S. Boyes, back from Italy said he found it hard to settle down to the civilian way of life.

He doesn't find much difference in the every day doings of his friends and people he meets on the streets.

"The younger people have changed," he said, "but I don't see much change in the older people."

Lt.-Lt. C. J. Denman, a veteran of the R.C.H.A., from Italy, thought Canadians were doing their best in the war effort, but he couldn't see much change in the every day life of the people.

"I don't see much change," he said. "You wouldn't know there was a war on here."

Victory Upon Victory

"News of battle, news of battle,
Hark! 'tis ringing down the street
And the pathways and the pavement
Bear the clang of hurrying feet."

In some such words runs a song written in commemoration of the events of another time, but the mood is something of that of the present time with great news breaking every few hours of victories of Allied armies, and the discomfitures of the traitors against civilization, the Axis gang of Germany.

Saturday heard the news of a report that Himmler offered an agreement of unconditional surrender of Germany to the Western Allies but not to Russia and the statement of the British Prime Minister that there would be no terms accepted by the Allies but unconditional surrender of the enemy to all three great Allies, Britain, Russia and the United States. Then there was the unfounded report late Saturday that Germany had surrendered unconditionally, and its denial after a continent was greatly excited by the news. Over Sunday came news of Allied gains in East and West Europe, now brought together in one solid bond by the physical union of the two fronts in the junction of the Anglo-American forces and the Russians, of news of the Allied successes in Italy bringing Milan and Venice into Allied hands and of the plight of Munich, headquarters of the Nazi Germans.

The weekend news carried the story of the end of Italy's despicable enemy of liberty, Mussolini. This world had no place for such a foe of justice and betrayer of peace and liberty. He was the man who rose to note in 1923 as the first of the dictators who were to plunge the world into a second world conflict. He thought out the way of self-aggrandizement, joined to a bluster and love of pomp that made him the butt of mockery and scorn through his glorification of self. His dictatorship was typical of dictatorship and was full of corruption. He was a "sawdust Caesar" indeed. Now he has come to the end of his chosen course but the end was not of his choosing. At the time of the execution of his son-in-law, Ciano, it is said that he had photographs taken of the scene of execution to gloat his eyes upon.

The great Allied drive in Italy, timed to perfection, has swept forward, to add to the miseries of the falling European Axis. Germany is chained in, her soil traversed, bisected, chopped up by the marvellous strategy and power of the Allies on the three fronts, now really only two since the junction of last week.

There was a report Sunday that Goebbels has just witnessed the passing of Hitler, but the story, of course, was not confirmed.

Such a concentration of events is a symbol of the dying state of Germany and her military power and of the catastrophic disasters and confusion in which the aggressor groups and leaders find themselves.

Have the men of evil, Hitler, Mussolini and others of their kind in the Axis not defied justice, and had they been able to look forward as they have been forced by events of these days to look backwards over their criminal course, they could have seen what is being enacted today. Life has a way of destroying such egoists and haters of mankind, hungering for power and pomp, and feeding themselves on hate—like the sins they practised and actually represented, they are being rubbed out as awful examples of an evil end of lives of evil. In the great battle which has been fought for five and a half years and more, the hand of justice and destiny is seen disposing of these enemies of humanity. They are thrown to the void as worse than worthless, they are wiped out because they were evil and haters of life.

Hitler at Lowest Level

Less than six years have put Hitler down at the lowest level he has ever touched and a level beneath that of any other mass murderer and tyrant of history, a man the very conception of whom is so grotesque and hideous for he embodies those attitudes which can only come of evil and create evil. Six years have done it and these six years Hitler and Germany can never recall for in them they have done deeds that, but for the aspiring principles of democracy, liberty and justice, would have lowered the moral tone of the globe. But the greater the Hitler evil and menace the more powerful became the forces of justice—the highest tribute to the fact that a moral law directs life, let Hitler try to assassinate it as he would. Justice and right through the agency of free states and brave human souls have again triumphed over the forces of iniquity.

What every conqueror of history could have told Hitler and Germany had he and she consulted the records of the past two and a half thousand years of this world's history he ignored and scorned—that the tyrant survives but a short time, that wrongs will be righted and life move onward and upward as it has been moving for centuries despite the attempts of would-be conquerors. Life will move on, it never ceases. It is destroying Hitler because he made the greatest error any man could make in the political and moral spheres, he set out on the way of aggression and defied all moral law. Now the laws of men and the laws of Providence and Nature condemn him to a name of shame for all ages to come and cut off his career of evil.

Goering Mocked by Facts

How life mocks the transgressor! Goering, like so many other Nazis in 1939 could tell the Germans that no plane of another nation could fly over Germany. For years the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and United States Air Forces mocked him with the laughter of their bombs for Goering's Luftwaffe is practically no more. But life mocks Goering in more ways. He, the false and barbaric worshipper of art and luxury and lover of pomp is fled with his wife and twenty million dollars, report says. Whether he has fled is not confirmed but Goering, at least, according to the German radio, was relieved of his command of the Luftwaffe because he claimed to have heart trouble. For a man in the condition he claimed to have, to try to flee perhaps disguised, is a form of penalty to the frustrated heart of this No. 2 Nazi, once called heir of Hitler. Bitterly life can mock him for he is in very earnest one of the heirs of Hitler in misery and wretchedness and in death if the stories of his death be true.

Never in all the records of history has the triumph of right over wrong been more marked in war than in the present conflict now closing in Germany. Every man and woman of discernment can read these lessons taught in the crucible of the greatest of wars.

Fat Pickings

(Australian News Letter)

Several men employed at a poulterer's establishment in a suburb of Sydney are earning £30 a week each plucking fowls.

The men have to make the feathers literally fly to earn this money, and to show a greater degree of skill than is generally associated with fowl plucking.

One day recently, four men stripped 1,167 fowls of every feather.

"With the pressure on, all you want to do by the end of the week is just to lie down and die," said one. "But it's not bad pay. Even allowing for tax, it amounts to £18 a week."

Just to show what he could do, the proprietor of the establishment cleaned and trussed a fowl in 34 seconds — and then apologized for being "a bit out of touch."

Navajo Indians Put "Jinx" on Japs

This is another of the articles written by Ernie Pyle before he was killed in action on Ie Shima.

Okinawa, (By Navy Radio)—Back nearly two years ago when I was with Oklahoma's 45th Division in Sicily and later in Italy, I learned they had a number of Navajo Indians in communications.

When secret orders had to be given over the phone these boys gave them to one another in Navajo. Practically nobody in the world understands Navajo except another Navajo.

Well, my regiment of First Division marines has the same thing. There are about eight Indians who do this special work. They are good marines and very proud of being so.

There are two brothers among them, both named Joe. Their last names are the ones that are different. I guess that's a Navajo custom, though I never knew of it before.

One brother, Pfc. Joe Gatewood, went to the Indian school in Albuquerque. In fact our house is on the very same street, and Joe said it sure was good to see somebody from home.

Joe has been out here three years. He is 34 and has five children back home whom he would like to see. He was wounded several months ago and got the Purple Heart.

Joe's brother is Joe Kellwood who has also been out here three years. A couple of the others are Pfc. Alex. Williams of Winslow, Ariz., and Pvt. Oscar Carroll of Fort Defiance, Ariz., which is the capital of the Navajo reservation. Most of the boys are from around Fort Defiance and used to work for the Indian Bureau.

The Indian boys knew before we got to Okinawa that the invasion landing wasn't going to be very tough. They were the only ones in the convoy who did know it. For one thing they saw signs and for another they used their own influence.

Before the convoy left the far south tropical island where the Navajos had been training since the last campaign, the boys put on a ceremonial dance.

The Red Cross furnished some colored cloth and paint to stain their faces. They made up the rest of their Indian costumes from chicken feathers, sea shells, cocoanuts, empty ration cans and rifle cartridges.

Then they did their own native ceremonial chants and dances out there under the tropical palm trees with several thousand marines as a grave audience.

In their chant they asked the great gods in the sky to sap the Japanese of their strength for this blitz. They put the finger of weakness on the Japs. And then they ended their ceremonial chant by singing the Marine Corps song in Navajo.

I asked Joe Gatewood if they really felt their dance had something to do with the ease of our landing and he said the boys did believe so and were very serious about it, himself included.

"I knew nothing was going to happen to us", Joe said, "for on the way up here there was a rainbow over the convoy and I knew then everything would be all right".

One day I was walking through the edge of a rubbled Okinawa village where marine telephone linemen were stringing wire to the tops of the native telephone poles.

As I passed, one of the two linemen at the top called down rather nervously saying he was afraid the wobbly pole was going to break under their weight.

To which one of the men on the ground, apparently their sergeant, called back reassuringly:

There are very few cattle on Okinawa but there are lots of goats and horses. The horses are small like western ponies and mostly bay or sorrel. Most of them are skinny, but when you see well-fed ones they are good-looking horses. They are all well broken and tame.

The marines have acquired them by the hundreds. Our company alone has more than 20. The boys put their heavier packs on them but more than that they just seem to enjoy riding them up and down the country roads.

They have rigged up rope halters for them and one marine made a bridle using a piece of bamboo for a bit. They dug up old pads, and even some goat-skins to use as saddle blankets. But it's surprising how many men in a company of marines don't really know how to ride a horse.

Drive on Davao From South, East

Manila, April 30 (AP)—U. S. infantrymen drove on Davao city from the south and east today, supported by planes operating off a freshly-captured airfield 30 miles south of the big Mindanao port city, one of the last Japanese strongpoints in the Philippines.

The 24th division was within 25 road miles of Davao on the south and the 31st division was about 65 miles east of the city.

The 24th captured the Padada airfield, on the shore of Davao Gulf, without a fight. The field, littered with wrecked Japanese planes, quickly was put into operation.

Other divisions mopped up around shell-wrecked Baguio, gold centre and summer capital of the Philippines. The once-beautiful city was in ruins when the invaders moved in Friday after a brief fight on the western outskirts.

On southern Luzon, meantime, Camarines Norte Province was reported cleared of Japanese as the result of recent successes. This province includes the important Paracale gold and iron mining district. The enemy, in fleeing, set the provincial capital of Daet aflame. Camarines Sur Province, immediately south, was being overrun.

Birmingham, England (CP)—Birmingham is the first big English city to overhaul its child welfare organization. It will hold a check-up of all institutions and families caring for homeless or boarded-out children.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WITH MOSS ON HIS TEETH

The practising dentist who sent me the best criticism I have received from a dentist in regard to the teachings in this column dismisses the rite (my term) or tooth brushing with a few words:

"You are quite right that brushing never stopped any decay. But using the brush makes people think of teeth, and of dentist, and so we have half a chance to get hold of them once in a while before too much damage is done. And once in a while I can inveigle a patient into massaging the gums with the brush, which helps quite a bit in low-grade chronic gingivitis" (gum inflammation) "where the patient will eat what he dam pleases regardless. So all is not wasted. And of course, it does freshen up the mouth a bit, which helps some to brighten the day . . ."

Well, I'd rather freshen up my mouth a bit by chewing a mouthful of wheat, or by eating an apple or eating some raw turnip, carrot, cabbage, celery, lettuce.

This dentist is evidently ten years ahead of the rank and file of the dental profession in his practical application of newer scientific knowledge. He tells me a good deal about the practical way to insure the correct calcium-phosphorus ratio in the everyday diet. He even tells me just where his patients can get real whole wheat bread (don't ask me where, folks, I don't know).

There may be some advantage to be gained by massaging the gums in one way or another. I can see no objection to it in any circumstance. I merely recall attention to the observations of Dr. Weston A. Price (Nutrition and Physical Degeneration now out of print, but a newly revised edition soon to be issued) in many parts of the world, among civilized and uncivilized people, that the people having the finest teeth never use a toothbrush at all. And the study of the condition of the teeth of the inhabitants of Tristan da Cunha in the South Atlantic by British dentists (National Geographic Magazine, November, '38) revealed astonishingly good teeth in both young and old, though the people never used toothbrushes.

Incidentally, the lady who opined I must have moss on my teeth has not yet appeared to compare her teeth with mine—I still want to pay the bet ($100 contribution to the Red Cross) if the lady's teeth are cleaner, healthier or in better condition than mine—and I'll tell all about it if I lose the bet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Blood Donations.

Two different girls were told by their respective physicians that donating blood would cause them to gain weight. Both are trying to keep weight down.

(Miss S. M.)

Answer—One girl, I suspect, is propounding a hypothetical question. Of course donating blood will not affect weight one way or the other. Don't be quaint—it was back in the early thirties that women thought they had to be skinny.

Growth

Is it true that a person grows until twenty-one, and if not what can I eat or drink to make me grow taller? I am nineteen and only four feet eleven.

(Miss T. W.)

Answer — You should first get your family physician's advice—he can best judge whether there is any glandular or nutritional deficiency that requires correction. I can offer only one suggestion—it may do no good but it can do no harm to try anyway—that you supplement your diet with a good daily ration of calcium and vitamin D and vitamin B-complex, not just for a while, but the year around, as described in booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth", for which send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Away Back

Your teachings are all OK by me. I know. I received my early training along the lines you put forth, from Dr. O. S. Fowler, as far back as 1873 (when I was 17 years old). I refer to "cri", clothing, wet feet, etc.

(J. A. M.)

Don't tell me they allowed Doctor Fowler to go about unescorted by his keeper and even permitted him to practice, with views along the lines I put forth? I'd like to know more about Doctor O. S. Fowler.

UNITED WE STAND

Who said: "United we stand, divided we fall?"

This saying, suggested by the proverb, "In Union there is strength," is very old in one form or other and cannot be traced to any definite source.

"Liberty Song" contains the following lines:

Then join hand in hand, brave
Americans all,—
By uniting we stand, by dividing we fall!

This song was first published in the Boston Gazette July 18, 1768, and was widely circulated during the Revolution. It was written by John Dickinson, who about the same time wrote "Letters from a Farmer in Pennsylvania to the Inhabitants of the British Colonies."

In 1792 "United We Stand; Divided We Fall" was adopted by the new Commonwealth of Kentucky as its motto.

George Pope Morris (1802-1864) popularized the motto in "The Flag of Our Union," one stanza of which reads:

A song for our banner—the watchword recall—
Which gave the Republic her station:
"United we stand—divided we fall!"
It made and preserved us a nation.
The union of lakes the union of lands,
The union of States none can severe,
The union of hearts, the union of hands,
And the flag of our union forever!

Morris' best known poem is "Woodman Spare That Tree!"

German Middle Class Should Be Watched as One Would A Snake Says London Writer

London, (By Cable)—Special attention is given in London to the following article from the War Correspondent of the News Chronicle. He accuses the dominant middle class of Germany—his accusation is that they, "worship Germany as their god, and are willing to render to their idol endless human sacrifices". "Some of these people are speaking the truth when they tell you—as almost every German tells you now—they are anti-Hitler. They are against him because he has failed the god Germany. Hitler's own worshippers will go down to ruin with him. But the German middle classes will remain and will await the next prophet, hoping he serves their god more successfully. I have slept in a dozen German houses since we crossed the Rhine, three weeks ago, and I have seen scores of others, and an outstanding thing about almost every one was that it was not just a house, it was a German home.

The exceptions were two homes where the families were devout Catholics where all the religious books and texts were religious. In all the others the religious element was dominant too, but it was the religion of Germanism.

Hitler's Picture Absent Now.

Hitler's picture had usually been discreetly taken down, leaving an obvious blank on the wall. But always between the antlers and stuffed birds of prey, there glowered Hindenburg, Kaiser Wilhelm or Hindenburg. Always there were groups of heavy humourless men in uniform. Always there were trophies, always there were hostile rejected texts glorifying Germany and power.

The owners of these houses are as clearly marked with their obsession as their walls are. Some of them are classic German types, unbelievably identical with caricatures of themselves, down to the plumed green jaeger hats, and comic hunting coats, jack-boots, bristling moustaches, and pendulous jowls. Some are suave, smartly dressed twentieth century business men, but they have only two topics of conversation—demands that the British military authorities protect them from looting by escaped slave workers, and abuse of all their efforts to cover for them, and fulminations against unkind destiny which has dared to inflict defeat on the great German army, the glories of which residents and mean tricks, of course). ...timly Feeling of Disgrace.

They feel shame, in the German sense of shame, humiliation and disgrace—in the Japanese sense of loss of face, but no shame for what Germany has done—no shame in the sense of guilt—the shape of their heads, and the shape of their souls makes that impossible.

As for any pity for the people of other nations on whom they had inflicted such agonies, they are as incapable of it, as you are of pitying a microbe. They can sit and watch Jews, and slave workers and even prisoners suffer and die before their eyes, and continue to concern themselves exclusively with the profits of their businesses, dinners for their friends, flowers and fine clothes for their wives, and bright new toys for their children. They have the effrontery to talk to British soldiers, whose comrades have just died beside them under German fire, whose homes and families have suffered under German bombing, about Germany's awful suffering.

Woman Doctor Typical.

In Celle, I was billetted in the house of a German woman doctor. Every few moments she came in to me with a new complaint, about how the slave workers passing through the town had stolen her silk stockings, spilt something sticky on her shiny furniture, unlifted her food cupboard (which was still well filled).

Then she asked my advice about her car. She had been stopped while driving it by British officers, who had told her she must use it to take starved men from a concentration camp to hospital. What concerned her, was how soon she could use her car again. Tragic victims of German tortures mean nothing to her—her car, her comfort and doctor—mean all.

With another Correspondent, I was talking the other day to a British General. In a town he had just captured. An elderly man, elegant and expensively dressed, walked right up to us, and broke into our conversation. "I am a professor," he said, in French, could you gentlemen oblige, a professor with a cigarette?" The General looked surprised and asked 'Are you French?' 'Oh no', he answered 'A German professor'. The General turned his back and said with contempt quite audible: 'Will you please take him away.' The man obviously did not want a cigarette. He was one of a rich family, sitting at a big hotel who lacked nothing but a full three, and a clear conscience.

HAUSERAU KNOWS MEANING OF WAR

By GODFREY ANDERSON
(Associated Press Writer)

Brussels (AP) — The German housewife's lot as Germany reels toward defeat is not a happy one.

If she is lucky enough not to have her home bombed she still has countless difficulties in the struggle for daily existence.

The job of planning a menu is not easy with only potatoes, dried soup, powdered lumpies, cereals and meat (not last to find variety. Meat rations are barely enough for one meal a week. Eggs are limited to two or three months when she can get them. Almost everything else has to be bought in the black market, which flourishes despite stringent prohibitions.

Cooking is a problem, since coal is scarce and will be scarcer still with the loss of the upper Silesian Ruhr coal mines. There is plenty of wood in the forests, but no one to get it unless she goes herself. The gas often sinks to an almost unusable flame and may be cut off completely for long periods each day.

The small town of Hadamar, where I was a prisoner, had no gas for weeks because the local gasworks was unable to get fuel through the bombed railroads. Heat was also stopped in mid-winter because coke supplies ran out. Electric light was of doubtful quantity with the grid system heavily overloaded because of the bombings.

Work Day Problems.

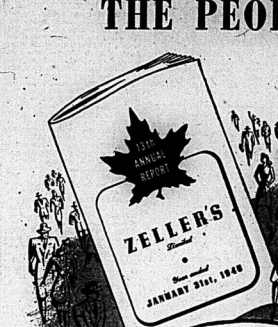
Wash day is another problem, since it is difficult to get hot water and the soap ration is very well. It is made from a strange, clay-like substance consisting of a proportion of fullers' earth and ashes and stirred with yellow.

New clothes are almost unobtainable except for children, while old clothes are handed on to the Winter relief.

Frau Schmidt must stay at home and can travel only with a special permit if her husband or son is seriously wounded and is in a German hospital. She must write on "strictly necessary" notepaper, lest she be the bombings.

If she has a boy in the Hitler Youth organization he is probably required to serve with an anti-aircraft battery or the air raid precautions. I talked with a 15-year-old boy serving with one of these batteries at Frankfurt-on-Main, who said he had been given special leave because the rest of the boys in his crew had been killed by a bomb.

If she lives in a bombed area and her home is destroyed, she can get no glass to repair shattered windows and will find it hard even to get wood to board them up.



If Frau Schmidt's home is completely destroyed she may get the list at a soup kitchen run by the Nazi party and perhaps draw a few extra delicacies as rations, such as honey sweets or a small quantity of real coffee. Then she'll be billeted with one of the "homeless enemy homes" which are being hastily run up all over Germany. This is a tiny two-room bungalow with a central stove and built-in bunks. Anyone who can live a kind of log cabin life until her home is rebuilt after the war.

SOME FACTS OF INTEREST TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA

DURING the past year, the cash registers in Zeller's Stores rang up a total of over $10,800,000. Believing that our customers will be interested in learning where their money goes, we are outlining a few highlights from the Company's latest Annual Report. A copy of the report, as submitted to Shareholders, which gives more complete details of the Company's operations and policies, will be sent free on request.

Zeller's Limited is a Canadian Company, maintaining 27 retail stores in 26 cities across Canada. The Company operates in Canada only, and is not controlled by, or affiliated with, any other organization.

$7,511,379 FOR MERCHANDISE

To provide for your wants, 69.13% of all money received by Zeller Stores in the year, was spent in turn by the Company in order to acquire the kind of merchandise that the customers wanted. More than 90% of these goods were made in Canada, so nearly seven million dollars went to the support of Canadian industries employing many thousands of people.

$1,506,736 REMUNERATION TO STAFF

The hundreds of employees who served you at Zeller's during the past year, received a total remuneration of more than $1,500,000, a half million dollars, or more than one-third of a million dollars not only their fixed salaries, but in addition, a share of the profits. This sum amounted to a bonus or commission, which conforms to the pioneer principle of profit sharing that the employees should benefit, in the first degree, by the Company's fortunes.

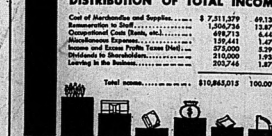
$575,000 GOVERNMENT TAXES

Zeller's Limited paid in taxes to the Canadian Government in the fiscal year $575,000, or 5.29% of total receipts. This amount does not include $85,000 that will be refunded to the Company, so, more than 5 cents out of every dollar spent in Zeller Stores went directly into the public funds of this country.

$289,862 PROFIT SHARING

All Zeller employees participate in some form of profit sharing, which provides for a small wage dividend, in addition to their regular fixed salary or commission. For instance, part of the profits of each store is paid to the manager, assistant manager, and former manager of a Standard Zeller Store who participate in a Standard Profit Sharing and Pensions Trust Plan. The total of all bonuses paid was $289,862, or over nine per cent of the total remuneration to the staff.

$698,713 RENT, LIGHT, ETC.



All of the Zeller Stores in which you do your shopping have to be rented, and must be comfortable, well-lighted places, for your convenience last year $4,400,000 was paid out for rent, and to pay convicted last year taxes, light, heat, insurance, and the incidental expenses involved in keeping up property.

$48,687 EMPLOYEES' VACATIONS

All Zeller employees with six months' service or more are entitled to annual vacations, with pay, and those with two or more years' service are entitled to two weeks' vacation with pay. The total paid during their vacations during the year, including salaries and wages amounting to $48,687.

DISTRIBUTION OF TOTAL INCOME

Cost of Merchandise and Supplies	$ 7,511,379	69.13%
Remuneration to Staff	1,506,736	13.87
Governmental Taxes (Rates, etc.)	698,713	6.44
Miscellaneous Expenses	179,441	1.67
Income and Excess Profits Taxes (Net)	575,000	5.29
Dividends to Shareholders	310,000	2.99
Leaving in the Business	203,746	1.87
Total sales	$10,865,015	100.00%

The Company has been in existence for thirteen years. During that time it has paid its own employees more than $10,500,000 in salaries, wages, bonuses and commissions; it has paid the Federal Government more than $2,500,000 in taxes; and has spent over $58,000,000 for merchandise and supplies. Over 90% of the goods sold by the Company are produced in Canada, and since the cost of merchandise is figured on the basis of the labor required to produce it, it can be conservatively estimated that over the past thirteen years the Company's operations have resulted in more than $50,000,000 finding its way into the pay envelopes of Canadians. This includes those who work for the Company and those engaged in producing goods and bringing them to the Company's stores. For the same period the Shareholders, whose share of the business made it possible to establish the business, received $941,563.

The Company's policy is based on the firm belief that its success depends entirely on maintaining just relations with its customers, its employees, and its suppliers, and on its ability to be an asset to the communities in which it operates.

This is an example of modern Free Enterprise in action.

AIKENS' W.A.

Aikens' W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Carroll Hubbard on April 24, meeting with fifteen members in attendance. A pot luck dinner was served at the noon hour with Mrs. Brickman and her assistants.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Marshall, the W.A. president, presided over a splendid program which had been prepared by Mrs. Ross McNary and her daughter, Jean.

The Scripture lesson was given by Mrs. Earl Bush, and the devotional was given by Mrs. S. Hubbard, it being titled "The Garden of Eden". It is a very beautiful story despite the fact that it tells about a tragic incident, the intrusion of sin into the moral life of man. The great truth is part of the human situation from the very beginning. The trees of good and evil were planted there and into their world came the serpent with all its wiles. Man did not resist the temptations of the serpent but ate of the forbidden fruit and fell from first estate. While not the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins, it is a truth embedded in the heart of all religion. Right at the beginning there has a foreshadowing of the consummation of the ages in Christ's death on Calvary.

Delegates were appointed to attend the W.A. convention at Bridge Street Church.

Several items of business were discussed.

Readings were given by Mrs. Fred Moon, Mrs. Will Bush, Mrs. Willman, Mrs. Ken Bush and Mrs. Bowen.

Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton favored with a solo, "Just for Today".

The next dinner meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Fred Moon.

Red Cross Report for March

The regular monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross was held on April 26, with Mr. M. P. Duff presiding.

Mr. Duff reported that the recent Housing campaign had been very successful, though complete figures were not yet ready for publication. A copy of the statistics was put on record to Mr. G. A. Brennan for sending to the campaign chairman, and to Mr. Leo Rigg for accommodation for campaign headquarters.

Mrs. Miller reported office liaison work in connection with three special drives.

The Treasurer, Mr. Zeran, reported for March and part of April, exclusive of campaign funds.

Receipts	$ 325.35
Expenses	477.22

Net Enough Accommodation

Rev. J. G. Hornsby and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson spoke concerning accommodation at the C.W.B. station for war wives and children. At present accommodation is not sufficient with the increasing number of arrivals. After considerable discussion of ways and means the matter was put into the hands of a committee.

There was also considerable discussion and explanation concerning the need and nature of a folder. The committee to continue to keep in touch with war brides. A committee was appointed.

Must Vacate Quarters.

A.Another request had been received that the Red Cross vacate their present quarters on Campbell Street. It was left with the president and a committee to see about obtaining other quarters.

The Secretary was instructed to write letters of thanks (1) to the C.I. and V.C. Junior Red Cross for supplies collected for the use of war brides and others, for assistance in collecting $760 at the local theatres during the recent campaign and for the girls who are assisting at the local hospital after four in the afternoon.

(2) to the St. Andrew's Church W.A. for making two hot water bottles

(3) to the Women's Canadian Club for knitted gifts for the war brides.

War Work Committee

The reports of the Women's War Work Committee and of the annual meeting of the Ontario Division follow:

Fifteen cartons were sent to the Ontario Division Headquarters during March. These contained 760 articles of 263 civilian clothing, 44 quilts, 18 leather and Grenville cloth skirting, 65 high neck and turtle-neck sweaters, 50 convalescent jackets, 185 pairs of socks, 70 pairs of gloves, 19 scarves, 120 children's sweaters, infant jackets and scarves, 30 women's sugar lary and 8 liaison articles. These are all of excellent material and workmanship and the Belleville Branch is certainly living up to the reputation they have gained for their completion of goods for the services and civilians being "well made and well packed". This has been made possible by the pains taken by the workers of the different groups in the city and the country.

Our sincere thanks go to all who have contributed their time and efforts to this magnificent work.

Respectfully submitted

Convention Report.

Mrs. Mikel, who attended the 26th annual convention of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society, submitted the following report:

The 26th annual convention of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held in Toronto on April 24th. 25th. It was a large representation from all over Ontario and it was interesting to exchange views with the different delegates; also finding out how they conduct the work. The impression we gathered was that the methods employed in the Belleville Branch are very satisfactory.

At the morning session an opportunity was given to get information regarding the various phases of the Red Cross work, such as the Red Cross Hospital Nursing, Nutrition and Home Making and Liaison Work.

There was also a table of samples of imperfect knitting and sewing.

Later in the morning a film was shown which gave considerable detail of the work of the Red Cross both at home and on the battle front. This was very interesting and many delegates expressed the opinion that this film should be shown throughout the country so as to give the public more information of the various branches of the Red Cross activities.

At luncheon we were welcomed by Col. Drew on behalf of the Ontario Government. He gave us a summary of the work of the Red Cross as the saw it functioning in England and on the continent. Mayor Saunders also extended the welcome of Toronto to the city and timely words. The Hon. Mr. McCauley also made a short address of welcome.

The main speaker at the luncheon was Major-General G. Brock Chisholm, D.S.E., (C.), Deputy Minister of Health for the Federal Government. He impressed on that the world is at the cross road of time and that every individual in the world has become important to each other. Distances have become limited in this age with the aid of radio and transportation. To prevent war, which we have one in every 15 years, we must now revolutionize our way of thinking. If we are not able to do so then it will be necessary to train our youth to fight.- Our returned men want to come back to a Canada that is going places and to help us make it a Canada producing in our own country, to steer clear of each looking out only for what is in it for us, to be prepared to take the pruning knife to many sacred cows. Only the world what to do clean up long standing messes and to avoid the mistakes of our young people, but ahead of the present generation in thought. Our returned men will be vastly better educated by their experiences than we at home and it will be necessary for us to govern ourselves accordingly.- Major-General Chisholm pointed out the fact that the Red Cross must carry on the work and be the bulwark for the benevolence task ahead and has no doubt we will be the beacon of light, friendship and goodwill during the years to come.

At the afternoon session, the retiring President, Mrs. Arthur Hall-Mills, in her address told us that the Red Cross has moved progressively toward the returned men and the delegates must keep themselves on record to give every assistance possible to the boys being ruled out by common sense in giving aid and where possible to form clubs for this purpose. The work of the Society is to do all they can to guard health which will be our great responsibility. The strength of the Red Cross is its branches and we must carry on for the betterment and comfort of the world.

Reports of the many committees were given which show the stupendous work that has been accomplished in Ontario. A few of these branches are: Work Room, Port Arthur, Ontario post hospitals, Junior Red Cross, Nursing, Nutrition, Voluntary Blood donor, Publicity, Liaison, Ontario Red War Organization, Ontario Work Room, Nursing Division, etc.

The Women's War Work Committee has been subjected to some curtailment owing to difficulties of obtaining sufficient supplies of knitting wool and materials. Nevertheless over 3,000,000 articles of clothing have been sent to the Divisional warehouse during the year. The total shipment shipped out was over 4,000,000.

The Blood Donors Committee reported that during the first three months of 1944 there were 9,000 donors a week and for the last nine months it was 12,000 per week making a total of 450,000 donors during the year. The quota for 1945 is to be 12,000 donors per week and the Committee feels confident that this number will be reached because all the workers are keenly interested while new donors are increasing in number. This work will be continued after the war is over until the need is thought to be at an end.

After the meeting had adjourned a visit was made to the Red Cross receiving depot at the Union Station where they receive, pack, mark, bribes and children. The quarters are partitioned off on Sunday, April 22. Those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. H. Grills, Mary and Geoffrey, of Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Jean and Joyce, of Miss R., Bowmanville; Mr. and Mrs. Nag, Burkitt, Betsy and Judith—Mrs. Burkitt and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. O. SOMEDAY before very long it may happen. You'll hear the well-remembered footsteps on the walk . . . and there he'll be—the chap who delivered your milk. He's coming home called.

He's going to be keenly interested in how we have looked after his customers while he was out there fighting. How, despite every manpower and transportation shortage—and increases all along the line in costs of operation—the dairies of Ontario stepped up deliveries from 690,000 to over 1,100,000 quarts a day to meet the greatly increased wartime demand for milk. How, to keep the milk supply lines open, we at the dairies and the farmers and highway truckers fought through the record-smashing snowdrifts which blanketed most of Ontario last winter. How the milk subsidy has helped to keep your cost of living down (remember, back in 1942, when you paid 2c more per quart than today?.

Yes, we hope the boys will say we did a good job for you while they were away. We're carrying on, and looking forward to the day when they come back . . . to the jobs we've held for these homecoming fighters to whom Canada owes so much.

Clothes for Plump Figure

Gail Russell has a lovely slender shape.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HEAVYWEIGHTS should cultivate a keen sense of dress. They can do wonders with the right kind of clothes which, of course, means graceful, slenderizing lines, and colors that diminish the appearance of bulk.

Good carriage is essential. Because a woman is overweight is no reason why she cannot be a lady of position, appear distinguished. The thing for her to do is to limit her diet to non-fattening foods—that alone will take off a pound or two a week, if she won't do that she should make an effort to dress to best advantage.

Stately Carriage

The plumpchildsome one should make it a point to be graceful and stately; that manner is a great aid. She can attain a majestic quality that is attractive.

The present wide shoulder cut is a help. Unless the figure is very short, wide shoulders make the waist and hips appear smaller by contrast. Wear them, by all means, but observe full at the top.

Watch the skirt length; that is important, especially if the calves have fatted. Drop the hem as far as you can without getting completely out of the mode. After all, the knee length slit is not smart.

Avoid complicated styles

If possible, in bodice design and in sweaters, keep to up and down lines and movement. Yoke effects are fatal; they call attention to the large bust, make a woman look short-waisted. Bodice decorations must not be formed in cross line, but should flow from shoulders to waist, into the fabric itself or in the cut.

Skirt materials, like brocades, should be avoided. Velvets are good, as are all soft, clinging dry goods. Black, of course, is best because it shadows the outline of the figure.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Petting Not the Only Resource For Teen-agers

Teen-agers are notoriously fussy about anything handed out to them as behaviour-suggestions. So, Dr. Alva C. Stephenson of Wayne State College is to be congratulated for handing out some good advice and not without a dash of humor.

She tells girls they may go out on a social date to help out the other girl in trying to satisfy with your point of view. She points out that a girl knows where to draw the line in petting, but where to stop. And she hint is followed up by suggesting that a good time to think of something interesting to do.

Talk for a whole evening, if you hardly know the boy, is a bad program, nor can you expect the boy to have all the ideas. And here's a good way to negotiate the subject between Hitler and Churchill. When a girl finds a situation getting out of hand, she should simply say, "I hope I'm not being unkind when I suggest a change of subject." Or, if she is not in the mood for petting, let's go dancing. Of course, it is happening that there is a boy who is so dumb it's a real bargain for girls, those days, if they can get him to dance at all, even if the friend does not mature into a fiancé.

The Marry Go Round

Wives and Other Wives

The typical war-wife can drive a steel with one hand, make a tasty meat loaf with the other, rock the cradle with her foot and at the same time manage to keep her nose powdered and her hair curled.

It is astonishing that girls accomplish so much these days, since every one of them spends a large part of her life either trying to get some man, trying to get along with one, trying to get rid of one or trying to get along without one. And believe it or not, the first and the last are easiest.

To collect books is a sign of culture; to collect rare paintings or jewels is a sign of wealth; but to collect husbands, as some women do is a sign that you need a psychiatrist. One good, substantial husband should last a lifetime!

The average man, like "all Canada," is divided into three parts; his vanity (or self-esteem), his digestion and his ambition or aspiration. If a wife will encourage the first, guard the second and stimulate the third, his love will take care of itself.

There seems to be no main issue for a man's initiation of a demanding or an aggravated wife, and no quick excuse for his backsliding as a self-respecting one.

Changing habits is not always successful. Sometimes it is like changing a valuable land from right hand to the other, merely a temporary relief. We women run true to type; and when we are "henpecked" by vainly making a complete change and wife still remains a problem, we go into something far worse.

Every man loves to see her husband well-groomed; but if a married man ever sees some rich glittering, expensive, useless trifle, such as the girls are wearing, his wife must buy it for him or for herself to deserve on him or to pong for complaining.

Why is it take Cynical Gabi, that the moment a man has surrendered the key of his heart to a girl, he begins to think wistfully about changing the lock?

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Ensembles in Clothes and Cosmetics

"Keep the ensemble in mind," is a good slogan for the shopper, whether she's out stalking a goofy hat or a ravishing lipstick. Her appearance is composed of many details which might better live in harmony than fight with each other. The lady of fashion never sizes up on a dress in the shop; she may have to tramp her feet weary to find exactly the right belt or scarf or hat combination. She is constantly put together—a pictorial picture that is a treat to the eye.

No one option to the pan few years has scrutinized more by women's appearance than the colorful harmony that should exist between complete. We've through with the "grab - charge - and - send" method. We're using our heads, and finding it fun. We're after chic and charm, and not Very clothes cost so much as becoming ones. Detail colors are a powerful aid to express one's spirit. So keep your eye and the doors of your mind wide open, and everything else will do not culturely fixed ideas.

The modern painting is another phase of harmony in relation to the figure. It not only must flatter the features, but also must be suitable. The clever girl does not appear at her office with a dab of rouge, a dot of powder and a scrambled hair-do. Her coiffure is done to suit the hat.

Cosmetic chemists have jumped on the variety train with make-up ensemble. Powder rouge and lipstick all come in many shades. If you aren't sure what to mix them with which and what ones are right for you, the attendant at the make-up counter will tell you.

A safe rule is to use power slightly darker than the skin; and rouge, lipstick and nail polish harmonizing in the same color family; they will not be the exact shade. Mixed-up should there with rose, and a clear complexion.

Unity of perfume should be observed. Creams of one scent should not combine with powder of another fragrance. Both safe and sound, toilet water and hand lotion, should not be of varying scents. The sweetest perfume fights each other, and ends both are put out of commission.

The idea of powder in a nice one; it applies to color as well as to clothes and cosmetics. Our best stylists have worked out a color. Observe their offerings and you will notice that they are in monochromatic schemes. Color plans are carefully worked out—to the smallest detail.

We have learned that frock, coat, hat, shoes, handbag and costume jewelry all must have a congenial relationship. There should be a main color, one or two complementary shades with a possible third as a striking touch of artistry.

Greens, including fresh wild plants, are rich in vitamins and minerals. Eat them raw in salads or cook them in small amounts of water. Serve the cooking liquor with the greens to avoid loss of valuable minerals.

Dandelions, because of their flavor, rank as especially good spring greens. Pick young leaves in spring before they develop strong flavor. FAMILY ALLOWANCES AND INCOME TAX

THE following announcement will help to clarify the relationship between Family Allowances and Income Tax credits for dependent children. Family Allowances are payable from July 1st, 1945, and the registration of children is now taking place.

The Family Allowances Act was designed to help equalize opportunities for all children, and when the Act was passed, Parliament approved the principle that there should be no duplication of benefits by way of Family Allowances and Income Tax credits for the same child. An amendment to the Income War Tax Act will be made to deal with this duplication. In the meantime, however, the Government proposes, for the last six months of 1945 during which Family Allowances are payable, to remove duplication by adjusting the income tax credits received for children.

It is natural that parents in the low income groups will be expected to receive maximum benefits from Family Allowances. Partial benefits will be received, however, by parents with incomes up to $5,000.

The table below shows the effect of the adjustments which the Government has decided to make. For convenience and simplicity the benefits received by each income group are shown as a per cent of the Family Allowances received. The table shows:

(a) Heads of families receiving incomes in 1945 of $1200 or less will benefit to the extent of the full amount of the Family Allowances received. As they are not required to pay income tax, there is no duplication to remove.

(b) Heads of families receiving incomes in 1945 in excess of $1200, but not in excess of $3,000, will in effect retain the full value of their present income tax credits and in addition a percentage of the actual Family Allowances received.

(c) Heads of families with incomes in excess of $3,000 will retain their full income tax credits for children if they do not receive Family Allowances. These taxpayers may, however, apply for Family Allowances to protect themselves against a possible decrease in income at a later date which might bring them into a lower income range where they would benefit from Family Allowances. In such cases if the income remains in excess of $3,000, the income tax credits for children would be reduced by the full amount of Family Allowances received.

NOTE—This table applies to married persons and others having the status of married persons for income tax purposes. For the purpose of determining the benefit of dependent children and for family income for income tax purposes, and for members of the Armed Forces paying income tax, special tables can be obtained from the Regional Director of Family Allowances in each provincial capital.

Family Allowances will be paid in full

In all cases, those who apply for and are eligible to receive Family Allowances will receive them in full, month by month. See scale below:

SCALE OF MONTHLY ALLOWANCES FOR THE FIRST FOUR CHILDREN

For each child

Under 6	$ 5.00
From 6 to 9, (inclusive)	6.00
From 10 to 12 (inclusive)	7.00
From 13 to 15 (inclusive)	8.00

Where there are more than four children under 16 in the family, the monthly allowance for each child after the fourth will be reduced in accordance with the provisions of the Family Allowances Act.

As far as is possible, to take care of the adjustments necessary to avoid duplication of benefits, current income tax deductions at the source will be adjusted to take into account the new situation when Family Allowance payments commence. This will avoid placing an awkward burden on the taxpayers at the end of the year.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES ARE NOT TAXABLE

Special attention is drawn to the fact that the income ranges used in the table above refer to taxable income, and any amounts received as Family Allowances should not therefore be included in calculating income for this purpose because Family Allowances are not taxable.

Family Allowances are also additional to dependents' allowances for servicemen's families and military pensions.

For children registered after July 1st, 1945, Family Allowances will be paid as from the month following the month when registration is made. Family Allowances are not paid retroactively.

The time, 1:98:26, constituted a record for the annual event. A jones of England was second.

The Canadian Universities' Conference at Quebec City, May 17-19, will deal with professionalism and competition, it was reported last night from Kingston, Ont. The college athletic program, insofar as inter-university contests are concerned, was suspended in 1940.

Gunder Haagg once more became a trailer when he finished fourth in a special mile handicap Saturday at the Penn relay carnival, Philadelphia, for his final appearance in the United States before returning to defend his title against Archie San Romani in the 1,500 metres at the Empire Games in Sydney, Australia, next February. Haagg, who was given a 25-yard handicap in the special event, was scratched from the 1,500 metre race at Penn because of a muscle pull suffered in the Boston marathon.

Vice-President Roger Pekinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians yesterday announced the trade of outfielder Roy Cullenbine to Detroit Tigers for Infielders, Donald Ross and Lambert (Dutch) Meyer.

Toronto Cathletettes, on their home floor Saturday night, defeated Verdun, Que., Drilled 37-16 to win the play-down 60-21 for the Eastern Canadian women's junior basketball championship. It was the 21st straight victory for the new titleholders.

The Hirsletics, former champions of the Provincial Women's Softball Union, announced at Preston they will field a team for the coming season without most of the former regulars in the squad.

Russ Derry, Yankee Rookie, Hits 2nd. Grand-Slam Homer Of Year in Beating Washington

In Addition Derry Hits Homer in First Game of the Doubleheader

By JOE REICHLER

Russ Derry, Yankee outfielder starting his first regular season in the major leagues, played in 26 games last year—batted his second home run with the bases jammed twice as the New Yorkers split a double-header with Washington, winning the first 13-4 and losing the second, before 32,908 fans.

In addition to his base-clearing wallop, Derry hit another home run in the opener, his first of the season, thus became the first player to connect for a pair of circuit clouts while batting in nothing new to the 21-year-old Irishman as he led the Piedmont League in 1939 with 40 homers for Norfolk, Va., and batted .357 for the mark in 1940.

The opener marked the third win, without a defeat, for New York's Hank Borowy, but Alley Donald, despite a personal home run by the Nats' Roger Wolff in a second game mound duel with each team making only four hits.

While Sgt. Flmsby Lee Thornton, The surprising Chicago White Sox finally lost after five straight victories, when they were beaten, twice by St. Louis 3-2 and 10-4. Oddly, it was the first time ended the Browns season-opening winning streak at nine last year. Frank Mancuso's six-hitter, triple and a long fly by pitch-hitter Gene Moore accounted for the deciding run in the opener. Jack Kramer, relieving Al Hollingsworth, got credit for the second as Vern Stephens, who homered in the opener, paced the Browns with three hits and two runs batted in.

Detroit's Tigers, unchanged 4-0 shutouts, the Indians behind Al Milnar's pitching, winning the opener and the Tigers, with Paul (Dizzy) Trout hurling, the second. Trout's second shutout, winning the second. Trout aided his own cause with a Texas League.

Boston Wins Twice.

Pinch-hit Doc Cramer at last Saturday, Boston Red Sox continued to win, tacking on a 7-6 and 6-1 pair bill from Philadelphia Athletics 2-0 and 8-5 in 12 innings.

Philadelphia managed its four straight defeats by Chicago by trouncing the Cubs 10-6 and 6-4, not only ending its own five-game losing streak but mapping the Windy City's seventh straight.

Dixie Walker's three-run homer in the eighth inning Brooklyn to defeat New York Giants for the second straight time by a 6-3 score as Hal Gregg held the Giants to four hits.

Boston Braves and Philadelphia Phillies split their two games, the Phils winning the opener 8-7 and the, Braves behind Al Javery copping the second 1-0.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Max Lanier, Cardinals — Hurled five-hitter against Reds in opener for his first victory of the year.

Dixie Walker, Dodgers—Hit three-run homer in eighth to enable Dodgers to defeat the Giants 4-3.

Vernon Stephens, Browns—Homered in opener to give Browns 3-2 triumph over White Sox and made three hits and drove in two runs in second game which also went to Sewellmen.

Russ Derry, Yankees and Rago Wolff, Senators — Derry hit two homers one with the bases loaded, his second grand slam of the season in the opener; Wolff pitched a 4-hitter to give Nats a 2-1 victory in nightcap.

WRESTLING KING

When "Toar" Morgan learned Nanjo Singh had failed to beat Whipper Billie Watson for the British Empire wrestling title last week, he said Morgan sat down in his newly-adopted home in Lindsay over the week-end and began to figure things out in his own favor. It all sums up to this — Morgan is applying for Canadian citizenship and feels if he can beat top-notchers like Singh or even John Kent he would be in a position to challenge Watson. It is with that idea in mind Morgan is going after Singh from the outset at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night. The former "fighting Marine" has fully recovered from his neck injury sustained here with his world title bout with Wild Bill Longson last summer and is now shooting for bigger things in the wrestling world. Of course there will be no big-league preliminaries to start things off.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN TWO GAMES DURING WEEKEND

Beat Baltimore on Saturday and Split Double Bill on Sunday

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City's seven-game winning streak at the International Baseball League has been smashed by Buffalo Bisons.

Buck Harris' herd beat Little Giants Saturday 14-4 and followed through by splitting a doubleheader with the League leaders yesterday.* Buffalo won the first game, 5-4, after three Jersey City errors. Little Giants won the nightcap, 5-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Cuyp Sunday's first nightcap.

Baltimore Orioles divided a doubleheader with Toronto, taking the opener, 8-7, and dropping the second, 8-5, before 11,520 fans, the largest crowd of the day.

A three-run homer in the extra eighth inning by Ed Stevens gave Montreal Royals a victory over Newark Bears in the nightcap of a twin bill after the Bears copped the opener, 6-2, as Frank Hiller won his third victory in as many starts.

Syracuse beat Rochester twice, 5-3 and 4-2. Three runs in the first inning sewed up the opening game for Chiefs. Bob Bebber won the second game, 4-2, relieving Porter, holding Wings to three hits.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 30 — (CP) — We don't know what the American baseball players are going to say to this, but we think the Canadian ladies are going to lap it up. In a recent interview with Ruth Wilton of Vancouver, Max Carey, who's now the headman of the Chicago Glamorous and Gorgeous Girls' Softball League, said that Canadian lassies softball players were better than the American girls.

That is really quite a compliment coming from Max, who really knows baseball. It seems that the former big league ball hustler has been carrying on the good neighbor policy with a statement like that — or maybe he really means it.

We note with interest that Max' million did not state any reason or cita any examples. But regardless that is the kind of compliment it is hard to overlook. As long as it does not go to the gals' respective heads, all won't do any harm.

The American ladies loop is doing things up big in the Canadian gals with announcement that an outstanding player will be chosen from each province for an all-expense trip to the States at the end of the season. Even if nothing comes of it in the way of a contract for the gals — the fact that Canadians will see them will remember for a long time.

Tantalizing Talk:

For the skeptics who raised their eyebrows every time the name of Johnny Greco enters the conversation, the following excerpt from a fight story should be useful:

Written by Maurie Waxman—Boston's latest sensation — and he certainly predicts that young Greco will get a little shot against Freddie Cochrane.

"With Robinson back in the army . . . the hard-hitting Canadian is now the best box-office attraction among the welters and may likely opponent of all for welter king Freddie "Red" Cochrane," wrote Waxman.

The last three Greco fights with Buffalo stood him in a market of a million dollars, which is an interesting figure to keep one's eye on at for any fight manager. So, all knocks to the contrary, it may be Greco for the big time after all.

Things and Such:

Beg pardon — Mike (Kingston Whip-Standard) Rodden says that Duke Keats turned pro when he was 18 and not 16 as previously reported.

Trail's end — Montreal Olympics, seven times Quebec senior ladies basketball titlists and holders of 4 Eastern Canada crowns have decided to retire.

Hammer's here — members of the Canadiens hockey team will be seen on the softball diamond when Montreal again this year. Individually and collectively they play a good game of ball.

BASE WORKERS WIN HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat Service Corps Reinforcement Unit in Canadian Army in England Playdowns

Brighton, England, April 26 (CP) — Canadian base workshop men, glittering with professional and top notch amateur talent, won the hockey championship of the Canadian Army in England by smashing service corps reinforcement unit club in a two-game series final left the winning team in this season.

The workshop crew, all from the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, won the first game in Purley 10-2 and the second game 4-1 in a match which closed the fifth—and probably last—season of Canadian Army hockey in Britain.

Lt.-Gen. F. J. Montague hardly had faced off the puck in the first match of the series when Pte. Alec Stewart of Timmins, Ont., service corps forward, scored on a long drive. Pte. Stewart got however, the winner's line of Binne (Shiner) Larkin, Edmonton and Victoria; Cpl. Moe White of Verdun, Que., and Cpl. Kenny Campbell of Montreal, had scored his second goal in the middle frame.

Other scorers for the winners were Cpl. Polly Deonin of Ottawa, formerly of Kitchener, Montreal and the Allan Cup-winning Ottawa Senators; Pte. Bobby Bell, 190-pound defenseman from Toronto who played with Chicago Black Hawks, and Cpl. Leo Blondin of Ottawa, Ottawa Montagnards and loser's last tally in the second period.

Star: GeoSmeding.

The service corps team, up to bat by the publication of Cpl. Les Colvin of Oshawa, Ont., showed a determined comeback in the second match of the best-of-three series and in the end ended 11-6 on goals by Kreiler and Pte. Middy O'Keefe of Olds, Alta.

Pte. Bill Hall, the remainder of the scoring—all in the second period—Hinkley, Bradley and Campbell the season, scored two to bring his season total to 11 goals, one behind the other. Only five minor penalties were handed out in the workshop team, were issued during the finals. Cpl. Buck Brown of Medicine Hat, Alta., and Cpl. Campbell drew three of them.

Probable lineup of the winning team included Pte. Scotty Munroe of Kingston, Ont., and Pte. Jack Nicholson of Kingston, Ont., and Pte. Bill Hall of Ottawa, defence; and forwards Cpl. Fred Olesiecki, Petawawa, Ont., Cpl. Joe Dalla, Kingston, Ont., and Cpl. Reg. Dodds, Timmins, Ont. The winning team will be back in their well-known in Montreal ice circles.

Coaches behind the winning team were Lieut. J. S. Taylor of Vancouver; Pte. M. Bowman, Hamilton, Ont.; Pte. A. Brown, Hamilton, Ont.; Pte. M. Brenner, Windsor, Ont.

The Canadian Army Sports Committee announced following the finals that these teams will be the only mostly Canadian servicemen but including Canadian Army hockey army hockey games in the South-East England area and that 29 teams competed during the season.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, April 26 — (AP)—For the first time since he's been coach of the Philly Eagles, Greasy Neale may have an entire experienced backfield return to his club this year. So far the Eagles only know of one member of their squad, Art Maclaskey, who has been lobbied for the armed forces since last season.

Monday Matinee:

The National Association of State High School Athletic Associations, which has co-operated in organized baseball, will distribute 50,000 copies of a special edition of baseball rules to school players and coaches . . . other publications will follow suit . . . the rule book has been entirely rewritten without changing the regulations so as to make it easy to understand . . . The Yankees' behemoth stadium will be moved to the Stadium today because the new downtown office won't be ready until July 1.

Here Are the Figures.

The employer remonstrated when one of his employees asked for an increase in salary on the ground that he worked hard and long hours.

"Why," protested the employer "you get an easy time. Look at me. There are 365 days in a year. Eight hours each day you sleep. That makes 122 days, leaving 243 days. Eight hours of every day you have for meals. That leaves 122 days. I give you an hour for lunch every day and that amounts to 18 days more, leaving 104. You do not work on Sundays 52 more days off, leaving 52. Two weeks' holiday in summer—another 26 days, leaving 26 days. You have two weeks' holiday every Summer and you take at least a week off at Christmas, seven days a year to work—and you have Monday, Boxing Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday and Empire Bank Holidays are yours. Why should I give you a raise? You owe me money!"

Arrested the Town.

We received sufficient softball score cards from the A. G. Spalding Company at Brantford to supply each local K-F grocery with said cards for the entire season.....The cards went to grocers who promised to display following which the Ki-Y Softball League would open. The rules committee of the Belleville Softball League, headed by Messrs. Gerow and Ernie Summers) met over the weekend and adopted, for the season, the official constitution of the old C.O.B.L.....They also adopted the same rules as laid down by the O.S.A. and recommended a rule whereby no club may bring in players from a radius more than 15 miles from the home club.....Recommendations adopted by the rules committee will be submitted to the league executive tonight.....Joe Samain, past president of the Belleville Softball League, believes he has a sponsor for a junior softball team in Belleville.....Names and conditions will be announced as soon as the matter is settled.....Ed. Allin is the undersized Homer! "Red" Townsend will return to coach the local junior softballers in 1941..(Welcome home Red.)

Oshawa Views.

Oshawa Scribe George Campbell apparently doesn't agree with others regarding the date of the Big Six Mitchell's College Memorial Cup winners. Says George in his sports column: "Just to end all this talk about who's the best team in Ontario, we're "the best since 1934"—they weren't as good as Oshawa 1939, 1940 or 1941, but even as good as St. Mike's 1944, the way we figure it, we would like to give our reasons for following quotation: "It is a very good idea to let Oshawa and you've seen better from Ontario. Oshawa has had more powerful clubs. No, the boys who did the St. Mike's was "the best junior team in 15 years", must be a little short on memory." Who said it? A fellow named Joe Primeau, down in Montreal, when his team was visiting Royals. That should end it, eh? The only two players at St. Mike's who were improved over last year's team was in the case of the fact that a lot of their players with a year older and better and they had the benefit of night coaching. But if Ted Lindsay, Dave Bauer, Johnny Hands, Bobby Schnurr, Dunlap and Malong had all been eligible this year, how many games would clape Ellis, Stasiuk, Paul, Samis, Bloom, etc., have played?"

Intermediate League.

The great Steve Donoghue, famed English jockey, then 52 years of age, crowned his last season of racing eight years ago today by retaining the 1,000 guineas for the first time in his colorful turf career. However, Donoghue came back to come up on an English Derby winner.

Something Wrong?

Seems Ranjo Singh isn't in an amicable state of mind these days simply because he failed to lift Billie Watson's British Empire title in Toronto last week. Being the mean cuss he is Singh is already on the prowl for a "pet" on Toar Morgan here Wednesday. However, the latter is familiar with the latter's other ideas. Morgan is seeking Canadian citizenship with the idea in mind of going after Watson's Empire crown himself. That idea is completely out of matters for the Mad Hindu, or does it?

News of People.

Chuvalo's going in New York that Manager Lee Dunmer of the Dodgers is handing out overtures from a Broadway theatrical producer..... Eric Weatherhead is a newspaper comedy....With Umpire George Magerkurth for a foil, Lee the Lip of baseball, Manager Leo Durocher, Cincinnati outfielder, Charley Silvera, Umpire Al Barlick, Wally Judnich, the Brownie slugger, Dario Lodigiani, White Sox third baseman and Johnny Beazley, Cardinal hurler, are all playing in the Hawaii Winter Baseball League.....Ossie Maetz says the art of steal-ing bases is a lost art. Maetz was perfected half a century ago.....That eight years ago today by retaining the 1,000 guineas for the first time in his colorful turf career. However, Donoghue came back to come up on an English Derby winner.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 669
By SAM GORDON
The Ribbons

When the rades were on, I got this straight from the horse's mouth: "All kinds of humans bet on horses. But you never see any horses bet on humans. That's horse sense."

All kinds of humans learn cunningness pretend to play bridge. But get this straight: They can learn to play a better game in less time with an easy, understandable system. That's Horse Sense.

You must always try to tell your partner what you have. You must do it with bids made up of these 13 words: One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades, notrump, pass, double, redouble.

Whenever you use a bid, think of The Skinner's Y-A-P rule. Never open your lips to tell your partner something he already knows or suspects. Never. If it is about your opposition.

If you open the bidding, you tell partner you have five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. If partner opens and you respond with a bid, you say you have at least three tricks with two high cards.

Your later bids should tell something you have not disclosed before. A change of bid without a raise in number does not show an additional trick. Only a raise in number does.

Suppose partner opens with one spade when you have this hand:

♠ 10 6
♥ 9 8 6 7
♦ 9 5 4
♣ A K 10 8 6

Your first response is two clubs. That consumes the three tricks your hand contains. If partner then bids hearts, you are forced to bid again. But you must not make any bid that raises the number.

Your club suit is rebiddable. But to bid it again would require you to say three clubs; a raise in number. So you must not take-out again to your own suit even though it is rebiddable.

You have no adequate support for either suit partner has bid. So you have no assist. Therefore your only second bid is two pertrump.

You can boast of your acts when you stick to the facts.

NOTED SURGEON DIES

Cardiff, Wales. (CP)—Col. A. W. Sheen, 78, surgeon and first provost of the Welsh National School of Medicine, died, here. He once visualized a great national health park which would aim at demonstrating measures for the promotion of fitness and the correction and prevention of disorders due to wrong structure or functioning.

AT THE BELLE — Beautiful Barbara Britton co-starring with Day Milland in Paramount's "Till We Meet Again," plays the role of Sister Clothilde in this authentic romance of life among the French Maquis.

'Beast' of Prison Camp Beaten

London, April 30. (OP Cable)—Josef Kramer, "beast" commandant of the infamous Belsen death camp, was beaten by men in the camp was liberated last week, was beaten unconscious by a crowd of nearly 1,000 German political prisoners who recognized him as they were being marched from a British prisoner-of-war camp, an R.C.A.F. officer said here today. Kramer now is in solitary confinement in a guardhouse, chained to the floor, Lieut. Clifton of the camp was not given. Pit.-Lt. R. E. W. Taylor, the Pas. Man., a member of R.C.A.F. Public Relations staff, visited the camp and said guards had been forced to use rifle butts to drive off Kramer's assailants.

He said the commandant had been placed in a cement pit about seven feet in diameter under the sights of a Bren gun. As a large group of prisoners was being marched out, one recognized Kramer, and the prisoners, many limping along with the aid of canes, swarmed over to beat him. When he was rescued he was unconscious and bleeding from head and body wounds.

Taylor said "in a press release Kramer now is in a guardhouse "and glad of it because he knows it would be his death to venture beyond the door into the compound".

Otar, James W. Taylor, Royal Artillery Medical orderly, from Leicester, told the Public Relations officer "Kramer's head was split open and bleeding, and his body bruised. In another few minutes they would have killed him.

"He complained of pains in his stomach and wanted something to relieve him. He trembled like a leaf. I asked him what relief had he given all his victims and what would he do in the same place. We were protected by the R.A.M.C. He moaned: 'Your protection has come too late.'"

Once since the beating Kramer asked to have the manacles removed but he was told he could not be relieved of the chains unless he returned to the compound. He refused to move, muttering "they would kill me as well again."

Kramer's guards said their prisoner was "very docile" and "must be mentally sick".

London, (CP)— There's an old saying that if you toss a coin often enough it will turn up heads just as often as tails. But J. Horsedall, a Polish mechanic who came here after the Germans invaded his country, has made a machine that can spin "tails" 99 times in 100.

AT THE McCARTHY — Skippy Homeier and Joan Carroll are being acclaimed as the two best child stars in Hollywood for their brilliant performance in "Tomorrow, The World!" Lester Cowan's smash hit picture now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Given the job of clearing the Orange Canal, these made all consolidation, but enemy fire was so con-engineers found that mortar shells moved them. AT BUCHENWALD—THE ACCUSING FINGER POINTS

One of a series of German concentration camp atrocities that shocked the world, this picture shows a prisoner, clad in his familiar striped suit, pointing the accusing finger at a former Waffen S.S. guard who is accused of brutally beating prisoners. These prisoners at Camp Buchenwald, Germany, were liberated by the Third Armored Division of the-U. S. Third Army.

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto (CP) — Hitchhikers plague the bird tourists of Canada as well as human travellers.

Tiny Cowan, former trapper in the Great Bear Lake area and now a sergeant with the Canadian Army overseas, tells in his recently published book "Stay Below" how a hummingbird arrived at the northern reaches of the Mackenzie River after stowing away on a migrating goose. They shot the goose for food and found that he had also killed the hummingbird which had burrowed its way into the feathers on the goose's back.

These tiny travellers fan fly forwards, backwards, sidewalks, or remain stationary in the air. They can travel hundreds of miles on their lightning rapid wings, but they apparently prefer not to work if they can get away with it.

Adaptability and mobility are not confined to hummingbirds however. A pair of owls built their nest under the air pipes of a Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive at Peterborough, Ont., last Spring. The engine was on transcove in the freight yards eight hours a day. The birds followed their mobile home about the yards while the nest was being built and when three eggs were laid in it the locomotive crew did their switching with great care to avoid breaking them. The eggs all hatched safely.

The area around Victoria, B.C., is the only part of America where the skylark is found. The European songster, famous in the ode by Shelley, was introduced there some years ago and appears to be firmly established.

It is known like the horned Canadian lark, except that it lacks the black tufted horns and had a striped breastband.

The Russians have provided news for Canadian farmers as well as for students of fall-merting current events. A.-Z. Hlonichenko, eminent naturalists and horticulturist has announced the development of a new species of apple—the Polian-noe, or Polar apple—which not only has excellent flavor and size to its credit but withstand temperatures of 76 below zero. This phenomenal fruit is also drought-resistant—Canadians in colder parts of the Dominion where apples can be grown only with difficulty be-cause of the climate, will be interested in the Russian's discovery.

A Scottish gardener-scientist in Toronto has kept his taste for similar things in spite of the fact that he spends his time tending plants flowers and fruits grown in a bit city hothouse.

A visitor was amused several months ago when on a tour of the hothouse the old gardener paused in his eulogies of the strange blooms and fruits from afar to exclaim pleasure at a single dandelion blossom which had pushed its way up through a crack in the flagstone floor of the building.

Ans' do you know that roses and other flowers which close during the night are favorite sleeping quarters for many kinds of insects. The flowers protect them from rain and dew and provide luxurious scented warmth on chilly nights.

500 LEADING NAZIS KILLED

New York, April 27 — (AP)—The Swedish newspaper Stockholms Tidningen said in a dispatch reported to the Office of War Information yesterday that a "total of 500 leading Nazis are said to have been killed in Wednesday's R.A.F. air raid on Berchtesgaden.

CHINESE INVENTION

The invention of paper is attributed to Tsai Lun in about 105 A.D.

What they achieved...we must hold

IN THE YEARS following the Napoleonic wars, high taxes, low wages and unemployment made life almost unbearable for thousands of people in the British Isles. Canada was their land of promise. So by hundreds they came to Quebec, took the river steamer to Montreal, walked nine miles to Lachine where they began the cruel journey up the St. Lawrence in bateaux or Durham boats, lugging their possessions along the shore past the rapids. Finally there was the long journey inland with their supplies on their backs or on ox carts. And in the middle of the forest they made homes for themselves.

Just one ideal they sought, and found, in this new land. It was a country where thrift and hard work brought their reward, where each man could profit according to the effort he put forth.

Victory Bonds are the means by which each and every one of us can protect this precious heritage handed down to us by those sturdy pioneers. Each bond helps to crush those nations who seek to restrict our freedom. Each bond will assist the men in our armed services to build a happy future in this Canada of ours.

SCRAPPY HUSKIES TRAVEL KINGS IN JAMES BAY AREA

Due to War Flying Operations Are on Limited Scale and Dogs Bear Brunt of the Transport Burden

(Written for The Canadian Press by JIM HORNICK)

Moose Factory, Ont. (CP) — Despite modern transportation advances, the lowly dog continues to dominate the Winter travel picture in this boreal, sparsely-populated land where brawny and indomitable teams of powerful white huskies attend to the needs of hundreds of Cree Indians.

The airplane is well-known to the James Bay country but due to the war and a shortage of small streamlined planes, flying operations are on an extremely limited scale. The one old Fairchild bush freighter which operates all along the bay named Nesbit, to serve the ever-growing needs of trading posts and settlements alone. And it is the leader which bears the main brunt of the burden.

Everyone here is a dog owner. He has to be to exist. Whites and Indians alike respect the weight-pulling quality which has made the husky the ideal dog for tough Winters in the north.

The natives, whose become versas with the wind, believe in trusting their pets roughly. Surprisingly enough, the dogs seem to thrive on it. Most of the huskies around Moose Factory are good looking specimens in every respect except their weight. A good coat of long, shaggy hair usually conceals an extremely thin body. Occasionally somebody does. The average Indian's diet is unbalanced and on some days, non-existent. Dogs eat the left-overs.

One in every 100 sled-haulers enjoys the luxury of a kennel. The remainder spend their nights tied to the post looking forlorn found in any Cree's backyard. They are kept widely separated for if there's anything a husky likes it's a good fight.

A General Melee.

Sometimes one dog in a team will turn on the rest and soon they'll all be in the thick of it, forgetting completely about the passengers. When this happens on the trail, the hostile-master has to be shot. When teams pass each other it's all the drivers can do to keep them from scrapping.

The presence of a stranger is another common excuse for a battle. Without provocation, a dog will leap straight at a man's throat. He has been fighting far too long to mince words or barks. When one dog attacks, the whole pack follows and unless the victim has an exceptionally strong pair of legs or is within easy range of a tall tree, he is exposed to serious injury.

The while man, however, has introduced something new in the way of Winter vehicles. Cpl. James Davis, in charge of the RCMP detachment here, has a brand new streamlined snowplane, powered by an air-cooled motor driving a large three-bladed propeller. On a hard packed surface he can coax fifty miles an hour out of it.

Dr. T. J. Orford, Dominion Government Indian agent, has a similar snowmobile which comfortably, navigates over deep snow on a set of wide rubber treads similar to those used on tanks.

But these speedy Winter vehicles are exceptions. Until the Indian's standard of living is sufficiently increased to permit the purchase of expensive machines or until mass production methods place them within range of a small income, the husky reign over that transportation kingdom will remain secure.

Rare Black Canary Prized by Fancier

Baltimore, Md. (CP) — Mrs. H. B. McElwain, wife of a Baltimore surgeon, loves canaries, but a canary is not enough. As the aristocrats wassed gold from base metals, she wants black canary.

The basement of her home sheriff with the song of 150 warblers. They're every color, even black, but the black bird is not a hybrid, and producing a black canary by cross-breeding is the trick.

No one has ever done it, says Mrs. McElwain.

The black canary is a rare strain captured in the Peruvian mountains. Wild, shy things, stakins are not easily acclimated to this country and are expensive—a pair cost $100.

Mrs. McElwain started the crossings in 1942. Aviculturists do not recognize a hybrid unless it is the product of four completed cross-breedings. The second cross-breeding is the most crucial, Mrs. McElwain said. The problem is to derive fertile eggs from a union of a first-stage hybrid stakin and a pure canary hen.

Fertile eggs laid by Mrs. McElwain's black-in in January never hatched, because of an accident. But since the second hybridization produced fertile eggs, the next eggs by the same birds may also prove fertile.

And if, as Mrs. McElwain hopes, this second crossing should give life to feathered offspring, the next two crossings will be less difficult and the mysterious black canary may finally arrive.

Just how the aristocratic hybrid will look is conjecture. It may be totally black. Or it may have yellow or green wing markings.

Hard-working Mrs. McElwain is far from annoyed by this uncertainty, however.

"That's the beauty of it," she said. "You never know exactly what to expect. It's just like alchemy."

PLATTER CHATTER:

This is a new department in our column and, by golly, will live it. However, leave us get started.

The jump king of swing, Count Basie's newest, and best recording, the "Red Bone" is on the boob. I'm sure you've heard it. It's the Count at his best.

Tommy Dorsey, the sentimental gentleman of swing, as of late has some very good vocals including "You're Driving Me Crazy," "Sunny Side of the Street" and "Opus No. 1." These are really good. Also as well worth the listening.

A novelty tune by Spike Jones is hitting a new high in record sales. It's his "cocktails for two." If you've heard it once, you will love it, and will want to hear it again.

Following in the Bing Crosby, Dinah Shore has recorded another popular ditty, "Dig You Later," that makes truly fine music.

Louis Prima has written a new hit called "Robin Hood", and it is being sung and hummed and whistled all over town. It's available on wax by Glenn Gray, Tony Pastor or Louis Prima himself.

Also on the better side are these new recordings — "Swinin' by Bing Crosby, "Why Don't You Kiss Me" by Shep Fields, "Twilite Time" by Carl Hoxsan, "Oh, Genius, See My Baby" by Kay Kyser, and "Let's Take the Long Way Home", with Bing.

Space is short but we hope you've liked it.

BOYS' SPORTS

Running in the Rain.

At approximately four-fifteen on Wednesday afternoon, an overcast sky sprinkled a shower of rain on eleven lightly-dressed boys who stood awaiting the signal to begin the five-mile cross-country race. At a word from Mr. Turner, the boys broke into a fast but loaded neat across the campus.

Thirty-four minutes later, a loyal band of students grouped on the campus saw Steve Wood speed on to the crest of Church Street hill and twenty-seven seconds later he pounded across the finish line, a professional style.

Morris Bradshaw and Duane Martin raced each other for second place and finished with times of 36:40 and 36:41 respectively. The fourth place position was taken by Leon Stafford and Jack Dodd arrived fifth. Bob Soubliere arrived with Jack Campbell in sixth and seventh places, while Vince Massey and John Geen crossed the line eighth and ninth. Terry Mossip arrived in tenth place and Bob Reid finished eleventh.

The boys all deserve a great deal of credit for the fine showing they made. Suitable prizes are being presented to the first six of these boys by the Students' Council.

For those interested in interform and all-star softball, the schedule for the week may be found in the Coming Events elsewhere in this column.

British Cabinet Standing by Waiting For News

BY FRASER WIGHTON
(Reuters Political Correspondent)

London, April 30 — (Reuters) — The cabinet is standing by for the news that may end the war at any moment — probably in the form of a fresh message from Count Folke Bernadotte, the Swedish Red Cross leader. Meanwhile authoritative circles in London reaffirm the four major points that are the great powers' conditions as a preliminary to granting Germany an armistice:

1. Unconditional surrender.

2. The offer to be made equally to Britain, the United States and Russia.

3. No disclosure to Germany by the great powers as to the terms of peace they intend to impose.

4. No favor of any kind for Himmler or any other representatives in consideration of their part in precipitating the capitulation of Germany.

May Make Statement

Prime Minister Churchill is expected to make a statement to parliament in the week ending on the facts of the situation, but there is a belief in many quarters that events themselves may anticipate Mr. Churchill.

Himmler, believed to be making his approaches with the authority of the German general staff behind him, does so with full realization that the great powers' acceptance of any offer from him merely hastens the day of his punishment as one of the major war criminals.

It is doubtful, however, whether this consideration will be permitted to weigh with him if, as is widely believed, his approaches to the Allies have been made as a result of pressure by the high command.

With Hitler, dead or alive, clearly out of the picture and Himmler apparently in undisputed administrative authority in Germany, the latter may be considered as having status to approach the Allies.

Late President Shrewd Master Of Politics

(Editor's Note—This is the last of six articles by a reporter who for ten years "covered" the late President Roosevelt for The Associated Press.)

By DOUGLAS CORNELL

Washington, April 30. — (AP) — President Roosevelt often was called a master politician—and with good reason.

He was shrewd and kept a finger constantly on the pulse of his people. He was quick to sense crowd reactions. If he felt a public sentiment clicking, he at times tried to establish a more intimate atmosphere. He made his audience chuckle with him when he took a dig at a political foe.

Much of Mr. Roosevelt's campaigning was done by indirection. Reporters talked about his sure touch on "non-political" speeches on trips.

One of those trips stands out. We learned of it first in mid-summer of 1936 at a press conference which also showed how he delighted in getting reporting guidelines.

He told of plans to make a personal inspection of the dust bowl, and of arrangements to consult with governors along the way.

One conference would be held at Des Moines. He ticked off the governors invited to meet him there: The Governor of Iowa, the Governor of Nebraska, the Governor of Kansas, the Governor of —.

"Governor Kansas!" someone gasped.

"Sure, why not" he came back. M. Landon—the Republican nominee for President.

There was a master stroke. Mr. Landon scarcely could turn down a bid to join in a general discussion of the drought calamity. Yet the conference was bound to give him a secondary role. The conference came off as scheduled and Mr. Landon showed up.

Mr. Roosevelt toured the dust bowl, talking personally to dozens of farmers in their fields, telling them help was coming.

He didn't suggest that anybody vote for him that Fall. He didn't need to.

ASSEMBLY

The main feature of our assembly this week was to have been the showing of films concerning the Eighth Victory Loan, but these films failed to arrive. Therefore, the period was rather short, and consisted merely of announcements and regular assembly activities.

COMING EVENTS

Week of Monday, April 30 to Monday, May 7.

As far as softball is concerned this week is full, none and after four both. Weather permitting the following all-star games will be played this week.

Monday April 30—Because of rain the All Star League which was to open last Friday will open today instead with what promises to be a battle royal between Grade XIII and Grade IX.

Tuesday, May 1—The postponed game of last Friday will be played today, tenth and twelfth grades being the participants. These two teams have a wide range of material to pick from and a real scrap is expected.

Wednesday, May 2—This is the feature game of the week and should attract the largest crowd. The masters will tee-off with seventh grade. Last year the masters beat a school All-star team and who can forget the eleventh grade of All-star rugby fame (except maybe 12th). This will be an interesting game to either watch or participate in.

Thursday, May 3—This is strictly a lower school affair—ninth versus tenth. Looking over the size of some of the newcomers to the school we could make a prediction as to the outcome of this game, but in all fairness we won't.

Friday, May 4—Middle school fans have an opportunity to see their favorites in action this afternoon when eleventh and twelfth tangle in an All-star game which should hold the interest of the largest part of the school.

So get away from baseball by something decidedly more restful we suggest the Teen-age Club on Friday night. In an atmosphere far from heat of the torrid baseball diamond, we feel this will round off a perfect week.

Note—An added bit of interest this week will be the presentation of the prizes to the winners and runners-up of the five mile cross-country run. This ceremony will take place in the Assembly on Wednesday. These fellows deserve everything they get, considering the conditions under which the race was run.

Monday, May 7—The all-star game today, according to the law of averages, should be the best played game of the schedule. Mr. Townsend, along with several others, contends that this game should be held off to the end of the schedule, but that is the way it is drawn up, so it's Monday, May 7, Masters vs. XIII.

Tonight is also opening night for the Rivenia Revue "Pack Up Your Troubles". Among the performers are a large number of B.C.I. students who have put a lot of time and trouble into this effort. The seats are all reserved at fifty cents, seventy-five cents and one dollar and entire proceeds are going to the aid of the camp for underprivileged children. So, along with seeing a great show, you will be doing your bit for those less fortunate than yourself. Remember the nights, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 7, 8 and 9. That's the schedule for this week. We hope you like it.

FRIENDSHIP GROWS ON FERTILE GROUND

THIS friendship between the British Commonwealth and the United States began generations ago, when courageous pioneers from England first tilled the soil of the New World. This friendship has endured through the years.

Today England and America must remain together for the benefit of world security. Bound by close ties to the historic soil of both nations, we of Canada can help in many ways the growth of this great partnership. Long the friend of both, we can interpret one to the other... foster the mutual understanding that is deep-rooted in the past.

We as individuals...and as a nation...are proud of our privilege to further the comradeship between John Bull and Uncle Sam.

FUGITIVE ON A DUDE RANCH

STEPHEN PAYNE

CHAPTER 6

"I decided I'd stand a lot better chance of landing a job on the 'T Slash, where I just had to get a job, if I made a nickname and didn't let on I was a greenhorn. So I... hit on Cinders Malloy, a cowpoke I'd seen in Miss Farnsworth's store, but with all her dough it couldn't buy her any looks and spoiled Effie's everybody to jump when she snaps her fingers. At the 'T Slash they're all primed up to jump, too."

"High-hat, spoiled," repeated Nancy under her breath. Aloud she inquired, "Mind if I ask the first two or three questions?"

"Go ahead, miss—please, that I am. I let on I could rope. Were you putting something over that day we met at Cayley's garage?, that war you were decked out, and driving a car that must have cost plenty."

"Then you never knew I was the whose car that was?"

"Never guessed it no. I'd seen the chauffeur driving it a few times, and he'd left his fateful name tube at Cayley's. Whose car was it?... No, by jimminy crickets, I wouldn't now that I've found you tonight wearing such very different clothes and walking on a wyoming road all alone if—if I don't want to offend you, would you have been playing at being a rich young lady that day?

"You sure did. I mean? The maid in this high-up family, finding herself alone, dolls up in her mistress' clothes. The cat's in the garage—but there's no one around to tell what the maid does, so—"

"So the maid goes driving all alone and meets the tall, good-looking garage mechanic." Nancy took up the story. "Only she doesn't dare tell him who she really is. Then he? Sometime later, somewhere in the wilds of Wyoming, on a lonely road this same maid meets the same man. Now that he finds her sailing under her true colors he can—Cinders, you haven't discovered your real talent. You should write romances."

"That's what she really was the way of it! You were working for those oil folks, I take it?"

Nancy's gay laugh rippled forth through the night. "Asked all my questions yet. The name, Cinders, is Roberta Rowland. But call me Bobbie. And I'm not Miss Farnsworth's maid. I'm only a greenhorn, might be a relation of Bobbie. Perhaps Donald Sturgis would have—"

"Donald Sturgis!"

"Exactly. I was riding out from Andrews with your Mr. Parnwell and the guest from the East. The car quit on me, and I started walking. It's been a long walk, too, Cinders."

"So—so it is a game of you to start out for help. How in the world did you get to Andrews, Miss Dude ranch, Bobbie? Much less land a job there?"

"Saw an advertisement. I've been dying to ask how you ever heard of the 'T Slash, and why you felt you must get a job in this one particular place."

Heretofore the young man had shown no hesitation. But now he cleared his throat twice before he said: "Perhaps I can tell you all about that later. I was afraid my luck had run out on me when at last I did get there."

The friendly grin ran across his ruddy face once again as he continued, "I modestly informed old Sol and that aclamp-ringed and kind of an Eliz Arden named Lanky Lem, that I was easily the best all 'round hand who ever strolled in uninvited.

"Not until then did I learn it is really Mrs. Ruth Parnwell who is the boss of the ranch. Possibly because she fell for my line, or out of sheer pity, she gave me a berth in the bunkhouse and then introduced me to a saw and an ax and a woodpile. After supper I was told where to find the milk pails and the cream separator, as well as the cows, the chickens, the calves and pigs to be fed.

"I'd much rather have been with Shorty and Gabby, who were out moving a bunch of stock toward some distant pasture. By the way, those cowboys were going to hold their herd in this lane tonight, sort of camping behind the cows to keep 'em from drifting back home. Did you see them, Bobbie?"

"Why, why, my hands be milking contract satisfactory, Cinders!" asked Nancy quickly.

"We—I mean Shorty, Jake went along to show me the ropes. He did quite a bit of studying about something or other and I think he's still sort of dazed. I had a hunch to myself eventually before old Sol ordered me to crawl up this truck and drive back with Jimtown to spot Tony and the all-important steel. Which reminds me, Miss Farnsworth is waiting somewhere on the heady trail. In the dark."

Nancy put her hand on Cinders' arm and in the liquid darkness her eyes met his. "Please go to the 'T Slash first, Cinders, and leave me before you rescue the all-important guest and Tony."

"But, Bobbie—maybe you still don't realize how finding you're just ordinary folks like the makes me feel glad all over—I really should get Miss Farnsworth at once. Not much room in this front seat, but you could ride in the back with Tony."

"He wouldn't enjoy that and neither would I, Cinders. I'm tired," she let her head drop against his shoulder, "and I'm sleepy and my head aches. I'm so hungry besides, so please take me to the ranch. I'll see you there in the—"

"You poor, worn-out kid," symphathized Cinders. "Hop right aboard, turning the truck. "I haven't known you very long, but I've got a feeling you'll always come first with me. You're that kind of a girl, Bobbie!"

Nancy curled up on her side of the seat, nestling her head in the hollow. How about confiding in this ruddy-faced and likeable young cowboy?

But—as soon as Cinders learned her true identity there would be gulf between them a gulf he would regard unscalable. She didn't want that to happen. Alone in this strange new world, she did so need this young man's friendship, his sincerity, his friendship, his help. No, she couldn't tell him just yet—not now.

Good heavens! What was he saying now? Cinders Malloy isn't my real name. The Cinders part occurred when, while I was being reared on the blind baggage and I adopted it because I thought Sol Percivell was into believing I wasn't a rank greenhorn. Might be a relation of Bobbie. Perhaps Donald Sturgis would have—

"Donald Sturgis!"

In the dimness of the cab the man could see Nancy's face, nor could he know her memory had leaped back to the sheriff at Jimtown, who, at the instigation of Nancy's own guardian, was looking for Donald Sturgis to arrest him.

The car bounced and Cinders took the right-hand fork, the truck sliding down a long, gradual slope among the fragrant pines. "Why did my name surprise you, Bobbie?"

She was silent for so long he thought she might have fallen asleep. But when he reached out intending to put his arm protectively about her shoulders, she drew away. "Please don't!" But an instant later she asked timidly, "Cinders, does any one on the 'T Slash know you're Donald Sturgis?"

"No one except you, Bobbie. Does that name matter?"

"Yes." She placed a soft hand on his firm-muscled right arm. "Cinders, please don't tell them. Don't ask me why or the wherefore, but don't tell anybody—not anybody that you're Donald Sturgis."

"O.K. I believe I can trust you to keep your knowledge to them some, Bobbie. . . . Here we are at the ranch."

The truck crossed a shaky bridge spanning a willow-bordered Jim Creek, and drew up before a low log building.

"Home, cookshack," Cinders announced. "And I happen to know there's a pot of coffee and some fixing off the kitchen. For a neighbor you have Ike Skittles, a real cook who's been a mule skinner and freighting. I'll wake him and tell him to make you some eggs and fry a couple of first-class of course, for you won't be bluffing like I am."

Nancy opened one eye and in the gray light of the cab looked out at an unfamiliar ceiling. The insistent ringing at her door that had awakened her began again, so she pried open the other eye and called, "What is it?"

"Time to roll out, miss. I've sent a pitcher o' hot water what you can grab it."

Nancy looked around the unfamiliar room, a tiny room with rough log walls, one small window close to the ground, and one door. A frowsy old bearskin of a rug covered a portion of the floor of pine floor. Some unfamiliar clothing hung on the only chair. Across from the sway-backed cot upon which she lay stood a packing-box dresser. Above it hung a six-by-ten lookingglass and two scanty towels. The coarse scarf was a newspaper on which rested a white enamel washbasin and water pitcher and a small kerosene lamp.

Tossing back the covers, Nancy sat on the edge of the cot and looked about for her dressing gown, then looked at her clothes and saw none. Roberta Rowland was sojourning in the home of Nancy Harper of her neighbors of her flaunting silk pajamas, of everything which declared reflection in the small mirror Whenever before did you have to dress underwear, Nancy Eleanor Smith? Would Pauline be shocked? Would she scream or faint if she saw this room. But—I why, I like it!

In the adjoining room Nancy heard the roaring of a great wood fire, the rattle of pots and pans. Then footsteps as some one walked into the Skittles' kitchen and said, "Morning, Ike. I see you've put some warm water outside Bobbie's door. I'll eat this sandwich while in the—flivver—beside the water pitcher."

Another voice returned, "Takin' quite some parental interest in the new girl, ain't you Cinders?"

"Yes, sir. Do you mind, Ike?... Where's the milk buckets? And say, don't give me away, will you? Tell you how do you go about it to draw the milk out of a cow?"

"A-Ca'n't she . . best milkin' machine ever was invented," said Ike Skittles with a dry chuckle. "He wrings his wrists 'round a tea cup pulls on the pressure. You try wrappin' your fist 'round a tea an' doin' likewise. Your hands is big 'nuff to have plenty grip in 'em."

"Thanks a lot, Ike."

Cinders Malloy went out whistling "I'm forever Blowing Bubbles." And Nancy, Roberta Rowland, one hundred per cent better and braver just because that jolly blurter had called her a girl, put on the cheap plaid skirt and scarlet blouse that Roberta Rowland had tossed on the near-silk stockings, one with a long run and one with a hole in the toe, and cracked and dusty shoes.

She opened the door and took in the pitcher of warm water, also Roberta Rowland's silver suitcase and suddenly straightened to her full height, standing taut-nerved and still. Sight of the silver suitcase recalled something forgotten since last night in the excitement of changing identities with Roberta Rowland. Nancy's pearls and also the stocks and bonds inherited from her father, and belonging solely to her and her two younger sisters, were still in her own trunk-locker.

Oh, well, Roberta would not be likely to pry into the locker—why, she wouldn't even know it existed. Nancy would get the things, cache them away somewhere in her room. With a shrug that dismissed all thought of locks and danger, she washed her face, combed her wavy hair into glistening waves, and stepped out into the big kitchen where Ike Skittles was doing half a dozen things at once.

The cook was wizened and old and bald-headed. He was a gay old-ster, with alert eyes, a Roman nose and an enormous flowing mustache that was yellowed with straw. With no loss of time in shifting from one task to another, he burned beefsteak sizzling in two large frying pans, stirred cereal in a huge double boiler, filled the teakettle and poured boiling water into a blackened coffeepot, and then resumed cutting out biscuits and dropping them into baking pans. None of these activities interfered with his conversation.

"Mornin', Bobbie. Hope you slept good. Glad to see you, too, Elister my fellocks, 'if I ain't.'. Hey, you're purty much lookin' at twic'. Didn't get a right good squint at you las' night, but maow I'm tellin' you now I'm them constantly glad you can hold a candle to you for looks for cheese!"

Nancy smiled her most devastating smile. "Thank you, Ike. I'm glad I won't hurt your eyes."

"It's nice, but it' has certain drawbacks likewise. I see what all them dang cowboys'll be clutterin' up my kitchen. Don't let the adjuts turn your head, li'le gal."

"I won't, Ike," she laughed, and Nancy. "What do you want me to do now?"

She slapped the biscuits into the oven, wiped his hands on his flour-sack apron, and proceeded to the numerous pans on the red-hot cook stove. "Scramble a dozen the nearest one o' them ten tables in yander. Get a big jug o' milk; a couple o' jugs o' cream and bring 'em some with milk. It's in the refrigerator where you'll see quarter. This door Bobbie. Get butter, too. Then you can dish' out this grub when—"

"By golliks, am I tickled to get a girl!" was Cinders' comment on rage and since them eastern dudes served in, I got to set two breakfasts rag'lar all-a-time nowadays. This is here's the fust one. It's for the hired help. Mrs. Percivell gits 'round to eat then, though Sol don't, not since he's larn' bother meal comin' up long 'bout seven-thirty to night, for times to eat with the gussis and tell 'em stories he knows danged well none o' his companions believe or even listen to no more.

"Tony, he used to miss breakfast most all the time. Now he gangles in here after them dudes is done chewin' on account of likin' to swell out his chest and act biggity in front of them. Purty soon Tony is take no int'rest in nothin' on the ranch, I reckon. Now he's got him a pinto calfskin vest and other truck like a movie-pitcher cowboy."

Ike Skittles snorted contemptuously through his eaglebeak nose. "You won't see Tony a-doin' no fancy stunts though, not hoss-back, nor with his lariat neither, 'cause he can't. Flash Taylor, he's the dude wrangler, has got is all over him thataway. Lanky Lem picked Flash up some place 'rother after Lanky and Ma Perrivell talked over how to make a go o' this dude ranch business, which looked to be a failure. And say woman an' she's had a 'raw deal,' wouldn't never jest 'tackled it she hadn't been right up spin it."

Nancy, hurrying back and forth between the room, kitchen and dining room, listened eagerly and caught most of the old cook's monologue. Evidently it would not take Ike long to get her the "lowdown" on everybody at the 'T Slash.

Piling large platters along the kitchen table and bidding Bobbie "grab the oatmeal pot and fill 'em," Ike continued:

"Flash Taylor's the kind o' fellow that can ride around a dude ranch for to please them towerists, Elister. I'm definick it if it ain't a trade all to itself, this dude wrangl'in'. Heaps o' cowboys used to wear they'd rather die than hang it to. Keep it up, 'Skittle' herd on a flock o' grasshoppers. I'll start with it!' But plenty of 'em comin' 'round nowadays.

"Cowboys hag to do a sight o' changin' and adaptin' 'ourselves. We all has. Take the hands right here fon this old ranch. They're cowboys part of the time, pinch hay, irrigate, build fence, does whatever has to be done the rest o' the time. In fact the miners never hired no outside help to hptid them shanties for 'em.

"Got oatmeal on the table? Yep. Heavy oger, cream, sugar? Then a hunk o' dron you'll see layin' by the door and bang that steel triangle 'round to eat!"

Nancy stepped outside the dining-room door and banged the triangle." As its not unmusical echoes rang back from the nearer hills the like of which she'd never heard in the whole of the 'T Slash ranch by daylight. She stood entranced until the tinkle-key of Jim Creek, the willow-lined stream in front of the cabin, the trilows, upstream from the cookshack she saw corrals, a squatty stable with hay roof, a shack, a smaller shed and a large building she judged to be the bunkhouse. Another building whose wide doors stood open proved to be a garage. Above burned into a plank: "Stackamith Shop." In front of this stood the ranch truck and the car that last night ridden with Cinders Malloy through the night. The station behind the truck was the dilapidated old flivver which had let Tony down completely.

Farther to the left, across the stream, the girl saw a densely wooded hillside beyond which lifted the mountains of the Continental. Her eyes went up said up to find its snow-topped crest against the blue sky, and then, with a gasp of sunlight peeping on the mountain peaks like a crown of gold, silver and saffron, and this, coupled with the mountains' air, the scent of chasma, made the girl catch her breath sharply, awed by the sublimity of a mountain sunrise.

Not Greatly Concerned

L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, revealed in a broadcast last night that Canada is not greatly concerned with the privilege of a great power to veto any enforcement action against it if it assumes the role of an aggressor.

Each of the five powers with permanent seats on the Security Council and the right of veto, is pledged to keep the peace. "If it breaks that pledge," Mr. Pearson said, "its right to veto or the absence of that right is of little practical consequence." The potential value of the Security Council would be ended if one of its members assumed the role of an aggressor.

The yard beyond the high fence was bare. Not a soul was in sight, but the Americans approaching saw and two S.S. officers cache out of the building behind a white flag.

"The Red Cross man said the real heads of the camp had fled and placed these two fellows in charge of the camp last night", Brig.-Gen. Maurice Linden, deputy commander of the 42nd division, said.

"I accepted their surrender, locked the two of them in a jeep and drove them down to the front and made them look. One S.S. fellow asked for safe custody".

False Rumor of German Surrender Did Not Start Any Celebrating Here

The false rumor that the Germans had offered unconditional surrender on Saturday night, and which was termed a "comedy of misunderstanding" by high-ranking American officials, had little chance to start celebrations in the city. President Truman of the United States quickly and promptly killed the rumor in the bud and this announcement was greeted quickly on the heels of the false report.

Belleville residents who were at home apparently showed no attitude toward celebration, feeling that something of definite import might be forthcoming.

Much Few Signs

Downtown, however, the news quickly spread and a large number of people, especially those who were shopping in department stores, rushed for the nearest counter. Several bought the bunting and were ready to start celebrating when the news came that the rumor was false. Then, the impending announcement of the broadcasts.

There was little or no movement on the main thoroughfares. In the editorial rooms of this newspaper and the staff was standing by for developments, telephones rang but a few times, and these calls asked if any confirmation had been received.

A few people milled around newspaper bulletin boards, but showed no excitement when official report confirmed the news that the rumor was false.

Official authorities acted quickly, however. County Attorney Bryce C. Donnan immediately got the police and fire departments alerted and called as many members of reserve army units as were available.

Few Peace Celebrations.
(By the Associated Press)

A wave of excitement swept Canada during the weekend with the mature report of Germany's unconditional surrender but peace demonstrations were few and far between as the nation generally adopted a watch-and-wait attitude.

Except for Montreal—only city to react in a big way—and a few war-fashion—any tendency to celebrate was checked by an appeal by President Truman's denial. But demonstrations continued in Montreal until the early-night drizzle of rain dampened the proceedings.

Thousands of Montrealers jammed the streets shouting and singing, even after the denial. Downtown could hardly more on uptown St. Catherine Street. Flags appeared everywhere. Night clubs and restaurants closed. Only a few sections of the city remained quiet.

No celebrations were reported from the Maritimes.

Police in Ottawa and Hull, Que., kept across the river, were being ordered to close night clubs and amusement places when President Truman's denial was broadcast.

Toronto was quiet. Most citizens, apparently by their radios and crowds at theatres were not informed of the report until they were leaving the theatres when they met on both the report and denial.

At St. Thomas, Ont., the report caused an unprecedented rush of flag buyers. Stocks in some stores were almost depleted by 9 p.m. At Brantford, flags were flying all the main street.

In Western Canada, where news of the report came much earlier because of the time difference, the report was received quietly.

Local Officials And Wives Attend C.I.O. Banquet

Seventy-five stewards and chairmen of the Local 456 U.A.W.-C.I.O. from the four Belleville plants of Reliance Insulators, Corbrico, Consolidated Optical and the Belleville Bargain Store, with their wives, attended the first annual banquet of the Stewart's Council held at the Quinte Hotel on Friday evening.

International representative of the UAW-CIO, Jack Brooker, of this city, acted as master of ceremonies for the banquet, progress which included brief addresses, by organization officials, a social period and entertainment by artists under Mr. Bill Nevin.

Assistant Regional Director for Region No. 7 at Windsor was the guest speaker of the evening and told his listenery that trade unions were here to stay. He urged workers to be interested not only in pay checks but to work with their management in the solving of production plans. Stewards and chairmen were urged not to be "shop-minded" alone but to make an honest effort to work for every member and get equal pay for equal work.

Other speakers heard during the evening were Ken Bailey, vice president of Local 436 UAW-CIO, who stated that Union organization three years ago the local organization had about 75 members and membership of over 1,000 workers. James Smith, International Representative, indicated that Unions had been responsible for an increase in wages for union members in Belleville. He would like to see all Belleville factories organized.

James Lownie, chairman of the evening's entertainment, called on Mrs. Mabel Mayne, regional director of women's auxiliaries, UAW-CIO, were several speakers heard during the evening.

REDS DO NOT

"The Germans fear it more than anything we have. It is wonderful."

The Russians are not using any Nazi tactics, he said, adding that he praised American and Canadian fighting tactics and grinned more than ever when they talked of the Jerps which they use everywhere.

"They call them Jeeps."

We asked Prokop about Red Army rations and he said: "we are well fed." They get a lot of American canned food, including bacon, and with it they eat a grey bread and drink tea. Each soldier is issued under a quarter of a pound daily.

His long advances the Russians use a lot of captured German food stocks, although they have supply problem. Soviet soldiers all look hard as well as our own.

They are interested in all of the news and had the latest information on the Sicily invasion. Reference through the army newspaper, Red Star, and the Moscow radio.

A full colored from Moscow who has been in the army 27 years, came over the Zhbe and got caught directly in the German counter-attack. He got right on the international fighting Communist Party and can be friendly with the capitalist Russians as Soviet and British Empire. There is no problem. It was all settled by the Big Three. They know what they are doing. Were friends as soldiers in the field and can be friends as civilians. The soldier's way of looking at it and it is okay for all of us."

He said when the Russians capture German towns they leave German civilian in charge as an action against them, adding "we're fighting the war, not you women and kids."

Red Star correspondents are all commissioned officers and two of them were Lt.-Col. Ehrenburg, playwright and author, and Major Alexander Werth, British correspondent who told the Red Army's success to the Commander in Chief. Russian field commanders learned to employ artillery and tanks together, making artillery support of tanks by no one without reference to higher command.

That one generalization was all that could be made. Russian soldiers had been no political commissars in the Red Army since December, 1942.

I asked the correspondents if Russian soldiers were fully aware of the exploits of the Canadian army in their front and they seemed pretty a great deal of news on the Canadians. They knew the names of the exploits of the Canadian army in their front and they seemed pretty a great deal of news on the Canadians. They knew the names of the officers and they considered them fine soldiers as their own Siberian troops who had fought in the Far East campaign.

"After all Canada is the country closest to us," added Major Krivitsky.

Police Blotter

James Watson, 174 Mary Street, wasn't exactly in an amicable state of mind when he reported that his garage pail had been damaged over the weekend. According to Mr. Watson's report the garage pail's garage pail had been knocked into the middle of the road by a passing motor leaving the container of little use or value.

City police apprehended a ten-year-old lad in a local restaurant late Saturday night. The boy was attempting to procure a meal and had previously annoyed cafe employees seeking free food. He was taken to the Police Station and subsequently turned over to the Children's Aid Society authorities.

The second phase of the day-of-war was launched in the afternoon by the North Nova Scotia Highlanders, Lord Strathcona's Horse, the Highland Light Infantry of Canada, Algonquin Regiment, Ont. and the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Cornwall, Ont., battalions which make up the 5th Brigade. These troops captured more than 400 prisoners and cleared two complete villages, Hilkenbrook, north of Leer, and Heisfelde, south of the same city, before the Leda and Ems. Canadian casualties were comparatively light, although the Germans fought hard.

Not Greatly Concerned

L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, revealed in a broadcast last night that Canada is not greatly concerned with the privilege of a great power to veto any enforcement action against it if it assumes the role of an aggressor.

Each of the five powers with permanent seats on the Security Council and the right of veto, is pledged to keep the peace. "If it breaks that pledge," Mr. Pearson said, "its right to veto or the absence of that right is of little practical consequence." The potential value of the Security Council would be ended if one of its members assumed the role of an aggressor.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—The industrial and gold groups were higher in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange and small losses were netted by the western oils and the base metals. Trading was heavy in the first hour and quieter thereafter, resulting in aggregate volume of 2,480,000 shares for the first three hours.

East Sullivan staged a spectacular advance, climbing to $6 for a gain of 1.90 over the last close. Assays of the latest drill core providing the buying stimulant. Other golds, including Duquesne, Senator, Sullivan, Cochenour Willans, Hosco, Eldona, Donalda, Quemont, Aumaque and Tech Hughes, all posted substantial gains.

Loss of 8 cents by Steep Rock was the main change in the base metals and in the western oils Vermilata changed hands in heavy volume at a gain of 1 to 2 cents.

The industrial share department showed strength in the utility, steel and senior groups.

WALL STREET

New York, April 30 (AP)—Cautious profit taking stalled many stocks in today's market although real weakness was lacking and assorted issues managed to keep in the plus ranks. Losses running to a point or so were reduced in most cases or converted into gains near the fourth hour. Dealings were moderately active.

Contesting the trend with fair success were Chrysler, Gimbel, J. C. Penney, Public Service of N.J., and Baltimore and Ohio. Backward movers included U.S. Steel, Goodrich, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Kennecott and Westinghouse.

Lake Shore firmed 1-4 at midday. Distillers Seagrams was off 1 1-4, Canadian Pacific 3-8 and Dome Mines 1-8.

Richmond Hill, Ont., April 30 — (CP) — Ill health will prevent Postmaster-General Mulock from accepting renomination as candidate for York North in the June 11 Federal election, it was announced Saturday at a nominating convention which chose J. False Rumor of German Surrender Did Not Start Any Celebrating Here

The false rumor that the Germans had offered unconditional surrender on Saturday night, and which was termed a "comedy of misunderstanding" by high-ranking American officials, had little chance to start celebrations in the city. President Truman of the United States, quickly and promptly nipped the rumor in the bud and this announcement followed quickly on the heels of the false report.

Radio commentators of some of the networks broke into current programs with the announcement that Germany had surrendered "but this was not to be taken as official."

Press cable services quickly rounded up resident members in the provincial cities and editors and reporters stood by for further developments. They were not long coming. A few minutes after the first announcement, President Truman stated he had been in touch with General Eisenhower, who denied any knowledge of German surrender.

Belleville residents who were at home apparently showed no attitude toward celebration, feeling that something of a definite nature might be forthcoming.

Rush For Flags.

Downtown, however, the news quickly spread and a large number of people, especially those who were shopping in department stores, rushed for the flags counter. Several bought the bunting and were all set for a general celebration when the news came that the rumor was false. Theatres made no announcement of the broadcasts.

There was little or no movement on the main thoroughfares. In the editorial rooms of this newspaper where the staff was standing by for developments, telephones rang but a few times, and these calls asked if any confirmation had been received.

A few people milled around newspaper bulletin boards, but showed no surprise when official reports confirmed the news that the rumor was false.

Official authorities acted quickly, however. Crown Attorney Bryson C. Donnan immediately got the wheels of his department moving and called as many members of reserve army units as were available.

Few Peace Celebrations.
(By The Canadian Press)

A wave of excitement swept Canada during the weekend with premature report of Germany's unconditional surrender but peace demonstrations were few and far between as the nation generally adopted a watch-and-wait attitude.

Except for Montreal—only city to react in anything like end-of-the-war fashion—any tendency towards celebration was squelched by President Truman's denial. But demonstrations continued in Montreal until a late-night drizzle of rain dampened the proceedings.

Thousands of Montrealers jammed the streets shouting and singing, even after the denial. Street cars could hardly move on uptown St. Catherine Street. Flags appeared like magic. Night clubs and restaurants closed. Only a few sections of the city remained quiet.

No celebrations were reported from the Maritimes.

Police in Ottawa and Hull, Que., just across the river, were being ordered to close night clubs and amusement places when President Truman's statement was broadcast. Night clubs remained open as usual.

Toronto was quiet. Most citizens remained by their radios and crowds at theatres were not informed of the report until they were leaving. Then they were given both the report and denial.

At St. Thomas, Ont., the report caused an unprecedented rush of flag buyers. Stocks in some stores were almost depleted by 9 p.m. At nearby Aylmer, flags were flying on the main street.

In Western Canada, where news of the report was received earlier because of the time difference, the report was received quietly.

Local Officials And Wives Attend C.I.O. Banquet

Seventy-five stewards and chairmen of the Local 426 UAW-CIO from the four Belleville plants of Reliance Industries, Corbins, Consolidated Optical and the Belleville Sargent, with their wives, attended the first annual banquet of the St. Eward's Council held at the Quinte Hotel on Friday evening.

International representative of the UAW-CIO, Mr. Fred Brookes, of this city, acted as master of ceremonies for the evening's program which included brief addresses by organization officials, a social period and community sing-song led by Mr. Bill Navin.

Assistant Regional Director for Region No. 7 at Windsor was the guest speaker of the evening and told his listeners that trade unions were here to stay. He urged workers to be interested not only in pay checks but to work with their management for better working conditions. Stewards and chairmen were urged not to take office for prestige alone but to make an honest effort to work for every member and get equal pay for equal work.

Other speakers heard during the evening were Mr. Clare Ridley, president of Local 426 UAW-CIO, who stated that from a beginning three years ago the local organization had grown to have a membership of over 1,000 workers. James Smith, International Representative, indicated the Union had been responsible for an increase in wages for union members in Belleville. He would like to see all Belleville factories organized.

James Lownie, chairman of the steward's council, at Oshawa, and Mrs. Mabel Mayne, regional director of women's auxiliaries, UAW-CIO, were other speakers heard during the evening.

REDS DO NOT

"The Germans fear it more than anything we have. It is wonderful."

The Russians are not using any American or British artillery but praised American and Canadian-built trucks and grinned more than ever when they talked of the jeeps which they use everywhere.

They call them "Villys."

We asked Prokop about Red Army rations and he said "we eat good." They get a lot of American canned food, including bacon, and with it they eat a grey bread and drink tea. Each soldier is issued nearly a quarter of schnapps daily.

In long advances the Russians use a lot of captured German food stocks, relieving their own supply problem. Soviet soldiers all look just as well fed as our own.

They are right abreast of the news and had the latest information on the San Francisco conference through the army newspaper, Red Star, and the Moscow radio.

A full colonel from Moscow who has been in the army 27 years, came over the Elbe and got caught willingly in a barrage of questions. He got right on the international theme, saying "Communist Russia can be friendly with the capitalist United States and British Empire. There is no problem. It was all settled by the Big Three. They know what they are doing. We're friends as soldiers in the field and can be friends always. That's the soldier's way of looking at it and it is okay for all of us."

He said when the Russians capture German towns they leave German civilians there and take no action against them, adding "we're fighting the German army, not women and kids."

The Red Army has no non-fraternization rules but it's never done anyway.

Red Star correspondents are all commissioned officers and two of them were Lt.-Col. Semenov, playwright and author, and Major Alexander Krivitsky. They attributed the Red Army's success to the manner in which Russian field commanders learned to employ artillery and tanks together, making immediate decision on the spot without reference to higher commands.

That one generalization was all they would give. They said there had been no political commissars in the Red Army since December, 1942.

I asked the correspondents if Russian soldiers knew anything of the exploits of the Canadian army and they said they did not receive a great deal of news on the Canadians but, from what they heard, they considered them fine soldiers as their own Siberian troops who are among the crack Russian units.

"After all Canada is the country closest to us," added Major Krivitsky.

Police Blotter

James Watson, 174 Mary Street, wasn't exactly in an amicable state of mind when he reported his garbage pail had been damaged over the weekend. According to Mr. Watson's report the family garbage pail had been knocked into the street and run over by a passing motor leaving the container of little use or value.

City police apprehended a ten-year-old lad in a local restaurant late Saturday night. The boy was attempting to procure a meal and had previously annoyed cafe employees seeking free food. He was taken to the police station and subsequently turned over to the Children's Aid Society authorities.

CANUCKS MENACE

In northwest Holland across the Ems Estuary from Emden, the Canadians around the Delfzijl pocket reduced their radius to 1½ miles around that coast town.

Leer, guardian to Emden, was in Canadian hands with the only resistance coming from snipers yesterday after a three-pronged assault took the Highlanders over the Ems and Leda, which joins the Ems just south of Leer.

The assault across 200 feet of water was launched in the afternoon by the North Nova Scotia Highlanders, Amherst and Truro, the Highland Light Infantry of Canada, Galt and Kitchener, Ont., and the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Cornwall, Ont.—battalions which make up the 9th. Brigade. (As of February, they were 3rd. Division Regiments.)

Capture 400 Prisoners.

These troops captured more than 400 prisoners and cleared two companies of Germans from the point of land formed by junction of the Leda and Ems. Canadian casualties were comparatively light, although some losses were suffered in the river crossings and shelling from big guns guarding Emden.

Under cover of a smoke screen, the Glens and H.L.I. stormed across the Ems at 3 p.m. Saturday after a terrific artillery barrage. The North Novas launched their assault against the Leer across the Leda River which parallels the southern edge of the town.

"We never expected it would go so well," said a division officer who watched the assault. "The Germans seemed completely stupefied."

Enemy Surprised.

Gen. Crerar's manoeuvre caught the enemy by surprise. The Germans had expected an attack in the Oldenburg sector rather than around Leer.

The Glens were the most northern battalion and made a direct west-east crossing while the H.L.I. drifted downstream in assault boats to land on either side of the peninsula formed by the Ems-Leda junction. Apart from desultory and distant artillery fire which inflicted light casualties, the Germans made no attempt to prevent the landings.

FAMED FORTRESS ON STEEP ROCK

By HAL BOYLE

(A.P. War Correspondent)

With the American Troops in Germany — One of the most famous Rhineland fortresses to fall to American arms is Ehrenbreitstein, both a military stronghold since the Roman days.

Stars and Stripes flew from it today.

And today, over this citadel from which for half the last tenth of the First World War army of occupation left Germany for the United States, the American flag symbolically flies again.

Among the officers at the fort were some who were there when the Stars and Stripes were hauled down 22 years ago—for what they thought then would be the final time.

"Nobody knows then we will pull it down from the Germans," Ragnolo, now," one of them said.

The fortress overlooks Coblenz. It is located on steep rock cliffs on the east bank 386 feet above the stream opposite the mouth of the Moselle River.

Roman invaders 2,000 years ago were quick to see the value of the rock as a protective position. They built a camp there. More than a thousand years later it was rebuilded, in the year 1160, and subsequently the Elector John, Marquard de Eden, repaired and enlarged it.

By 1795,

The French army blockaded Ehrenbreitstein after crossing the Rhine in 1795 and twice in the following year besieged it again. The French blockaded it once more in 1798. It fell the next year and when the French evacuated it in 1801 they blew up its defences.

Its walls during the years have been expanded to reconstruct the battlements, which fell easily to American infantrymen.

Now the fortress is just a place where military tourists can enjoy one of the most notable views of the Rhineland valley.

In nearby Ehrenbreitstein town (pop. 4,000) in the course of recent years converted into 4 hotel structures under Nazi rule, is the most literary figure, once stayed in 1774. The town lies between the fortress Ehrenbreitstein and fortress Asterstein to the south, which is smaller and less renowned.

Rome, April 30 — (AP) — The Italian government today condoned the summary execution of Benito Mussolini and other topflight Fascists by northern patriots, and the Rome press hailed the action as ending the way for the establishment of real democracy in Italy.

Mario Berlinguer, high commissioner for the punishment of Fascists, and Luigi Longo, declared that Mussolini had met the fate he deserved. Berlinguer pointed out that the Committee of National Liberation for Northern Italy had been given full authority by the government to exercise full powers in setting up Italy's future.

Typical of press comment was this declaration from the Risorgimento Liberale, organ of the Liberal party:

"With the death of Mussolini disappears the most evident incarnation of the evil of this century."

The newspaper added that "the end of Mussolini and the imminent end of Hitler are tremendous warnings to those who aspire to the dictatorship of the proletariat or Twilight of Left."

The newspaper, Il Momento asserted that a "purge, which is necessary for moral reconstruction of the country, is only on the initial phase and cannot end simply with some dozens of executions."

RUMORS

Curried Mussolini's corpse.

Bernadotte was reported to have gone back to Germany Saturday and Sunday night to see Deputy Nyboer said he had handed the German mark on his return to Stockholm after seeing Hitler again. It was suggested that he had carried some sort of an offer of surrender to the Gestapo chief.

The London Daily Mail, quoting "a high official in White Hall," said Monday that Hitler was dying or already dead and that when Berlin fell the war in Europe could be regarded as finished. The Mail's correspondent said Messrs. Churchill and Truman talked "more than once" by telephone Saturday afternoon Sunday.

"It is only be a matter of days now — it may be only of hours — before the end," wrote the Mail's diplomatic correspondent, Wilmot Broadbent, quoting the unidentified official.

London Times First to Report.

The London Sunday Times was quoted as saying its political correspondent had learned from information that "Germany may cease fighting during the next 10 days."

From San Francisco The Associated Press reported at 1:47 p.m. (E.W.T.) that it was understood messages looking toward a surrender were under way at that time.

The Associated Press reported at 3:09 p.m. (E.W.T.) that the ultimatum had been delivered to the German radio at 12:32 p.m. on the same high source as the first. The broadcast, in accordance with the ultimatum was expected hourly.

Then, at 7:56 p.m., Sen. Connally—at that time declining to report on the Associated Press quoted as saying Germany had surrendered—said that an unconditional surrender was expected "momentarily", and that when Eisenhower.

Teaches Off Stressed

Until what the news that touched off the stampede of rumors could not also precipitated a vain hunt for confirmation in the capital and created 48 headquarters in Paris. Many localities reported the "end" in advance, although in the main the headlines reflected caution.

Frankfurt went to the Wide Horizons at 10 p.m.

From San Francisco, at 8.41 p.m., came word that a second high American official had been delegated to carry out his name—said he would not be identified—and that the sign out by Sen. Connally.

Paris Radio, at 11 p.m., that headquarters was without knowledge of a surrender and that Marshal Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had said all was quite as 10 Downing Street.

President Truman ended the brief rumor period at 9.36 p.m. that the report was "unfounded".

SIGNS

First Canadian Army troops in northern Holland were reported to have gone for a few stragglers and pushed north across a railroad running from Zwolle to Meppel, Canada's farthest point.

The German defence line protecting Emden and Wilhelmshaven was weakened considerably when Aurich had been turned at its right anchor, William Rose, Canadian Press war correspondent, reported. Aurich is 12 miles from Emden.

The U. S. 9th Army opposite Berlin was barely 11 miles from the Elbe River bridgehead. Zerbst the British Nearing Boundary

Meanwhile, the U. S. 3rd Army on the 9th Army's left was reported expanding its Elbe River bridgehead to points 20 miles south of Dessau, a Berlin report on the continent. Lt.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' troops reached Kralow and Krusen. At last report Zerbst, bridgehead was five miles to Northwest of Zeven, Tommies reached the outskirts of Bremervorde, due to the northwest.

The British crossing of the Elbe was at a point about 30 miles south of Lauenburg, capture of which would seal off the German garrison in Denmark. Those troops were driving north for a possible junction with Russian troops in Mecklenburg or White Russian Army, pushing west from the Baltic coast.

Instructions were given the British commander of recognition of Red Army units, one report said, and carriers flew the Union Jack for recognition purposes.

Near Brenner Pass

Those armies in the south outline into the German National Redoubt already were 2,746 feet high in the Brenner Pass, at captured Obermangan, site of the famous Fascist Playa. Little German villages 27 miles from Innsbruck, northern gateway to the Brenner Pass, itself 50 miles away on the Italian border.

The U. S. 7th Army had seized the beer hall in Munich, whence Hitler first tried to seize power.

The U. S. 10th Armored and 44th Divisions were at least three miles inside Austrian south of Fussen and closing on Innsbruck, a major traffic centre and capital of the Austrian Tyrol.
